CAUCUS TODAY FOR A MAYOR

CZAR'S ASHES ON U. S. ENVOY'S TRAIN 3 WEEKS

Now Rest in Family Vault Near Paris.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The disclosure by Gen. Janin, commander of the Czech legionnaires in Siberia after the war, that the ashes of Czar Nicholas II. of Russia and his family are in the Janin family vault near Paris completes the record of their strange wanderings up to date, according to Franklin Clarkin, former vice consul of the United States in Siberia.

Mr. Clarkin revealed today how at the downfall of Admiral Kolchak's government in Omsk the ashes and fragments of the murdered imperial family were unknowingly carried though hostile lines under the American flag, in an American consular train, on a roundabout secret transferal to Europe.

Consulate on Wheels.

Mr. Clarkin's account is as follows:

"For three years the American consulate had been on wheels, starting from Moscow—keeping on all receding fronts. As the front under bolshevik pressure was about to be moved again the consular train hitched on two engines, steamed up and took aboard American officials, nurses, and refugees and was ready to pull out.

"At our office in Harbin we watched dispatches by wire and radio anxiously, wondering whether the consular train would come safely through. From Tcheliabinsk eastward Siberia was spotty with revolt and Semyonoff's Cossacks, who had once attacked our train, were waiting to catch Kolchak in retreat. In three weeks a flash came that the rolling consulate and Americans picked up along the route had reached Irkutsk. Admiral Kolchak, following, was held up at Irkutsk, shot, and his four cars of gold sequestered by the revolution.

Cozy in Consul's Car.

"Another week and the American train drew into Harbin after dark, in weather 20 degrees below zero.

"It was cozy in the consul general's car; a roll-top desk, books, filing cases, an engraving of Washington, the flag, a department eagle, and a let-down table and chairs. Against a box under the table one pounded one's heels to start circulation.

"'Careful there, that might be dynamite,' we were cautioned. Odd baggage, it looked, roughly bound with ropes like an immigrant's trunk. After dinner we played poker at the table, the box interfering with our comfort.

Take Chest Away at Midnight.

"'Well, it's off my hands,' he announced with unaccustomed solemnity. 'That chest under my table. They took it away at midnight.'

"'Shipping it home?'

"'Home? Home is no more for that. Man, what do you think was in it?'

"'Sables for the daughter in Iowa and, of course, samovars.'

"'Kolchak sent it aboard. Nothing contraband, not even champagne, in it. He couldn't trust it to his trains and it would be an act of Christian grace if I took it. Gov. Horvath would call for it at Harbin. Well, Horvath's officers came for it and gazed at it, then at one another, then with peculiar deference at me. Four of them bore it out. One came back, saluted, and said:

"'You not know what you have brought? You have brought, excellency, all that is left of the czar and the imperial family of Russia!'

Sweep By in Pomp and Glory.

"After a grave moment the consul general went on:

"'And the last time I saw them I stood in the crowd at Riga while the czar and czarina swept by in all pomp and splendor. Now, six years after, unknown to me, invisible in a peasant's box under my table, they've been riding with me three weeks through the tragic land to which czars sent so many exiles. The last poor remnants of five centuries of Romanoff czars. A passage of earthly glory.'

"We had the official record of what had been found in the mine hole where they had been thrown. Czar, czarina, czarevitch, those pretty grand duchesses, nothing but ashes, scraps of dress, parts of bodies, shattered and burnt bone, a hatchet, the marriage finger of the czarina with the ring driven into it to hinder identification.

"Of this passage of earthly glory the next stage ended at Shanghai, and in 1921 we heard of the arrival of the ashes by ship at a small port on the Gulf of Trieste. Next, we heard of it in Rumania.

G. O. P. LEADERS PREDICT UNITY AT CONFERENCE

More Business Men Praise Snow Plan.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Republican leaders who expect to participate today in the caucus called by County Chairman Snow to unite all the independent elements of the party against the Thompson and Barrett forces were optimistic yesterday concerning the outlook for success.

Chairman Snow said that he had received scores of encouraging messages and those who are to be associated with him said they heard only warm commendation for the effort to produce a coalition candidate for "world's fair mayor."

This was due largely, it was said, to the fact that enthusiasm expressed generally in the loop on Wednesday when the conference plan was announced had spread throughout the city and brought words of approval from the outlying community centers as well as the central district.

Thompson's Hand Forced.

One support of arguments that the plan was going ahead effectively was seen in the fact that the Snow project forced Thompson's hand during the day. In an effort to offset the Snow-Deneen-Brundage caucus at the Palmer house he sent out telegrams to members of the county committee asking them to attend a meeting in his interests at the same hour in the Hotel Bismarck.

The names of twenty-seven ward committeemen were signed to the telegrams. Some of those whose names were attached said they had not been consulted in the matter. Nearly all of them have city hall jobs. Many of them represent small Democratic wards where they may be eliminated from politics by the expected redistricting ordinance.

Gathering of Pay Rollers.

Under these circumstances, Thompson's opponents said, his Bismarck meeting would be only a sideshow in contrast to the Palmer house meeting, the latter instead of being a gathering of pay rollers being an assembling of group leaders representing a majority of the Republican voters in the city.

These critics said that the only interest they felt in Thompson's counter move was that it showed he had been frightened into earlier action than he had contemplated. It is understood that he plans to have his pay roll meeting indorse him for mayor and to take steps for the calling of a meeting of the entire county committee later when he thinks he will be able to force an indorsement there.

Democrats Near Accord.

While this was the status of affairs in the war ridden Republican camp the Democrats were reported to be getting nearer and nearer to their goal of complete accord which would eliminate a primary battle and permit them to cross over into the Republican primary and throw strength to Thompson, whom they have picked as their easiest opponent.

It was reported that long continued conferences had almost perfected the agreement on County Chairman A. J. Cermak, now president of the county board, as the mayoralty entry. The report also was that there had been a general agreement on State Representative John M. Lee of the Eleventh district for city clerk and upon Municipal Judge Allegretti for the Superior bench, and that Ald. Edward J. Kaindl of the Thirty-fourth ward was in the lead for city treasurer.

Court Combines Elections.

The Illinois Supreme court during the day ruled favorably on the mandamus action of the Citizens' association asking that the Chicago election board be compelled to hold the mayoralty primary on Feb. 24—the same day as the aldermanic election—in order to save the taxpayers the double cost of two closely successive elections and prevent confusion threatened in the board's operations.

This change in date—the mayoralty primary having been set through a legislative slip-up for Feb. 17 originally—also changes the dates for filing mayoralty petitions. The first filing day now will be New Year's eve instead of Christmas eve as had been expected.

This gives the organizations more time to work out their problems and even if the Democrats are all set to go next week they probably will not start their fireworks until New Year's.

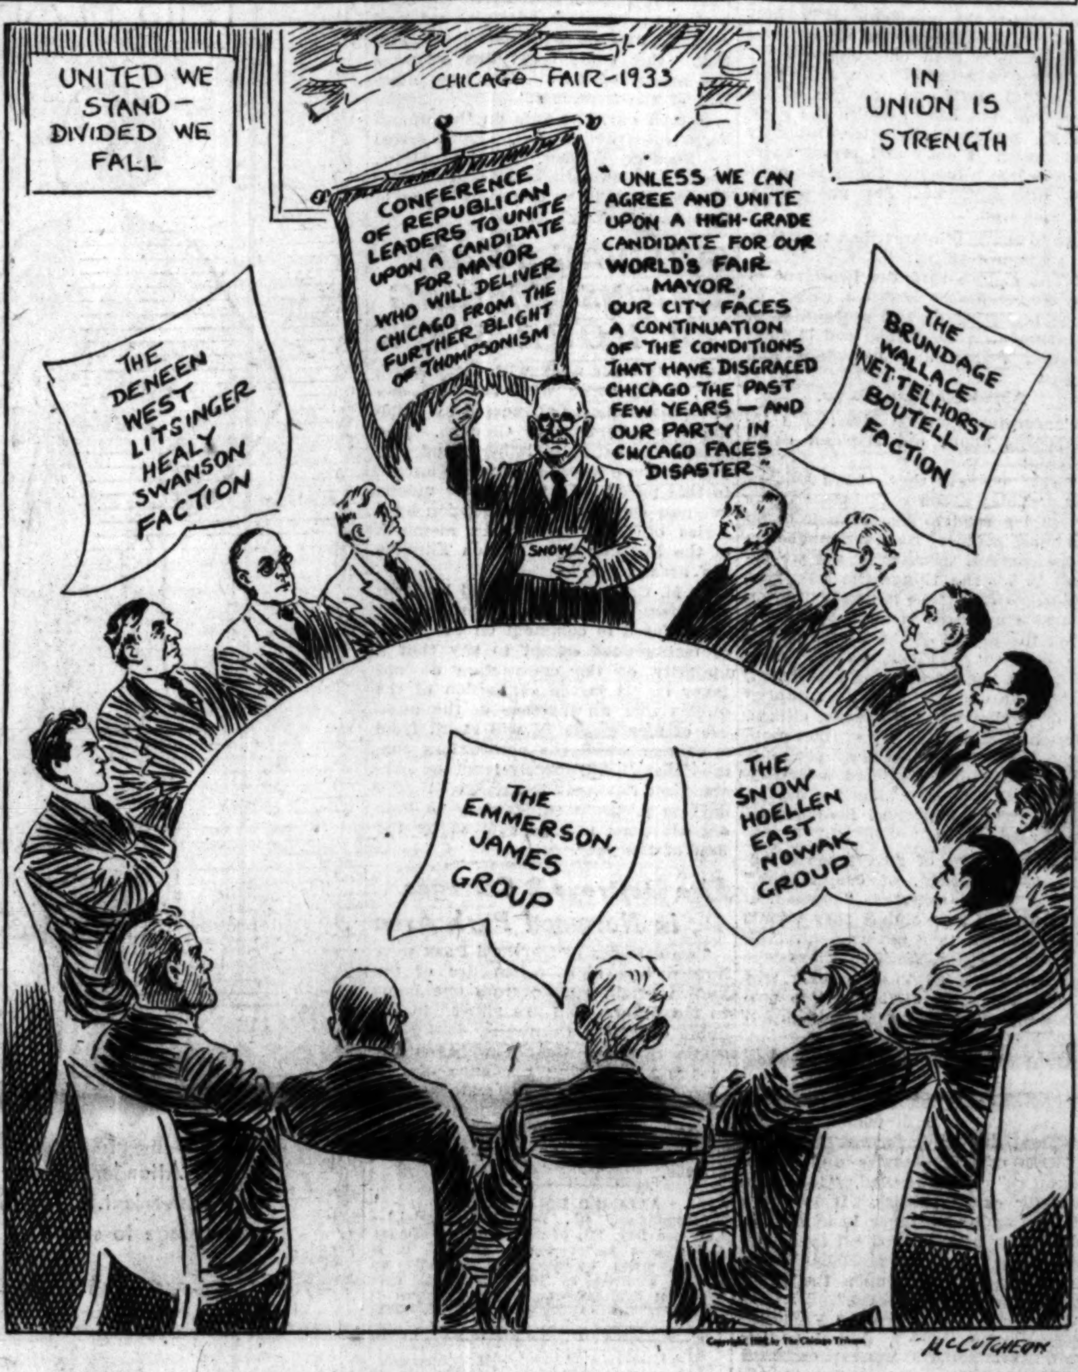
CHICAGO REPUBLICANS UNITE TO REDEEM THE CITY AND THE PARTY



BURGLAR SHOT BY POLICEMAN AS HE FLEES 'JOB'

Surprised as he was looting the home of Mrs. Theresa Ehrlich, 55 years old, at 5553 Glenwood avenue, George Dixon, 27 years old, of 923 Airbrie place, was shot when he attempted to flee from a back door by Frank Gill of the Summerdale police. The burglar's right elbow was shattered. He was taken to the Edgewater hospital and later lodged in the bridewell jail.

Mrs. Ehrlich, returning home with her sons, Louis, 36, a manufacturer, and Melvin J., 35, an attorney, was attracted by a light in Louis' bedroom, which she remembered was turned out when they left home. The sons notified Sommerdale police and a squad car responded.

The burglar fled out the back door, ignoring Gill's command to halt, and was shot. His loot, consisting of valuable jewelry and oriental rugs, was found on the floor of the bedroom.

$1 BOOK IS DONE; PUBLISHERS' ARE ABANDONING IDEA

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—That bright child of literature, the $1 book, has been left shivering on the doorstep.

It was learned today that all but one of the larger houses have abandoned the idea, originated last summer with loud trumpeting, that was to have brought gold to the publishing business and H. G. Wells within the reach of every one.

Simon & Schuster and Farrar & Rinehart, two of the firms which have been leaders in the cut rate plan, have retired from the scene. Now only Doubleday, Doran & Co. provide first editions at a dollar, but even this firm is limiting its dollar volumes to romance, the west, and history. Its philosophy is not so cheap.

JUDGE AND JURY SMILE AS WINE EXPERTS TEST IT

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The cheery popping of corks resounded in Supreme court today. The judge and jury looked on amusedly while several men sat at a long table and gravely drank wine. Attorneys did the pouring.

But it wasn't a social gathering. Charles Gass of Philadelphia was suing Benjamin Kitteridge, California wine dealer, for the return of $143,750 on 71,875 gallons of California sherry. Gass charges was defective.

No decision was reached about the quality of the wine.

Electric Chair for Capone Is Plea of Lyle

If Al Capone is ever haled into court on the vagrancy warrant which has been unserved in the hands of authorities for two months or more determined effort will be made to send him to the electric chair as the alleged murderer of two men, one of them "Big Jim" Colosimo, vice lord. This threat was made last night by Judge John H. Lyle of the Felony court in an address before the Chicago safety council at the Hotel La Salle.

"We will send Capone to the chair if it is possible to do so," asserted the judge. "He deserves to die; he has no right to live."

Gangsters Peril 1933 Fair.

Judge Lyle, while extemporizing mainly on Capone, turned his oral guns on other deficiencies which, he charged, permitted the existence of lawlessness. A reorganization of city government, particularly of the police department, was imperative, he asserted. The World's Fair of 1933 will be a failure, he added, unless the gangsters are exterminated and unless invitations are sent out over a signature which would merit respect.

Concerning Capone, Judge Lyle declared an attempt would be made to link him with the slaying in 1920 of Colosimo and with the killing of a man at Wabash avenue and 23d street. Although no name was mentioned, reference was apparently made to the murder of Joe Howard. The assassination of Colosimo, said the judge, was "Capone's" ten strike."

Calls Capone a Reptile.

"Capone has become almost a mythical being in Chicago," Judge Lyle went on. "He is not a myth but a reptile. He is more than a concentrated crime wave. He is real and powerful political force. He sent one of his men to the legislature at the last election when a Democrat was crowded from the field. He has one mouthpiece in congress and another in the city council. Capone has no right to live. He deserves to die and he will if we can help. He must go both as a criminal force and a political force. It is freely rumored, but has never been proved, that he made his ten strike here by murdering Colosimo."

Judge Lyle struck at the alleged failure of local government to cope with conditions. The city has a right, he said, to protection against gangsters, racketeers and their fellows.

Should Reorganize City.

"There is no reason why the city government should not be reorganized," he said. "A chief of police who is given a free hand under civil service will put the gangsters on the run. We have 98 judges, 750 bailiffs and clerks, 650 deputies, and 5,000 policemen. The trouble is not in the law but in the machinery and in the men who make the machinery work, and I think that if we wanted to we could stamp out a couple of gangs such as are headed by Al Capone and Bugs Moran. It is a different attitude on the part of judges and court attachés that is needed."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ROME, Dec. 18.—The American crisis in October of last year was declared the crucial point in the world economic crisis by Premier Mussolini in a speech before the senate tonight. Before that fateful month, said Il Duce, everybody seemed to believe that the United States was the only haven in the stormy economic world, but on October, 1929, "the American crisis broke out unexpectedly and exploded like a bomb."

Premier Mussolini was defending his cuts of 12½ per cent in the salaries of state officials whom he said should be the first to be willing to do their part for their country. During the course of his speech he admitted that a surplus of approximately $3,400,000 in the Italian budget had become a deficit of a little over $47,000,000 since the crisis.

"Deficit Not Grave."

"Such a deficit is not grave, like a lost battle, like the cession of territory, or a national catastrophe," he said. "It is a thing extremely serious, however, which imposes on the government the duty of converging all its attention upon a recovery, and imposes on citizens, including the senators, the duty not to put forward continually demands for new expenses for which we must find revenue—which signifies taxes."

The burden of the financial crisis, continued Il Duce, was borne by the people, whose losses by the failures of small banks amounted to over $50,000,000.

"The closing of tellers' windows," he said, "coincided with the opening of prison gates for many bank directors."

Bans U. S. Emigration.

The government did more, he added. It reversed its emigration policies by granting permissions to release passports to all those asking for them in their hope of finding a paradise abroad, but not to the United States.

"It is strange that nobody availed himself of the permission to emigrate to Russia," Il Duce said, "and those who emigrated elsewhere found that Italy, after all, was not a hell, since measures taken by the home government assured them of work here, while they found unemployment in other countries."

Italy could not withhold payment of interest on the public debt, Il Duce pointed out, and neither could it reduce military expenditures, "because the nation cannot think of abolishing indispensable defenses while the rest of the world talks peace and prepares feverishly for war."

Belittles War Treaties.

Referring to the economic crisis holding Europe in its grip, he declared that "nobody could think that treaties made in 1919 and 1920 could last forever."

"For us poor provincials of old Europe," he said, "the explosion was a great surprise. We remained shaken and confounded like the world at announcement of the death of Napoleon."

"Everybody knows by memory," the duce pursued, "the things which are now commonplaces—there was an automobile for every eight inhabitants, a radio for every four, a telephone for every three.

"Everybody played the market. As the shares went up, everybody having bought one at twenty sold it at a hundred and with it bought an automobile, radio or telephone, or made a trip to Europe.

Points to U. S. Soup Lines.

"All that was marvelous. Then we had a series of black, blackest days. Shares lose 20, 30, 50 per cent of their value. That crisis isn't yet cleaned up, the black days have been following one another, and instead of prosperity there are lines of those waiting for bread and soup in the great cities of the United States.

"But Italy will survive even this crisis," he declared. "If the Italian people remain faithful they will always be masters of the future."

Forger Operates in Cell; Suspend 3 Prison Guards

Thomaston, Me., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Three guards in the state prison here have been suspended as a result of the discovery that Joseph Maltais, noted forger of New Hampshire, who is doing a four year term for forgery, has been conducting a wholesale forgery business while behind the bars. Maltais flooded seaboard cities with letters ordering goods to be delivered to the prison. A Philadelphia firm, Stearns & Co., delivered some rugs and chairs to an astounded fellow convict of Maltais on one of Maltais' clever orders. The guards say they have been innocent dupes. They have relayed Maltais' letters along. The police say that during his career, "inside and outside," Maltais has collected $30,000 on forged orders.

SENATE, HOUSE YIELD; AGREE ON COMPROMISE

Action Expected in Capital Today.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—President Hoover won decisively today in both the senate and house.

The senate wilted in its opposition to the granting of discretionary power to the President in the 116 million dollar emergency construction bill.

The house passed the administration drought relief loan bill, substituting it for the senate bill opposed by the President.

Conferees of the senate and house tonight reached an agreement on a compromise bill for the appropriation of $45,000,000 for loans for seed, feed, fertilizer and tractor fuel to farmers in the drought stricken area.

This total is midway between the $30,000,000 in the house bill and the $60,000,000 in the senate bill.

Moot Section Eliminated.

The authorization for loans for food in the senate bill, which was the particular target of President Hoover and Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde, was eliminated. The language of the house bill was broadened slightly to permit loans to be made "for such other purposes incident to crop production as may be prescribed by the secretary of agriculture."

As construed by the conferees the insertion of the word "incident" in the house bill language would enable the secretary of agriculture, in an emergency case, to make loans for food.

The compromise agreement, which was unanimous, was understood to be highly satisfactory to President Hoover. Under the plans of the leaders, the drought relief conference report will be rushed through both houses tomorrow. Little, if any, opposition is expected.

Conferees Meet Today.

Senate and house conferees on the emergency construction bill will meet tomorrow and are expected to adjust differences in senate and house bills in a manner that will be in harmony with the administration program.

Unless there is an unexpected hitch, the construction bill conference report will be approved by both houses in time to permit congress to adjourn on Saturday for a two weeks' recess over the holidays.

As matters now stand, President Hoover, despite the attacks upon him and reverses of the last two weeks, will obtain enactment of his unemployment and drought relief in a form substantially in harmony with his original recommendations.

The senate appeared in a chastened mood today. It reversed its former action and, by a vote of 42 to 39, receded from its amendment to the emergency construction bill, taking away all discretionary authority from the President.

Glenn Defends Hoover.

This action came after Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.] had made a vigorous defense of the President and after Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.], chairman of the appropriations committee, and Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], a minority member of the same committee, had warned that insistence upon the senate amendment would mean a deadlock between the two houses and failure of the legislation.

The language of the house bill, which the senate, in effect, voted back in, provided that the sums appropriated for specified purposes "shall be available interchangeably for expenditure on the objects named in this act upon order of the President."

Retention of this provision has been held by the President to be important as a means of providing flexibility and to insure a maximum of relief to the unemployment situation.

Seven Democrats Back Motion.

The 42 voting for a motion by Senator Jones to recede from the senate amendment striking out the house interchangeability provision included 35 Republicans and 7 Democrats. The 39 against it included 11 Republicans, chiefly of the radical group; 27 Democrats and one Farmer-Laborite. The Democrats who saved the day for the administration by supporting the Jones motion were Senators Glass, A. W. Barkley [Ky.], E. S. Broussard and J. E. Ransdell [La.], Duncan Fletcher [Fla.], F. M. Simmons [N. C.], and Thomas J. Walsh [Mont.].

The Republicans voting in the negative were Senators Robert M. La Follette and John J. Blaine [Wis.], S. W. Brookhart [Ia.], Lynn J. Frazier and Gerald P. Nye [N. D.], George W. Norris and R. B. Howell [Neb.], Hiram Johnson [Cal.], Bronson Cutting [N. M.], William E. Borah [Idaho], and W. B. Pine [Okla.].

Agreement Is Expected.

As a result of the senate's action the conferees tomorrow will be able to agree on elimination of the senate amendment, this being one of four amendments on which final agreements were not reported.

The senate, without a roll call, instructed the conferees to insist upon the Couzens amendment with an understanding that senators would be satisfied with acceptance of a portion of it requiring the highest prevailing wages to be paid by contractors on government work. Another part of the amendment provided for employment of local labor.

The conferees, besides adjusting the controversy involving the Couzens amendment, also must deal with amendments relating to road funds for the states of Georgia and Alabama which the senate yesterday insisted upon. Other amendments in the senate bill were disposed of in a partial conference report submitted earlier in the week.

House Passes Loan Bill.

The house passed the drought relief loan bill by a vote of 359 to 6. The real test of strength, however, came on a motion for substitution of the house committee bill for the bill as passed by the senate. This motion was carried on a roll call by a vote of 226 to 146. This action meant substitution of the $30,000,000 bill, minus food loans, for the senate's $60,000,000 bill.

While in committee of the whole, the house, by a rising vote of 105 to 139, rejected a motion by Representative Marvin Jones [Dem., Tex.] to amend the house committee bill by substituting $60,000,000 for $30,000,000. The same motion was rejected in a vote by tellers by a vote of 133 to 189.

In the roll call on substitution of the house committee bill, seven Democrats voted with the Republicans in the affirmative, while 16 Republicans, including the Wisconsin radicals, and one Farmer-Labor member, voted with the Democrats in the negative.

SUPREME COURT STAYS MANDATE IN EXPERTS' CASE

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.] — The State Supreme court today stayed the mandate in the suit of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE against Mayor Thompson, George F. Harding, and others. The announcement in the case was read by Justice Warren Orr of Carthage, who wrote the original opinion which reversed the judgment of the Circuit court of Cook county. The case now goes over until the February term of court. The announcement of Justice Orr follows:

"The present motion, together with fourteen pages of suggestions, was filed so near the end of the term that on account of the length of the record in this case it cannot receive proper consideration without impeding other work of the court. For this reason the motion of the appellee to stay the mandate and to allow time to file additional suggestions will be granted. Appellee is allowed until Jan. 10, 1931, to file additional suggestions and appellants are allowed until Feb. 1, 1931, to file counter suggestions."

SPECIAL GRAND JURY PLEA WILL BE FILED TODAY

The petition asking the appointment of a special grand jury in January to investigate the police department is to be filed today before Chief Justice McGoorty of the Criminal court. The petition was prepared yesterday by Assistant State's Attorneys William A. Rittenhouse and John Holman.

It was indicated that the special jury or extra jury, as it is called by State's Attorney Swanson, will not be confined to police matters, but will also be used to delve into bail bond frauds and racketeering. The request for the special jury was made by the November grand jury.

GLENN DEFENDS HOOVER AGAINST SENATE CRITICS

Calls McKellar Attacks Cheap Politics.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—It took oratorical fire to purge the senate of dawdling obstructionism, and Senator Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.] furnished that fire today with the one rousing defense of President Hoover, the one thumping attack on recalcitrant tactics, which has come from the regular Republican ranks since the fight between the President and the senate began more than a week ago.

The Illinois senator struck back at Senator Kenneth McKellar [Dem., Tenn.], the loudest of the President's critics. He termed the Tennesseean's insinuations concerning Mr. Hoover's expenditure of the $100,000,000 European relief fund in 1919 "unwarranted, unjustified, and unworthy to be made upon the floor of the United States senate."

The President was pictured by Senator Glenn as a heroic servant to his country and to humanity. The propitiatory speech of Senator James E. Watson [Rep., Ind.] a few days ago was pale by comparison.

Then he came to Senator McKellar's latest subject of attack:

"If there ever was a time when party lines should be disregarded it is now," Senator Glenn declared. "But instead of that, one senator after another, and particularly the senator from Tennessee, repeatedly makes bitter personal attacks on the President. They would rather play partisan politics than to deal with human suffering.

Hoover Satisfied Wilson.

"When America felt it was its duty to go to the relief of the suffering peoples of the world, Hoover was the man who was entrusted with that task. Now, as a result of the greatest administration in the interest of human suffering has ever been known, he is charged as a misappropriator of public funds, in effect, as an embezzler of funds which should have gone to starving children and women and invalids.

"Woodrow Wilson, on whom the duty of reporting to congress really devolved, was satisfied with the accounting.

"It comes now, years after the fund has been expended, when the man in whose final charge it rested lies in his tomb, for a man to rise up on the floor of the senate and condemn a President of the United States. Why? Because he is an embezzler? No. Because he has failed to account? No. Because he is a Republican President, and that is the only reason."

Then the senator spoke of the assistance President Hoover, while secretary of commerce, had brought to Senator McKellar's own state during the Mississippi flood. He reviewed the world situation of economic and social disorder.

Twice He Defends President.

Senator Glenn took a place on the records tonight as the senator who twice, now, has defended the President and the administration policy when others held lukewarm and silent; for it was he who came forward during the last session with the only energetic utterances during the attacks on the nomination of Charles Evans Hughes for chief justice of the Supreme court.

Senator Glenn reviewed the charges and hints of charges that Senator McKellar had uttered against President Hoover: the inferences of scandal concerning the European relief fund; the assertion that President Hoover had violated official propriety by using a battleship on his South American trip as President elect; the allegation that United States marines were being improperly used in building the presidential camp on the Rapidan.

Senator McKellar had begun discussion of the European relief fund yesterday. He insisted on finishing his speech this morning. It was then that Senator Glenn swung into action.

Hoped for an Apology.

"I call the senate's attention to the seriousness and impropriety of the statements made by Senator McKellar," he began. "I thought at first that he made them on the impulse of the moment and that after reflection he would see fit to make amends and apologize to the President. It is plain, however, that his bitter vituperative attacks have been contemplated.

"They have not concerned the governmental views and practices of the President, but have assailed the President's personal character, integrity and honor. I deny and resent these attacks which touch not only the present President, but the presidential office as well."

As to the South American trip, Senator Glenn declared:

"The charge that the President of the United States began a career of utter disregard of the proprieties of government is unjustified and is made through malice and ignorance and spite."

About Rapidan Camp.

Concerning Senator McKellar's insinuations about the Rapidan camp he said:

"This charge, that the President has probably taken government funds to build a road to his summer camp is almost insane. Be we Republicans or Democrats, whether or not we believe in all the things the President has done—and there is disaffection on this side as there is on the other—I think the people of the United States are entitled to know, as we know here, that instead of being a poltroon, a thief, an embezzler, a misappropriator of public funds, a disloyal citizen, no man in all the history of the republic holding that highest of all positions in the world has rendered more sincere, more unselfish, more unfailing service than the present President of the United States.

"At this time of governmental unrest, of revolution, of communism," Senator Glenn asserted, "instead of teaching our people that they should have faith in their government, faith in their congress, faith in those who have been elected in a regular way to administer the affairs of this government, they attack and condemn our leaders upon this floor.

"If it were not an act of ignorance, it would be almost an act of treason."

In glowing terms he described the selfless devotion with which, he said, President Hoover performed his duties.

"This day of disaster and unemployment," he concluded, "is not a time for cheap politics. It is not a time to seek newspaper headlines, so that it can be broadcast all over Tennessee that Senator McKellar made another great attack upon the President of the United States."

Later in the day Senator Frederick Steiwer [Rep., Ore.], declaring that the European relief administration under Hoover was "too fine a thing to be traduced and maligned here in the senate," introduced treasury department figures which showed that, though no formal report had been made to congress, the $100,000,000 fund had been fully accounted for to the controller of the treasury.

Glass Says Word for Hoover.

And Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.], secretary of the treasury under President Wilson, stated that the fund had been honestly administered and audited, and he deprecated the fact that "this controversy has assumed the aspect of questioning the integrity of the President."

It took only the vote on the emergency construction bill, characterized by Senator Wesley L. Jones [Rep., Wash.] as essentially a vote of confidence, to end the day very much in President Hoover's favor.

WASHINGTON NOTES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Samuel R. McKelvie, member of the farm board and former governor of Nebraska, was summoned by Chairman Nye to appear tomorrow before the senate campaign funds committee to testify regarding his contributions to the last Nebraska Republican campaign.

The senate confirmed Harry J. Anslinger of Pennsylvania as commissioner of the bureau of narcotics; Fred S. Pulver, United States marshal eastern district of New York, and Lawrence A. Glenn of Illinois and Lieut. Col. George R. Spalding, corps of engineers, as members of the Mississippi river commission.

The Heflin resolution calling upon the secretary of the treasury for a report on the amount of taxes paid by the New York Stock exchange and its members in connection with stock transactions from 1919-1930 was passed by the senate.

A bill to provide congressional permission for the state of Illinois to construct a free highway bridge across Little Calumet river on South Halsted and 130th streets, Chicago, was introduced by Representative Sproul.

Purchase of land for migratory game and bird refugees in Florida, California, North Carolina, and Nebraska was authorized by the migratory bird conservation commission. The land involved aggregates 73,780 acres and will cost the government an average of $5.28 per acre.

BUILDING TRADE UNIONS SEEKING 40 HOUR WEEK

A forty hour week with forty hours pay, doing away with the half day Saturday, is being advocated by building trades unions in Chicago. The plasterers, painters, lathers, and carpenters have already definitely agreed to this policy, and most other unions are now considering its adoption by a series of conferences with members of the Building Construction Employers' association.

E. M. Craig, secretary and business manager of the association, yesterday refused to comment on the series of conferences except to say that a majority of the contractors do not favor it. It is the contention of the unions that an increase in the number of men employed will result from a change while the contractors contend that it will merely lengthen construction time. It is expected that a definite program satisfactory to both organizations will be evolved by the first of the year.

Fire Destroys 2 Cottages in Norwood Park Area

Two cottages in Norwood Park were burned last night when fire of unknown origin spread from one home to the other. The fire started in the home of Alfred Cornwells, 4236 Newcastle avenue. Sparks were carried to the neighboring residence of Joseph Oertel at 4240 Newcastle avenue. Families of both men managed to flee safely and save some of their belongings. Loss was estimated at $10,000.

ALLEGED HOLDUP SHOT.

Bloomington, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Layrence Day, 23, of Lytleville, died today following a bullet wound received, it is alleged, when he attempted to hold up Chester Fentress of Randolph. Both men shot, but Fentress' wound is not serious.

SWANSON CALLS MELROSE PARK BOARD TO QUIZ

Members of the village board of Melrose Park were yesterday summoned to a conference this afternoon with State's Attorney Swanson and Sheriff William D. Meyering. The conference will be held in the county building office of the state's attorney. The purpose is to question the suburban officials regarding vice and crime conditions.

The recent rape case in which it is charged three Melrose Park policemen failed to make arrests of men charged with the crime is the reason for calling the officials into the prosecutor's office. It is charged that the victim told the police of the attack and that they failed to take the culprits into custody. Rocco Passarelli, former chief of police of the village, is among the policemen complained about.

"We intend to have some coöperation from the police departments of the villages in the county or we will know the reason why," was the joint statement issued by the prosecutor and the sheriff following a meeting yesterday.

Protest Change in Name of Caldwell Forest Preserve

A resolution protesting the proposal that the name of Caldwell-Sauganash forest preserve be changed to the John F. Smulski preserve was adopted yesterday by the conservation council of Chicago, meeting in the Morrison hotel. The resolution was sent to the Northwest Federation of Improvement clubs, which has been asked to support an effort to have the forest preserve board reconsider the action taken last August.

WOLFE BLAMES EMPLOYES IN CONTRACT QUIZ

Pleads Ignorance; Says He Hires Spy.

Richard W. Wolfe, commissioner of public works, in defending himself yesterday before the council committee on efficiency, economy and rehabilitation against charges of irregularities in the contract for the Wabash avenue bridge approach, said employés in his department were responsible for acts now under investigation.

Wolfe pleaded ignorance of additional work done under the contract, a matter which the aldermen are investigating. He said a contractor had gone ahead with work without his permission and he excused it as an "old practice"; he testified that his name had been signed to vouchers for the payment of nearly $200,000 by another official and wound up by telling the aldermen that he has a secret agency of his own watching "things" in the department.

"His detectives didn't catch the matter that the committee is investigating," commented Ald. Arthur F. Albert [43d].

Reject Low Bid on Contract.

Under the contract with the Ketler-Elliott company the city is paying $10 a cubic foot for certain caisson excavation after the low bid of $2 by the E. J. Albrecht company was rejected.

With extra work the difference in prices of the two companies totaled $161,000. That amount, Ald. Albert charged, has been "lost, strayed or stolen."

Wolfe appeared before the committee in response to a third summons, having failed to respond at previous sessions. As he testified, James W. Breen, first assistant corporation counsel, sat beside him as a legal guide. In other parts of the room were Wolfe's two secretaries.

Reads Prepared Statement.

Several times while being questioned by Ald. Albert and John A. Massen [48th], Wolfe sought to get to his feet to answer, but he was restrained by Breen.

In a prepared statement Wolfe said his attention had not been called to vouchers for the additional work until about Oct. 1. The statement was characterized as "irrevelent" by Ald. Albert.

"This additional work," the statement read, "was done entirely without my knowledge, consent or approval.

"When Mr. Moody [Joseph Moody, $1,000 a year consulting engineer to Wolfe] advised me of this additional work I ordered the vouchers canceled at once, and gave directions that no further vouchers for additional work be issued without my knowledge. I bitterly censured Mr. Moody."

Advised "to Cut Red Tape."

"If there was nothing wrong what occasion was there for censuring Moody or any one else?" asked Ald. Massen.

"I should have been advised," replied Wolfe. "I am sorry this has arisen. I am disappointed. I was told that I was too cautious and should cut out the red tape."

Questioned further by Ald. Massen about letting work proceed before the contract was signed in disregard of the law, Wolfe said:

"The contractor went ahead without authority from me. When I cut the red tape and a mistake is made then they want to cut my throat.

Sees "a Lot of Profit."

An argument over the vouchers for the extra work was precipitated after Ald. James H. Taylor had made the statement that the Ketler-Elliott company, in the opinion of the committee, had made a $70,000 profit on the caissons without doing any work, and that the subcontractor, the W. J. Newman company, presumably also had made a profit, which, Ald. Taylor said, is a "lot of profit on a $200,000 job."

"Wolfe denies that he approved the vouchers," declared Breen. Taking the vouchers, which bore Wolfe's name, Ald. Albert asked Wolfe if the signature was his.

"No," replied Wolfe. "That is Edward Moore's writing. He signed both of them." Moore is Thompson's deputy commissioner of public works.

"You said you would have caught this," stated Ald. Massen. "If Moore can sign your name to the vouchers, how would you have caught it?"

"Moody would have caught it," Wolfe answered. "He is my watchdog. Somebody would get on to it."

"Yes, after the money had been paid, if Controller Schmidt hadn't stopped payment!" shouted Ald. Albert.

Wolfe Hires Own Detectives.

In questioning Moody, Ald. Albert brought out that the engineer could not have told what was spent without seeing the vouchers, and therefore could not advise Wolfe about the payments. In answer to questions relative to his methods of watching work Moody said:

"I can't say what would have been done in this particular case. That is all in the past. I am in contact with the bureau heads and the controller's office."

"It is a serious matter," responded Albert. "There is no way for Moody to catch these things."

"Let me tell you, alderman," said Wolfe, "that I have a secret agency of my own. I employ detectives of my own to watch things, at my own expense."

As the committee adjourned the aldermen were comparing the reports of the city engineer on water found in the caissons with the reports made by the subcontractor. The reports, according to Ald. Massen, do not show the presence of water in 56 of the 73 caissons sunk. Newman had testified previously that he had charged the Ketler-Elliott company over $90,000 above the unit price for pumping water, digging out bowlders and quicksand, and for other obstructions.

Sues for Income Tax Rebate

Sues for Tax Cut

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The suit of Mrs. Dorothy Caruso Ingram, widow of Enrico Caruso, to recover approximately $60,000 from the federal government in income and excess profits taxes levied against the estate of the singer, came to trial before Judge Robert P. Petterson in the United States district court today.

Shortly after the death of Caruso in 1921, the late Frank K. Bowers, who was then collector of internal revenue, made an examination of the singer's income tax returns for 1918, 1919 and 1920. He discovered that Caruso's income from the sale of his records in foreign countries had not been included in the report.

Accordingly an additional levy for the three years totaling slightly over $40,000 was charged against the estate and paid by the widow under protest. The suit today is for the recovery of this amount plus interest.

Government figures presented by Assistant United States Attorney Schulman showed Caruso's income in 1918 from the Metropolitan Opera company and concerts to be $254,950 and his royalties from the Victor Talking Machine company to be $103,273. In 1919 his income was $299,500 and his royalties $67,461, and in 1920 his income was $220,400 and his royalties from records amounted to $165,543.

HAVANA IN PANIC; PLOTTERS THROW SEVERAL BOMBS

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

HAVANA, Dec. 18.—The explosion of several small bombs caused a panic here today. Two bombs exploded in the rear of the sanitation department building, causing damage but injuring no one. Another bomb exploded when a street car passed over it. Nobody was hurt.

Plans for the destruction by dynamite of the city aqueduct were frustrated today by Captain of Policia Loyanz del Castillo. He arrested an unidentified communist placing high explosive bombs beneath the aqueduct, through which flows Havana's water supply from Vento springs, nineteen miles away. Special precautionary measures have been taken by the government to insure protection against similar plots. Both nationalists and communists are blamed.

The discovery by secret police of a plot at Guines, near Havana, caused the arrest of a large number of prominent agitators, professional men and students. They are accused of planning to wreck the lighting system of Guines. More arrests are expected tomorrow.

WARD RETURNS HOME; SILENT ON KIDNAPING

James Ward, reputed beer and alky dealer of Chicago Heights, supposedly kidnaped Saturday for $50,000 ransom, returned to his home there yesterday morning, according to neighbors and the police. He arrived in a small sedan, accompanied by his wife, who had met him outside of town.

The police of Chicago Heights remained away from Ward's home all day, and Maj. Harry B. Stafford, chief of police, said he had received no information as to what transpired between Ward and the alleged kidnapers. It was learned in other quarters that Ward was threatened with death if he talked.

Ward remained sequestered in his home. He was seized last Saturday night as he stepped out to get his automobile. It was the second time Ward had been kidnaped. The first was in October of 1927, when he was held for two days for $20,000 ransom.

$50,000 Damage Caused by Fire in Factory

A fire which last evening destroyed a large part of the supplies and finished products of the Martha Washington Manufacturing company at 1006 West 21st street was estimated to have caused $50,000 damage. The concern makes lamps, shades, and fixtures. The fire is believed to have started in a pile of waste paper.

CHICAGO KILLS 63 OUTLAWS IN 1930 CRIME WAR

Outnumber Slain Police Almost 6 to 1.

Four bodies lay on slabs at the county morgue yesterday. Four young men had been shot to death, all while committing robberies. Acting Police Commissioner Alcock jotted down the figures and then issued this table of activities to date during 1930:

Robbers killed by policemen	27
Burglars killed by policemen	7
Robbers killed by citizens	16
Burglars killed by citizens	13
Total of slain criminals	63

Then the acting commissioner listed the number of policemen killed during 1930 as follows:

Killed by burglars	1
Killed by suspects	1
Killed by robbers	4
Killed by citizens resisting arrest	3
Killed and not classified	2
Total of policemen killed	11

Sees a Lesson for Criminals.

The figures were heartening to Alcock who said the police department is showing its mettle, the citizenry is on guard, and an object lesson is being given to the criminally inclined.

"At least 63 bandits will trouble Chicago no more," he commented. "The score is 63 criminals killed to 11 policemen killed. The 11 policemen are a sad loss, but like soldiers they gave their lives in defense of their fellow citizens—the men, women and children of Chicago."

But Alcock had more than words for the policemen who he said have contributed to a splendid record during the last month. He gave extra compensation, in most cases $300 a year, to 28 policemen for heroic or efficient service.

Points to Month's Record.

The acting commissioner ended his statement by declaring that 278 robberies have been cleared up, identifications made and complaints signed in each case, since Nov. 17, 1930.

"This, of course," he said, "is but a small percentage of the total number of arrests made, or the total number of crimes cleared up during this period. Since Nov. 17, 1930, 18 homicides have been committed in Chicago, of which 15 have been solved and 3 remain unsolved. In the same time 156 persons have been arrested and charged with carrying revolvers."

The 28 policemen who were given increased pay are:

Lieuts. Thomas O'Hare, Albert Mikes and William V. Blaul; Sergt. Francis D. Corcoran, William S. Dwyer, Thomas Byrnes and James D. Fitzgerald, and Patrolmen Edouard Fontaine, Harry Saranow, John Hennessey, Patrick Gilligan, John A. Roza, Fred C. Knott, Ray Knopinsky, Louis Capparelli, Raymond Schlagel, Harry L. Larson, Lawrence Brown, Roderick Aylmer, John E. Spreitzer, Clifford Mansfield, Samuel Schiro, John F. McNamara, Harry P. Jensen, Arthur J. Nelson, Francis J. Finn, Samuel McSheffrey, and John Whedon.

Policeman on the Job.

One of the robbers whose bodies lay at the county morgue was killed by a policeman, two by citizens, and the fourth by railroad detectives.

The policeman, Michael Neary, at 3 o'clock Wednesday afternoon had been stationed in the rear of the Sarnoff-Irving Hat store at 14 West Van Buren street by Capt. Willard Malone of the central district. He was ordered to wait for holdup men and to shoot to kill.

This is the policy adopted by Capt. Malone to prevent robberies and stop criminal careers in the loop. On Monday it had resulted in the slaying of two robbers in a tearoom at 120 South Clark street, where Policeman Raymond Schlagel had been stationed. Schlagel killed both bandits.

Policeman Neary had been in the hat store six and a half hours on Wednesday when Joseph Shore, 35 years old, 1910 Roosevelt road, formerly an orchestra leader in Detroit, walked in and held up the manager, G. F. D'Asaro, 514 Cornelia avenue. Neary strode from the rear room and opened fire, placing four bullets in Shore and killing him.

Three Other Dead Robbers.

Two of the other three dead robbers at the county morgue also were slain on Wednesday night.

Henry Moguel, alias Henry Escalona, 21 years, also an orchestra leader, was shot to death by Richard H. Siebold, owner of the butcher shop at 3403 Southport avenue, which Moguel and a companion were attempting to rob. A coroner's jury found this killing to be justifiable homicide and extended thanks to Siebold, a former policeman.

Arthur A. Howard, 21 years old, 4114 North St. Louis avenue, was killed when he and four companions were leaving a restaurant at 1858 Throop street which they had just robbed of $320.

The body of Howard had three old bullet wounds. Howard's father testified before Deputy Coroner Frank Donoghue at the inquest that the youth had been in trouble several times, and had twice attempted suicide by shooting himself. His son had passed many bad checks and had been away from home for many months, the elder Howard said.

Fail to Determine Slayer.

Who shot Howard was not positively determined. The father offered the opinion that he shot himself when he saw he was about to be captured. Jerry Novotny, son of the restaurant owner, Joe Novotny, said he pointed a rifle at Howard, the last of the bandits in leaving the restaurant. When Novotny "covered" Howard, Martin Franta, 1901 South Racine avenue, leaped upon the bandit. Deputy Coroner Donoghue was satisfied that Howard was accidentally or intentionally killed with his own gun in the struggle with Franta or that one of the fleeing bandits, firing back, killed him.

Frank Bovay, 19 years old, a Mexican, of 1209 North 23d avenue, Melrose Park, was shot and fatally wounded by Sergt. Elmer Duffy and John Dildice, both detectives for the Indiana Harbor Belt Line railroad, early yesterday. Duffy and Dildice fired when they saw Bovay and Leonard Bartholome, 17 years old, also of 1209 North 23d avenue, in the railroad's yards in Melrose Park.

Apartment Burglar Shot.

Another law breaker was trapped last night in the apartment of Mrs. Theresa Ehrlich at 5553 Glenwood avenue and shot in the right arm by policemen. He identified himself as George Dixon, 27 years old, and said he lived in Airdrie place.

Mrs. Ehrlich and her sons, Louis, a food products dealer, and Melvin J., an attorney, were about to enter their home when they noticed a flashing light in the bedroom of Louis. They summoned police from the Summerdale station, and Sergts. Frank Gill and Tom Foley and their squads responded.

Policemen Edward Le Fevour and Robert Callahan entered the front door. Dixon dashed for the rear door, where he was shot down by Sergts. Foley and Gill. His right arm was broken and he was taken to the Bridewell hospital.

GUZIK VAGRANCY CASE TO BE PUT TO JURY TODAY

Arguments for State Are Begun by Prosecutor.

The Jack Guzik vagrancy case will go to the jury today.

This three days' trial of one of Chicago's "public enemies" has slowly brought into form a sort of vignette of the city's life where it shades off into the underworld, a half picture or border rather than a bold relief of conditions.

Assistant State's Attorney James A. Brown, who began the arguments to the jury last evening, said the trial had demonstrated the difficulties with which the state's attorney is confronted in "trying to clean up Chicago." He referred to the unwilling witnesses for the state. No one would expect Mike the Greek Potson, former manager for Big Jim Colosimo, to talk about Jack Guzik, but the state was disappointed in the attitude of some of its own police witnesses, who did not appear at all eager to hurt the Guzik case.

Much of the state's evidence is negative, Mr. Brown told the jurors, the positive evidence being that Guzik is a gambler. There was no denial of this by the defense, which was brief. Guzik was more eager to disprove the charge in the vagrancy complaint that he had failed to provide for his family in a lawful manner.

Tell of $40,000 House.

As to providing for them, it was shown by witnesses that he had bought them a $40,000 house at 7240 Luella avenue, near the home of State's Attorney Swanson. He had four automobiles for their use and paid the grocery and meat bills regularly. He had sent his son to a university and his daughter to a finishing school. The daughter, it was revealed, is married and has a baby, so that Guzik is a grandfather. He has lived at this eminently respectable address for seven years.

"What's wrong about that?" he asks in an undertone, for he does not choose to take the witness stand.

The answer of the state is that he made his money by unlawful means; that he always did from the old red light district days. But it is not shown, except negatively. The question for the jury is whether gambling constitutes vagrancy under the statute.

Between the acts in the trial Guzik calls for a scratch sheet and makes a few horse race bets, placed through a commissioner and over the telephone.

"And I won a couple today, too," he chuckles, for he makes no denial of his gambling. He objects to being called a "brothel keeper." It is brought out by testimony that Guzik has had little trouble with the police. It is testified that Sergt. James W. Coleman stopped Guzik and searched him a year ago near 22d street. The police knew very little about him, apparently, and the only thing the state got from them was that they never knew him to work at any lawful employment.

Clarence Converse, federal intelligence officer, who arrested Guzik on the income tax charge, said that Guzik begged him not to put handcuffs on him, as he was not a criminal.

"He said his only crime was gambling," testified Mr. Converse.

Guzik Investments Bared.

Two Guzik investments were brought into the case. One was a part ownership in the Midnight Frolics café on 22d street and another consisted of shares in the Hawthorne Kennel club. He took dividends of $36,000 from this club before it was closed as a nuisance. The shares were held in the name of Dr. David Omens, 1225 Independence boulevard, his family physician.

"What's wrong about me, anyway?" Guzik wanted to know of those near his table as witness after witness testified that they had seen him on the street, or at the races, or in a restaurant, all harmless things in themselves.

"There never was a man investigated as I have been in the last year," he whispered. "All sorts of detectives and reform organizations. And they never got a thing on me except the income tax conviction. Does it make any difference which side of the street I walk on?

"I bet on the horses and so do a million others. I know some judges that do. I eat at Colosimo's. What of it? I owned part of the Frolics and got dividends from the dog races. Anything wrong about that? Where do they get this vagrant stuff? I could buy and sell half these guys."

Policeman Is a Witness.

John M. Connolly, a policeman, said he had seen Guzik in a barber shop near the Lexington hotel once during the last few months.

Mike Potson, who now runs two restaurants, said he had known Guzik since "way back when." He referred to the days when he [Potson] ran a poolroom at 1938 Archer avenue.

"I never knew his business," he said.

Michael Morey, a policeman of the same district, said he saw Guzik walking in 22d street. Policeman Roy Van Herrick of the detective bureau, who had signed the complaint in the case, said he had investigated Guzik and did not know that he had any lawful employment.

That was about all except for the "provider" defense.

SUPREME COURT GRANTS GUNNER McGURN RETRIAL

Search Held Illegal; See Defeat for State.

$55,725 IN REWARDS.

Rewards totaling $55,725 are offered for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the slayer of Alfred Lingle. Of the $25,000 reward offered by The Tribune, $10,000 will be paid any person who will give confidential information identifying the slayer of Lingle. All information should be sent to the headquarters established by State's Attorney Swanson in room 503 Temple building, 77 West Washington street. Telephone State 3729.

Jack McGurn, public enemy and machine gunner for the Capone gang, was granted a new trial yesterday by the Illinois Supreme court on the charge of carrying concealed weapons, for which he was sentenced last June to serve a year in the county jail and pay a $300 fine.

The high court ruled that arresting policemen did not have a warrant when they seized McGurn in a taxicab and, searching him, found a .45 caliber loaded automatic pistol in the gangster's side pocket. Therefore, the Supreme court judges said, the arrest was illegal and no evidence could be submitted on the charge.

Sentenced Six Months Ago.

The sentence of McGurn six months ago was applauded by law enforcing agencies. State's Attorney Swanson complimented the jurors on their courage in finding McGurn guilty. The conviction was among the first in the anti-guntoting drive by the state's attorney. The Supreme court decision remands the case to the Criminal court for a new trial, but in view of the opinion concerning the legality of the arrest the case probably will not be tried again, it was said.

Reports of the trial last June related that McGurn lost his famous smile for the first time when the guilty verdict was read. The news from Cicero last night was that McGurn, out on bond pending the Supreme court decision, was smiling again.

Ponder Barker's Plea.

The Supreme court took under advisement the petition for a habeas corpus release of George [Red] Barker, another public enemy, who was returned recently to the state penitentiary to serve an unexpired prison sentence. The question at issue is whether Barker was paroled illegally, he having been convicted in Cook county and released on an order of a Peoria county judge.

Tony [Mops] Volpe, public enemy and Capone chief, who is awaiting deportation by the federal immigration bureau, appeared before Municipal Judge Samuel H. Trude on a charge of vagrancy yesterday. Because the state's attorney's office is busy with the vagrancy trial of Jack Guzik, the charge against Volpe was continued until Jan. 27.

There was momentary excitement in Judge John H. Lyle's court yesterday. A few minutes after Terry Druggan, public enemy, had been granted a continuance on charges of vagrancy until Jan. 14 and had walked out of court, the judge thought he had discovered that no bond had been scheduled. He issued a warrant for Druggan's arrest. The bond was later found and the warrant canceled.

Jury trials were demanded by Anthony [Red] Kissane and John Barry when they were arraigned on charges of disorderly conduct before Municipal Judge Leon Edelman. Their requests were granted, Judge Edelman raising their bonds to $5,000 each.

KILLS HIMSELF WITH GUN.

James Monro Love, 22 years old, shot and killed himself yesterday in the home of his parents at 7466 South Chicago avenue. He had been out of employment and was separated from his wife and child, the police said.

SLAYER TALKS

MISS VELMA COLTER.
[Associated Press Photo.]

Maryville, Mo., Dec. 18—(AP)—County Attorney Paul R. Jones announced tonight that Raymond Gunn, 30 year old Negro, had confessed he beat to death Miss Velma Colter, 19, teacher at the Garrett rural school, Tuesday night.

Gunn was arrested today by L. E. Atherton, member of the Maryville police force on circumstantial evidence.

Jones said Gunn was convicted here in 1925 on a statutory charge and served four years in Missouri penitentiary.

Miss Colter, for whom funeral services were held today, was found dead Tuesday night in the school. Clothing had been stripped from her body.

WOMAN HELPS BANDIT HOLD UP CIVIC THEATER

Gets Cash at Window as Thousands Pass.

"Two for Saturday, please," said a woman at the box office of the Civic theater in the Chicago Opera building last night as an introductory statement to a holdup that netted $200. A man with a gun in his hand was beside the woman, and Star Kriel, 415 Fullerton parkway, the ticket seller, was in front of the gun.

The box office where Kriel was selling tickets for the performances of Fritz Leiber and his Shakespearean players is at Wacker drive and Washington street, in the northeast corner of the opera building, a block and a half north of the Central police station. The time was 5:15 o'clock and countless thousands of loop workers were hurrying to the North Western and Union stations across the river and in automobiles, street cars and buses they were passing by.

Ordered to Hand Out Money.

The woman who asked in a sweet voice for tickets was described by Kriel as comely, 27 or thereabout, and wearing a raccoon coat. He turned to the ticket rack and she said "never mind." An about face by Kriel put the male bandit in his line of vision. The automatic pistol was poked through the window bars. Kriel was alone. The man, who spoke good English, who was well dressed, and who appeared calm and businesslike to Kriel, said "Hand out the money."

Kriel handed out a bundle of $1 bills. He quoted the bandit as then saying: "There's more, give it to me," and Kriel said he handed out the $5 bills from their compartment.

Message for Mr. Insull.

"Tell Insull I've got my dividends," the departing holdup man said to Kriel and the holdup woman said nothing. Samuel Insull, head of the Commonwealth Edison company and other public utilities and an internationally known financier, is the power behind the new opera building.

The business of selling tickets was going on as usual when a few minutes later Lieut. Louis Klatzco of the Central district made his appearance. A reënactment of the holdup showed that the woman had stood in a position to shield a view of her companion's gun pointing at Kriel from those on the sidewalk six feet away. A police message was broadcast giving the description of the couple.

HOOVER SOLVES 40 REQUESTS TO SPEAK BY RADIO ADDRESS

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—President Hoover has received 40 invitations to deliver Lincoln day speeches in as many places. He will use the radio and make the speech from the Lincoln study of the White House on the night of Feb. 12. It was there that President Lincoln signed the emancipation proclamation and where he held his cabinet meetings.

23 BOY SCOUTS ARE PROMOTED TO HIGHEST RANK

Twenty-three Boy Scouts became eagle scouts, the highest rank that may come to a Boy Scout, last night in a court of review at the headquarters at 9 West Washington street. The court was conducted by S. G. Gorsline, scout commissioner of Chicago, and his staff. The new promotions brought the number of scouts attaining the eagle rank during 1930 to 140, the largest number in any year. In order to become an eagle a scout must earn 21 merit badges, eleven of which are required, including first aid, life saving, civil government, personal and public health. Preceding the court of honor, the committee adopted a resolution to place next year's work with Boy Scouts on an individual basis with the "advancement of the individual boy" as the aim. There are at present 17,000 Boy Scouts in the seven districts in Chicago.

PRIEST INJURED SERIOUSLY WHEN 2 AUTOS COLLIDE

The Rev. Malachy Farrell of the Passionists order at 5700 North Harlem avenue was seriously injured last night when his auto collided with another at Irving Park boulevard and California avenue. Father Farrell, who is the chaplain at the Chicago state hospital for the insane, was thrown from his car by the impact. He was taken to the Martha Washington hospital.

Two men were seriously injured when the truck in which they were riding was demolished by a Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad train at the Waukegan road crossing in Glenview. The injured men are Ernest Greinki, 38 years old, 3749 North Richmond avenue, and William Restow, 40 years old, 2204 Roscoe street.

After serving a 60 day sentence for driving an automobile while intoxicated, Joseph Kyle, 40 years old, wealthy real estate dealer, was released yesterday from the House of Correction. He also paid a fine of $100.

With no deaths reported yesterday, the auto toll for the year remained at 1,071.

Clark Decision "Without Merit," Lindley Holds.

Federal Judge Walter C. Lindley, in a formal opinion yesterday, characterized attacks upon the validity of the eighteenth amendment along the lines advanced by Federal Judge Clark of New Jersey as "without merit." In the first test of Judge Clark's opinion in the federal courts in Chicago, Judge Lindley overruled a motion to quash an indictment charging George Morris with the operation of a still.

Defense counsel used Judge Clark's contention that the eighteenth amendment to be valid should have been submitted to constitutional conventions instead of state legislatures for ratification. This was based on the fact that the amendment constituted a grant of power to the federal government previously held by the states.

Chicago Judge's Opinion.

"It is only proper to remember," said Judge Lindley, "that all jurisdiction exercised by the federal government is exercised by virtue of the constitution and laws enacted thereunder; that the constitution itself is a grant of powers from the states to the federal government; that each amendment thereto is a grant of power from the respective several states to the federal government, and that no jurisdiction exists in the United States government except by virtue of grant of powers through the constitution or amendments thereto from the several states."

The court cited the grant to the federal government, in the original constitution, of exclusive jurisdiction over all new inventions, bankruptcy, the national currency system and the postal system.

"The eighteenth amendment provided merely for the control of intoxicating liquors," said Judge Lindley. "It is no more and no less a grant of power from the several states to the federal government than that provision of the constitution which grants to the federal government all jurisdiction over inventions."

Quotes Tenth Amendment.

Judge Lindley quoted from the tenth amendment to the constitution—"the powers not designated to the United States by the constitution are reserved to the states respectively or to the people"—cited by Judge Clark as requiring the ratification of the eighteenth amendment by conventions.

"Unfortunately for this contention, the constitution is utterly silent upon this nice point," Judge Lindley said.

The court answered the contention that the framers of the constitution provided "by implication sub silentio" that under certain conditions amendments should be ratified by conventions. "I know of no basis for inferring that the framers of the constitution had any such intention," he said. "The men who drafted the constitution . . . were, according to the light of history, too intelligent and cautious to allow their words to convey a meaning in nowise explained."

Upheld in 1920, He Says.

Judge Lindley declared that the method of adopting amendments by the ratification of state legislatures was upheld by the Supreme court in 1920, and quoted from Justice Day's opinion: "The method of ratification is left to the choice of congress."

Judge Lindley's opinion declared that if the eighteenth amendment is void, then the thirteenth, abolishing slavery, is void, and concluded:

"Remembering that the Supreme court has said in at least three cases that the eighteenth amendment was adopted in accordance with the provisions of the United States constitution, that it was ratified by the legislatures of 46 of the 48 states, that the Supreme court has never declared void any amendment so ratified . . . it seems to me that the question of constitutionality involved is without merit."

Rush Dry Law Test to U. S. Supreme Court in Appeal from Decision of Judge Clark

Newark, N. J., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The United States government's appeal from the ruling of Judge William Clark, that the eighteenth amendment is invalid, because it was ratified by the legislatures of the several states, instead of by the people in convention, was filed here today, fewer than 48 hours after it had been handed down.

It is to go direct to the Supreme court of the United States in Washington for early adjudication. The appeal automatically stays the effect of the decision until the Supreme court has passed on it.

Dry Raids Continue.

While Philip Forman, United States attorney, was busy putting his appeal order and petition through, the prohibition authorities in New Jersey continued their raids, descending on an alleged speakeasy in Morristown and a 1,500 gallon still in Bloomfield.

At the same time officers and supporters of the Anti-Saloon league and the W. C. T. U. organized in St. Luke's Methodist Episcopal church here a new dry organization that is to have units in every community in the state to help them fight the wets and wet sentiment.

Mr. Forman, accompanied by an assistant and by Frederic M. P. Pearse, counsel for the defense in the case on which the decision was written, went to Judge Clark's chambers early in the afternoon. Mr. Pearse presented the formal order quashing the indictments against his clients, William Sprague and William Howey, and the judgment was entered.

Lists Basis for Appeal.

The petition and order of appeal were signed by Judge Clark and were turned over to the deputy clerk of the District court, along with Mr. Forman's assignment of errors, citing the basis of the government's appeal on the grounds:

"That the court erred in allowing the motion (for dismissal of the indictment) of the defendants.

"That the court erred in decreeing that the indictments in the case be quashed.

"That the court erred in ruling that the eighteenth amendment of the constitution of the United States and the national prohibition act enacted in pursuance thereto is therefore unconstitutional and void."

Charles E. Jaeckel, the deputy clerk, then issued the order citing Sprague and Howey to appear before the Supreme court in Washington to show cause why the decision of Judge Clark should not be corrected.

Ruling Expected by June.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—The decision of Judge Clark of New Jersey, holding the 18th amendment invalid, may be passed upon by the Supreme court at its present term.

Court attachés said the government's appeal, allowed today, probably would reach the court soon, particularly if the record, which must accompany it, should be short.

It will be docketed immediately and a government motion to advance it is expected.

This, if granted, would put it ahead of pending cases and allow the court to rule on it before the session ends in June.

Stands by Dry Law.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Federal Judge John Boyd Avis today filed his formal opinion in the Rising Sun brewery padlocking case, stating that he would follow the pronouncement of the United States Supreme court on the validity of the eighteenth amendment until that court changes its ruling or congress changes the present situation.

Judge Avis yesterday refused to quash padlocking proceedings against the brewery, which is located at Elizabeth, N. J., and after hearing argument on the merits of the evidence in the case continued the proceedings until Jan. 16.

ENGINEERS TOIL TO END DISPUTE OVER SUBWAY

Protest Petition Held Up for Conference Result.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

An effort is being made to break the deadlock between the State street property owners and the city officials over the plans for the first subway.

It began yesterday afternoon when a discussion was started by all of the interested engineers in the office of Ernest R. Graham, the architect. It continued without interruption until early this morning, when the conference adjourned for five hours' sleep to be resumed at 9 a. m. At midnight one of the conferees said that he hoped, although it was still uncertain, that the major difficulties would be ironed out.

The deadlock first assumed a serious aspect on Wednesday when a majority of the property owners announced that they objected to the haste with which the subway plans had been rushed through the city council and into court, and were prepared to file a petition of protest with the board of local improvements which would halt the program for one year.

Petition Is Held Up.

Because of the possibility of agreement, the petition was not filed yesterday. The petition now represents about 70 per cent of the owners of property fronting on State street between 18th street and Chicago avenue.

Attorney William B. Hale, in charge of the petition, declined to indicate definitely when he intended to place the protest before the board of local improvements. It was reported that he is waiting to see what comes of the conference.

If the property owners are not given satisfying assurances of changes in the subway plans, it is said that the petition is certain to be filed. The time within which it may be presented is 30 days after the last public hearing of the board of local improvements, which was held on Nov. 22. Attorney George A. Mason for the city has advised the property owners that the protest will be effective if filed any time before next Monday evening.

Aldermen Show Concern.

Ald. James B. Bowler, chairman of the council local transportation committee, said that "It will be a crime if the subway program is tied up and work on construction prevented."

"If this subway gets into a jam the consolidation of the surface and elevated lines is delayed, and no construction started next spring," added Ald. Oscar F. Nelson, chairman of the special assessment committee, "it will be an injury to State street and a black eye for the utility corporations, which it will take them to committee, headed by John T. Pirie,

The State street property owners' committee, headed by John T. Pirie, has asked for changes in the plans so that the subway, in its opinion, will better serve public convenience. The board of local improvements and the city council approved of the original plans without modification.

The property owners say the protest petition was the only method left to them to obtain a consideration of their suggestions. They desire the subway, but object to the plans for it. They have been advised by counsel that if the petition is filed it can later be withdrawn.

When Attorney Mason was informed Wednesday afternoon of the intention of the property owners he telephoned to Attorney Walter L. Fisher, who is in Boston. Mr. Mason wired Mr. Fisher again yesterday. It was said there are fears that legal difficulties will be created if the petition is filed, withdrawn, and the court proceedings then resumed.

Attorney Mason wrote Attorney Hale, representing the property owners, yesterday and suggested that the owners submit in writing a list of the changes in the ordinance desired. Then, he suggested, the engineers for the city would go over them and an agreement would be reached. Mr. Hale declined to accept that proposal in a reply which forced the city representatives to take the initiative.

Conference Is Arranged.

So the conference was arranged in Architect Graham's office with engineers present representing the surface lines, the elevated roads, the phone, gas, electric, and telegraph companies the subway board, and the property owners. The property owners' committee stayed out. It will have a meeting about noon today, if there is a prospect of an agreement among the engineers.

Some of the aldermen were attempting yesterday to have the citizens' transit settlement committee jump into the fight, but its services had not been requested by the property owners.

On Wednesday a telegram was sent to Michael J. Faherty, president of the board of local improvements, in Philadelphia, asking him to return at once. He arrived about 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and went from the train to Architect Graham's office.

While the public was not admitted to the conference, it is reported that Faherty told the conferees that he was not only willing but anxious to please the property owners. He is said to have stated that he will make any changes in the plans which the city engineers approve and the city lawyers say will not jeopardize the legality of the subway proceeding.

HOUSE HURRIES 150 MILLIONS TO FARM BOARD FUND

Similar Speed Expected in Senate Today.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—It took the house of representatives exactly nine minutes today to vote to the federal farm board another 150 million dollars out of its 500 million dollar revolving fund, as requested by President Hoover, to finance its operations the remainder of this fiscal year.

Not a voice was raised in opposition to the appropriation on the floor of the house, and within a few hours after its passage the bill was favorably reported by the senate appropriations committee. That it will be rushed through the senate and sent to the White House before the end of the week was considered a virtual certainty.

The speed with which the bill swept toward enactment left no doubt as to the attitude of congress toward the farm board's program. It became evident that the disposition in both houses is to give the board free rein to carry on with its operations, including its stabilization ventures in the wheat market.

Out of the 500 million dollar revolving fund, authorized under the farm relief act, 250 millions previously has been appropriated to the board, and enactment of the pending bill will raise the total appropriations to 400 millions, leaving a balance of 100 millions, which will be asked for in another bill at this session.

This would make available to the board its entire 500 million dollars on July 1, 1931.

Publication of the house committee hearings coincident with introduction of the bill today disclosed that a large part of the 150 million dollar appropriation will be needed immediately to cover the board's obligations, and some astonishment was expressed over the disclosure of this financial condition. As of Dec. 13, the hearings revealed, only $2,110,731 remained of the original $250,000,000 as the free balance available for new commitments.

In the testimony of Alexander Legge, chairman of the board, before the committee it also was disclosed that there is $75,000,000 of bank obligations against stabilization commodities which the board expects to pay off immediately.

200 Millions Out in Loans.

A financial statement of the board showed that it had outstanding Nov. 30 approximately 117 million dollars in loans to coöperatives, $52,000,000 in loans for grain stabilization, and $31,000,000 in loans for cotton stabilization, a grand total of 200 millions.

On Dec. 13 this total had mounted to 212 millions, while approximately $37,000,000 more had been pledged in commitments, leaving only the thin balance of $2,000,000.

Mr. Legge before the house committee and again before the senate committee today stressed the necessity of obtaining further funds before congress adjourned for the holidays.

Mr. Legge's testimony before the house group threw a flood of light upon the board's policies, particularly with reference to the wheat held by the Grain Stabilization corporation. He said the corporation now "has 64 or 65 millions bushels of cash wheat in elevators and storage, and probably 60 million bushels under future contracts."

Legge Admits Price Fixing.

He admitted candidly that wheat prices are being "artificially maintained" by the board's wheat buying, that there would be a "substantial loss" if it closed out tomorrow, and that "it may be in the end that the taxpayer will lose."

"As to what the final outcome will be, we do not know," he said. "You cannot say until the final close of our operations. That is particularly true of grain. The grain market today is fully 20 cents above the world parity, or what wheat would bring if it were exported.

"It may be that in the end the taxpayer will lose. As I say, we do not know. Meantime, we are consuming 17,000,000 bushels a week, with the advantage of this difference in price, which means $2,500,000 to the wheat grower, as compared to the export price. Therefore, at the present time, the grower is getting that advantage.

"How much of that we will lose in the final cleanup is beyond us."

Representative Joseph Byrns [Dem., Tenn.] asked Mr. Legge what would have happened had the wheat not been purchased.

"I have letters from some of the most conservative millers and some of the largest buyers of grain saying that, except for these purchases by the board, wheat would be 25 cents per bushel throughout the country today," he replied.

Would Curb Chicago Board.

Mr. Legge, in his testimony called for further regulation of the Chicago Board of Trade and other grain exchanges.

"We think," Mr. Legge said, "that there should be an amendment to the regulations to the end that exchanges would not be permitted to make their own rules, except as they were approved by the secretary of agriculture, or by some officer designated by the government and that the secretary of agriculture be given definite authority to enforce the rules after they have been approved.

"Those exchange rules and regulations are all built up by the traders themselves. They are not in the interest of either the producers or consumers. They change them every day at their will.

"Under the present legislation there is not anybody I can find that has any authority to effectively deal with such exchanges. We have been talking about those people who are selling short on wheat today, and they are relying largely on going before a tribunal in the grain exchange for an adjudication in the event it turn out to be a bad move on their part. That extends down to private operators, and there is no reason why it cannot be regulated."

Mr. Legge, asked if the farm board contemplated any additional loans to the grape growers of California, said:

"I think there will be very little more called for this season."

ILLINOISANS REQUEST SECRETARY HYDE TO LIFT CORN SUGAR BAN

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Relaxation of restrictions hitting at corn sugar in regulations applying to food products was urged today upon Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde by a delegation of nearly 50 members of congress from corn belt states.

Spokesmen for the delegation included Senators Otis F. Glenn [Rep., Ill.], and Arthur Capper [Rep., Kas.], and Representatives William E. Hull and Charles Adkins [Rep., Ill.].

Representative Hull, who organized the delegation, summarized the situation, asserting that the lifting of the ban against corn sugar will open up a new market for corn.

LEGGE'S POLICY INDORSED

The directors of the Farmers' National Grain corporation, million dollar national sales agency for coöperatives, voiced their commendation of the federal farm board's stabilization activities in the wheat pit and urged Chairman Legge to abandon any thought of resigning from the board at the close of their meeting in Chicago yesterday.

In a resolution the directors expressed approval of the farm board's policies, and "in particular the recent stabilization activities through which our grain markets have been put in an advantageous position as compared to the world markets."

The "importance of this lifting of American grain prices" above those of any other nation and its effect upon agriculture and industry "can not be overestimated," the directors declared.

STEWART MOSS AGAIN HEADS POLICE GROUP

For the fifth consecutive time members of the Police Lieutenant's association yesterday elected Stewart P. Moss president. He is now attached to the Shakespeare avenue station. The vote was unanimous. The election was held at the annual meeting of the association at the Hotel Sherman.

S. P. MOSS.

Lieut. Moss is best known for his authorship of the Chicago police manual and for his treatise on the habitual criminal act, which has won high praise.

Other officers of the association were also reëlected. They are Patrick Bonner, vice president; Timothy Rohan, treasurer; Peter Tomchek, secretary; and Joseph McGuire, sergeant at arms.

Nab Two Bootleggers in National Fraternity Club

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—John Marchese and Harry Hecker, were arrested today in the clubhouse of Delta Kappa Epsilon, a nation-wide fraternity, by federal prohibition agents on charges of sale and possession of liquor. Marchese was booked as a barber and Hooker as a waiter. However, a member of the club said Marchese is not regularly employed there as a barber but occasionally assists the regular staff, and that Hecker is not known at the clubhouse.

SEIZE 3 YOUTHS IN ROBBERY OF BETROTHAL PARTY

Three youths were arrested last night by police investigating a holdup last Friday night of an engagement party in which a brother of one of the youths seized and his fiancée were robbed of a $700 engagement ring.

Those arrested are Sidney Marcovitz, 21 years old, 805 Independence boulevard, son of a wholesale jeweler; Hal O'Brien, 25 years old, 4138 Jackson boulevard, and David Boris, 29 years old, 1426 South Karlov avenue.

Sidney Marcovitz' brother, Harry, and Miss Sylvia Kascil, 1309 South Lawndale avenue, were guests at the party Friday night in the girl's home when two bandits entered and took the ring.

The three youths were arrested at O'Brien's home. Chief of Detectives Norton refused to say on what information he ordered the arrests.

Hides Rum in Bathroom, but the Police Find It

SENATE REFUSES TO LET HEALTH SERVICE LOOK AFTER BABIES

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The United States senate today decided that if anybody here in Washington is going to have the job of looking after the babies of the nation it will be the children's bureau, which now is doing the work, instead of the public health service. They gave this decision when they voted down, by a large majority, the amendment which Senator Millard E. Tydings [Dem., Md.] proposed to the now pending Jones bill for infancy and maternity legislation.

A vote was not taken on the bill itself, which really is a continuation of the Sheppard-Towner bill, now lapsed, providing for federal aid to mothers and infants. Senator Tydings, urging the passage of his amendment, pointed out that "infants and mothers are part of the public and as such now are cared for by the public health service."

The senator argued against putting medical care of babies into the hands of a lay bureau when the public health service is in operation.

HURRICANE HITS ALGERIA; DAMAGE RUNS TO MILLIONS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ALGIERS, Dec. 18.—A hurricane of tropical violence swept over Algeria today, sinking vessels and razing villages and causing millions of dollars' damage. The gigantic waves reached a height of a five story building in Algiers harbor, sinking 15 small vessels. Harbor works were destroyed all along the coast. All communications between Algiers and the rest of the country were cut off. The damage to the harbor here is estimated at $1,250,000.

For two days the coast had been lashed with the heaviest rainfall in 30 years, and according to sailors today's was the most terrific tempest seen in the Mediterranean since 1898. There was no loss of life at Algiers, but it is feared that many casualties will be reported throughout Algeria when telephonic and telegraphic communications are reëstablished. All liners have postponed their departure and many American tourists have been forced to remain at Marseilles. Several S O S calls were received from boats in distress between Algiers and Marseilles.

THOS. F. HOWE DIVORCED, COURT RECORDS SHOW

Mrs. Eleanor D. Howe, 200 East Chestnut street, was granted a divorce on Sept. 25 from Thomas Francis Howe, well known Chicago lawyer, it was revealed yesterday in the records of the Circuit court. Mrs. Howe, who was granted the decree three days after the divorce bill was filed, charged cruelty.

Mr. Howe is a member of the law firm of Howe, Fordham & Kreamer, specializing in corporation law. He is a member of the American, Illinois State, and Chicago Bar associations, and belongs to the Union league, Exmoor Country and Hamilton clubs and to the Chicago Athletic association.

Mr. Howe and his wife, who was formerly Mrs. D. C. Jacobson, wife of a young broker of Los Angeles and Honolulu, were married in August, 1928. A year before that Jacobson had sued Mr. Howe for $200,000, charging that he alienated the affections of his wife, whom he married in 1924. The suit never came to trial.

Under the terms of the divorce decree Mrs. Howe was awarded $500 in cash and an additional $4,800 to be paid in twelve monthly installments. The Howes separated in July, 1930.

SPAIN'S REVOLT CRUSHED; GUNS CURB NEW RIOTS

Rebel Chiefs Draw Plans for Next Uprising.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
(Copyright: 1930: By The Chicago Tribune.)

MADRID, Dec. 18.—After six days of disorganization and fighting the republican leaders, or what is left of them, tonight conceded the complete collapse of the revolutionary movement throughout Spain.

They energetically deny, however, that the republican movement has been weakened by the failures to date, and still hope to overthrow the monarchy before spring. They have drawn up plans for the next thrust, scheduled for between the 5th and 10th of January. They hope to get it under way in some out of the way town, probably along the Portuguese border, instead of in the north.

Three Killed in Clash.

Despite the government statement that calm had been restored, reports reaching the capital late tonight show that revolt is still smoldering in various sections. In the town of Aspe a number of street clashes occurred in which three persons were killed by civil guards, two of whom were seriously wounded.

At Valladolid a mob of several hundred strikers stormed the local church, howling, "Death to the priests!" They waved torches, but were driven back by mounted guards. Many shots were fired.

Alcala Zamora, the conservative Republican leader, who was arrested in Madrid as a signer of the proclamation of a republic, is reported to have confessed complete details of the plot to overthrow the monarchy. A sentence of life imprisonment will be asked for him. Zamora is alleged to have stated that the revolutionary committee had been assured that 17 garrisons would join the revolt as soon as the first shot was fired, and that the others pledged they would remain neutral and would not fire on their fellow soldiers. Instead they helped put down the uprising.

Plan "Reign of Terror."

The next attempt of the insurgents will not repeat the mistake of counting upon the support of nearby garrisons to join them sympathetically, republican leaders here said today. Instead the republicans intend to spread a reign of terror by sending ahead bombing air squadrons led by Maj. Ramon Franco, who is expected to escape from Portugal in time and blast the garrisons out of their forts and barracks.

Agents in other cities, instead of wasting time by promoting strikes and insignificant riots, will concentrate on blowing up bridges and wrecking railways, crippling movements of government troops.

Regardless of the chances of the republicans, and they do not seem too bright to observers, it is evident that the movement is finished for several weeks, at least.

Iron Fisted Rule.

With the Christmas holidays starting, the Spanish people will not be bothered by revolutions during the religious fiestas, and, what is more important, during the drawing for the grand lottery prizes totaling 25,000,000 pesetas, about $2,750,000.

The net result of the desperate attempt has been that the republicans have brought down upon the country an iron fisted military dictatorship beside which Primo de Rivera's régime was a Sunday school picnic.

The press will probably remain under complete censorship. An official communique tonight stated that 16 were killed and 104 wounded during the uprising. These figures do not include casualties at San Sebastian, where six were killed, and Saragossa.

Thirty important Republican leaders who have been arrested will be turned over to the military authorities for court-martial, and sentences from ten years to life imprisonment will be rendered, it is stated.

STRIKERS BACK ON JOB

BY EGBERT SWENSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SAN SEBASTIAN, Spain, Dec. 18.—The revolution collapsed in this section of Spain today with the return to work of the last rabid republican strikers this morning following last night's orders from the Madrid headquarters of the Spanish Federation of Labor.

Republican leaders grimly exchanged post-mortems today, and in the offices of the republican newspaper Voz, one leader sadly admitted the failure "for the time being."

While the troops are still here they are less conspicuous today than yesterday. The cafés and bars and dancing places are open again. The best proof that this section considers the revolt a failure—"for the time being"—is offered in the nearby paper mill town of Tolosa, largely populated by laborers and stanchly republican.

Sees Bullet Marked Walls.

Rebel chieftains, gloomily sipping black coffee and liqueurs at the Café Andia, the favorite insurgent hangout made the same admission—namely that the revolt had fallen through "for the time being." They grimly led me through the main street in order to point out the scene of last night's fight, at which the last rifle volley was fired in the north Spanish phase of the late revolt.

Indignantly they pointed out 12 nicks in the third and fourth floors of an apartment house where the soldiery from San Sebastian replied to Tolosa's final "Viva la republica" with a salvo into the air. The volley missed a half dozen housewives watching the battle from the balconies, and the Tolosa republicans boast that if a single bullet had hit a single housewife, instead of the wall, there would have been a massacre of infantrymen in Tolosa last night.

Phone Operator Is Heroine.

The monarchist heroine in this part of Spain is Senorita Anita Torrero a telephone operator at Ayerbe, half way between Jaca, where the revolutionary troops started their ill fated march, and Huesca their first objective to the south. Anita from her window in the telephone exchange, observed their arrival in trucks. She called the Huesca authorities and gave a running account of the rebel advance until a sergeant broke in and choked her off.

G. O. P. LEADERS PREDICT FUSION AT RALLY TODAY

Outlying Business Men Praise Unity Plan.

Isham Randolph as president of the Chicago Association of Commerce, an organization of 7,000 members, Earl H. Macoy, president of the Employers' association, speaking for some 3,000 employers of labor, added a word of approval for the project.

"Mr. Snow," he said, "should be highly commended for endeavoring to bring the various Republican factions into harmony. The Employers' association is interested in a good mayor on the theory that he appoints the head of the police department and that department can have a great deal to do with reducing rackets.

"We believe that constituted authority is the proper weapon with which to fight crime, and the only way to law enforcement is by the route of better people in office."

Other Business Men Approve.

Representatives of a number of district business organizations spoke as favorably of the Snow plan.

"It will be necessary for the Republican factions to unite if they are to get anywhere in this election," said Walter H. Schenk, president of the Southwest Federation of Improvement Clubs. "I would infinitely rather see them unite under Snow's leadership than under Thompson's."

"Only by uniting the various party factions as Mr. Snow is attempting to do," said George J. Eckhoff, president of the Northwest Real Estate board, "can the Republicans hope to find a candidate that will measure up to qualifications for mayor and prove wholly acceptable to the people. With all the best party leaders concentrating their search it ought not to be hard to find the best man for mayor."

"There is no doubt the anti-Thompson units should unite if we are not to have another Thompson term," said Benjamin S. Herbert, secretary of the Ravenswood Improvement association. "The field has to be narrowed and I would like to see all available forces unite behind some natural choice."

Flamm Urges Fusion.

"Of course the anti-Thompson factions should unite," said Irving H. Flamm, vice president of the North Town Improvement association. "I would like to see them back some man who is a leader in civic affairs untainted by politics, who will be free from the pressure of political expediency to protect graft, rackets and gangs."

"I am all in favor of the plan," declared A. P. Dippold, a vice president of the Oakland Business Men's association and president of the Chicago Architects' association. "This is the only way in which we can accomplish anything. There are many thousands of Republicans who won't stand for a poor candidate."

Report Deneen to Be Here.

The group heads who have been invited by Chairman Snow to meet at the Palmer house have not announced the personnel of their delegations. It was reported that United States Senator Deneen, delayed by close roll calls at Washington, was hurrying toward Chicago last night and that two of the representatives of his group will be National Committeeman Roy O. West and State's Attorney Swanson.

Edward J. Brundage, former attorney general, probably will be accompanied by Thomas O. Wallace and Louis Nettelhorst. The present attorney general, Oscar E. Carlstrom, also has been asked to sit in because of the downstate interest aroused by the Thompson-Small hookup. Partly for the same reason, President W. R. James of the west park board, considered Gov. Emmerson's spokesman in this county, has been invited to attend with some of his associates.

KUNZ ASKS RECOUNT AFTER PETITION FOR INVESTIGATION FAILS

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—A petition by Representative Stanley H. Kunz [Dem., Ill.] for an investigation of alleged fraud in the November election, when he was defeated by Peter C. Granata, Republican, was rejected today by the special house campaign expenditures committee.

Although finding that it had no authority to investigate the election on the ground that Mr. Kunz presented no proof of any violation of the corrupt practices act, or any proof of violence, the committee reported that he had "made out a case" sufficient to entitle him to ask for a recount by one of the house election contest committees.

Immediately after the decision of the campaign expenditures committee was announced, Mr. Kunz filed a petition in the house asking for such a recount.

STIMSON, DOAK URGE 90% CUT IN IMMIGRATION

Both Oppose Reed Bill to Bar Aliens 2 Years.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—A horizontal cut of 90 per cent in all immigration based on the national origins method of selection was suggested by Secretaries Stimson and Doak today if congress intends enacting any such legislation to aid employment.

The state and labor department heads registered opposition before the senate immigration committee to the Reed bill to bar all immigration, except relatives of foreign born American citizens, for two years.

Stimson Sees Danger in Bill.

Stimson said this measure, as well as the Johnson bill now pending in the house, would "destroy" the existing national origins selective policy by allowing an increasing number of relatives to come in from southern Europe and fewer kin from the northern European countries, reversing the policy of existing law.

Enough applications from relatives already are on file to absorb existing quotas, he said.

Doak Agrees with Him.

Doak said his department was in "substantial agreement" with the state department and thought a "simple and direct" cut in immigration, with equal distribution of the slash in accordance with the present policy, would be best.

The war department's opposition to the bills also was given through Brig. Gen. F. L. Parker, chief of the bureau of insular affairs. Speaking for Secretary Hurley, he voiced "definite nonconcurrence" in the provision applying the emergency bars to Filipinos. He doubted whether this exclusion would "compensate for the advantage of a very slight increase in American employment."

ILL, IN BED, HE'S DIVORCED FROM MISS FREDERICK

"Not a Wife," Court Told in Sickroom.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The marriage of Hugh Chisholm Leighton, millionaire head of the Interstate Hotel company, with the actress, Pauline Frederick, was ended today when Judge Doran announced that he would give Leighton an annulment of the marriage. The session of court was held by Judge Doran, with a small group of attorneys at Leighton's bedside. Leighton is ill.

After the 52 year old bridegroom had testified that the actress' conduct had sent him to bed Judge Doran announced he would grant Leighton's plea for a legal annulment.

Miss Frederick Ignores Action.

Miss Frederick did not honor the proceedings with her presence or any notice. Through her local attorney she announced yesterday that she would not contest the annulment action and a default in her behalf was spread on the court record today The actress was far away, in another city, playing a stage role, her attorney said, and sent her wifely resignation by telegraph.

Propped up in bed Leighton responded to questions of his counsel, Benjamin Bledsoe, former United States judge for southern California.

After saying that he and Miss Frederick were married last April 20, after a courtship of four months, Judge Bledsoe asked:

"Up to the time of the marriage did Miss Frederick display to you the affection of engaged persons?"

"She did."

"Now tell us what took place after the wedding."

The Wedding Party.

"We had a little party in our rooms after the wedding. The party included my son, my daughters and a few good friends of mine and Miss Frederick. When the party was breaking up, a Mrs. Jibb, an old friend of Miss Frederick, stayed behind. She occupied my bedroom, and Mrs. Leighton stayed with her. I went to a spare bedroom. After that, this happened every night for two weeks."

Two weeks after the wedding in New York, he and the actress made a honeymoon train trip back to California in a Pullman drawing room.

"On that trip," he testified, "Miss Frederick always retired first, locking me out until she had occupied an upper birth. She then permitted me to come into the compartment and sleep in a lower. In the morning this was reversed. I got up and dressed first. An hour later she would join me outside for breakfast."

Treated Like a Butler.

When they finally came to Beverly Hills, Leighton said, "her attitude toward me was something like the way a person treats a butler."

In the eight months since the wedding, Leighton said he didn't even get "a good kiss."

The hotel man said he was much depressed, but had to make a trip back to New York with a daughter who had become ill, and that the worry caused a break in his health in New York.

"After three weeks in a sanitarium we came back to Beverly Hills," he said. "But my wife was gone, and I have not seen her since."

Leighton testified that he had contributed to the actress' support every month at the rate of $1,000 a month. His physician, Dr. Charles F. Nelson, attended, and attorneys said he was prepared to testify that the affair had injured Leighton's health, but Judge Doran said he had made up his mind without the doctor's testimony, and ordered an annulment decree be recorded.

Miss Frederick was married three times previously. She has declined at all times to issue any public comment on Mr. Leighton's charges.

OCEAN AIRMEN OF ITALY KEPT APART BY STORM

CARTAGENA, Spain, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Unfavorable weather tonight continued to hold Italy's trans-Atlantic air squadron apart, six of the fourteen planes which left Orbetello, Italy, yesterday remaining at Iviza, one of the Balearic islands.

The six planes were expected to join the other eight, which came down at Cartagena, tomorrow and it was believed the whole squadron would resume the flight, whose final goal is Brazil.

BOARD BARS TOP POWER TO MANY RADIO STATIONS

Orders Yost to Pick Lucky Ones.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Without assigning its reasons, the federal radio commission today vetoed the comprehensive recommendations of its chief examiner, Ellis A. Yost, that all the broadcasting stations operating on cleared channels—among them W-G-N, THE TRIBUNE'S station—be permitted to use the top power of 50,000 watts.

By a vote of four to one the commission remanded the Yost report and instructed the chief examiner to submit new recommendations selecting a handful of stations for the choice ether assignments. He had held that it was the commission's solemn duty in the public interest not to discriminate, but to grant all cleared channel stations 50,000 watts power if they desired it.

Seek Power Increases.

Twenty cleared channel stations in all parts of the country sought power increases to enable them more effectively to serve the listening audience. Under the commission's existing regulations, which Mr. Yost urged be modified, only eight vacancies exist and, despite the arguments of these stations at a five week hearing and the strong recommendations of the examiner that this regulation be vacated for the public's good, the commission now forces the examiner to pick the stations which shall be given the preferred assignments.

Action came after Federal Radio Commissioner Harold A. Lafount had offered a resolution proposing that a supplemental hearing be held prior to action on the Yost report, but it was overridden by the same vote of four to one. Another motion, offered by eleven of the twenty applicant stations, including W-G-N, proposing that the commission hear arguments as to the advisability of lifting its restriction, and thus open all 40 of the cleared channels for high power, before action was taken on the Yost report, also was rejected, four to one. In each instance Mr. Lafount dissented from the majority vote.

Must Select Two stations.

In the case of the fourth radio zone, the commission's action means that Examiner Yost must select from among seven stations the two he considers qualified for increases in power to the maximum. There are only two vacant assignments in this area, embracing the middle western states, and the applicants are W-G-N; WMAQ, the Daily News station; WBBM, the Columbia station; WCFL, the Chicago Federation of Labor station; WTMJ, at Milwaukee; WHO-WOC, Des Moines, and WCCO, Minneapolis.

Yost, in his report submitted on Monday, excluded WCFL and WTMJ from his favorable recommendations because they are not cleared channel stations, and also recommended that the labor station be denied its request for assignment to the W-G-N channel because of the unquestioned vastly superior public service of THE TRIBUNE station.

$12,000,000 WATER ISSUE UPHELD IN SUPREME COURT

The issuance of water certificates by the Thompson administration to the amount of $12,000,000 was made possible yesterday by an opinion of the state Supreme court which sustained a decision of the Superior court of Cook county. The effect of the opinion was to deny the bill of Frank J. Ward to enjoin the city from issuing the certificates, which are a lien on the city's water revenues.

Authority to issue the certificates was given to the city during the 1929 session of the general assembly. The city council then passed an ordinance providing for the sale of the certificates, but Controller Schmidt refused on the grounds that the validity of the certificates had been attached.

Ward, who is said to have a connection with the plumbers' union, which was anxious to have the money released as it would be used on construction work for which plumbers would be hired, brought suit in the Superior court to enjoin the city from the sale as a test case. The money will be used mainly in the construction of the new Chicago avenue water tunnel.

SCOFFLAWS SENTENCED.

East St. Louis, Ill., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Three defendants who pleaded guilty to violating liquor laws were sentenced by Federal Judge Fred L. Wham here. They were John Zitta, Eliza Allbright, and Tony Aglen.

YEARS OF ENTERPRISE

BUYING HABITS are formed in the years of enterprise and ambition—of courage and limitless desire. Collier's—because it pulses with movement, vitality and enterprise—appeals to those who have not slowed down.

Collier's is always growing but never ages. Everything about it is timely—its crisp, hard-hitting editorial brevity; its use of color; its typographical freshness inspired and controlled by stylists; its comprehensive handling of absorbing interests such as aviation; its weekly panorama of national sport (the All America Team in this week's issue, for example).

Famous writers and artists appear in Collier's, but it's when their work is fresh and brave, not tired. Great personages make their bow. Clemenceau's last written word, Winston Churchill's articles, Knute Rockne's football series, the prohibition debate between Clarence Darrow and Dr. Clarence True Wilson—such features are typical of Collier's.

The advertising in Collier's catches the Collier's tempo. Successful advertisers know the kind of people who read a magazine. They have learned that Collier's readers are intelligently responsive, not shackled by the inertia of habit.

Tell Collier's two and a quarter million families about something that is better, more up-to-date, which lessens labor, makes living richer, and the response is inevitable.

A SUBWAY FOR THE UTILITY COMPANIES.

The owners of most of the property adjoining the proposed State street subway are up in arms against the subway ordinance as presented by the board of local improvements and approved by the city council and the mayor. The property owners are not opposed to a subway or to contributing to its cost through special assessments; they are dissatisfied merely, with the design as laid down in the ordinance.

Their criticism is sound. The engineers appear to have devoted altogether too much consideration—and too much space—to the supposed needs of the various utility companies whose pipes and conduits run under the streets. The result is that the utilities have been given all and more than they need or can reasonably want. The fact is that the subway should be designed primarily in the interest of the passengers. It is a passenger subway and only incidentally of convenience to the utilities. If it is necessary to sacrifice the interests of either it is not the passengers who should be inconvenienced and discommoded.

About two-thirds of the costs are to be borne by the property owners and the remaining third by the car riders, whose payments will be taken from the traction fund. Under the circumstances it is not unreasonable of the property owners and passengers to ask for much more consideration in the drawing of the plans than is accorded the utility companies, which will merely pay rent for the space they will occupy.

PRICE CUTTING AND PRICE FIXING.

While the conditions which have developed in the cleaning and dyeing industry call for drastic measures of reform, the plan adopted by the association of employers is hardly to be accepted by the public with entire complacency. One of the objects of the contract proposed for the industry is to check the price cutting war which it is said threatens the industry with ruin. But the line between "price cutting" and the free competition supposed to be protected by American policy is not always regarded by combinations. The federal law prohibits all combinations in restraint of trade, though this has been interpreted as reaching only unreasonable restraints. The contract of the Master Cleaners and Dyers industry does not come within the federal law, as the combination is local. As to the Illinois law having to do with trusts and combines, it seems to relate only to the fixing of prices of articles of merchandise, and probably would not reach the fixing of the price for services. We suggest that the legislature might consider an amendment of the law to cover unreasonable combinations for the fixing of prices for services as well as commodities.

We make this suggestion without assuming that the Cleaners and Dyers combination will abuse such power as it has. That remains to be seen. The recent record of the industry does not encourage optimism, but in any case the Illinois law should be clarified and strengthened so as to protect the public from oppressive monopolies and restraints of competition in services as well as in the sale of commodities. We do not think the plan of the Master Cleaners and Dyers combination can be considered apart from public policy. It suggests a precedent which might develop some serious results.

SCIENCE AND THE POLICE.

The recent conference on the application of scientific data and method for the detection of crime is a promising development of our present awakening to the crime situation. It does not aim at the most difficult and important factor—the relation of corrupt politics to the police—but it is a step toward an efficiency which can be achieved when and as the central problem is solved. The chief battle is against corruption in the force and the corrupt influence of politics upon the administration of the criminal law in all phases, but it is well worth while to prepare for efficiency in method when the foundation of integrity is laid.

Science can be of immense help, is in fact essential to a high efficiency in the detection of crime, and police method should be based upon it. Policemen, the great majority of whom are well intentioned, should be instructed in correct practice for the preservation of evidence and the search for it. There will have to be specialists in the department developed from the best material in the force, but also the rank and file should be given instruction in certain preliminary methods by which they can assist in observing and collecting evidence. Carelessness and ignorance in the policemen who first reach the scene of a crime may destroy clews and make the final solution more difficult or impossible. Two fingerprints left on a glass used by the criminal who murdered the manager of the Claridge grill may lead to his detection and punishment, but the sawed-off shotgun he used was handled by so many or so carelessly that fingerprints were destroyed. This mishandling may have been done, probably was done, by excited individuals on the scene before the police arrived, but strong police practice would in time spread the idea of leaving things alone, even among civilians, and much evidence would be preserved. A common technique can be taught which will reduce this danger substantially and raise the whole level of police efficiency.

If we can disentangle the police from corrupt politics, police work can be raised to the level of a real profession, and men of a type not willing to serve under present conditions can be brought into the force. Even under present discouraging and demoralizing conditions policemen show splendid courage and there is much unrewarded integrity and ability among them. When we have freed the police department from corrupt politics and the pressure of corrupting temptations, when we have given it independence and the assurance of recognition for loyal and competent service, we shall have little cause to complain of its willingness to give the public the defense it demands. When that stage is reached science will be the police's most useful ally, and we ought meanwhile to be making as much use as we can of its aid and to be developing a system which will put crime detection upon the highest level of efficiency.

SENSIBLE ACTION ON THE LEAGUE COURT.

The senate committee on foreign relations has put the league court question on the shelf for a year. It ought to stay there. The senate has domestic problems and responsibilities of the most urgent and difficult nature to deal with. That it should also undertake to decide the issues involved in adherence to the court is obviously inexpedient and improper. The amendments should not have been submitted to the senate at this troubled time. There is no popular demand for their adoption. There are no circumstances which call for their adoption at this session. On the contrary, there are plain reasons why they should not be adopted under present legislative stress and public preoccupation with other things.

All this we are confident is realized in the senate and even in the White House. The highly organized internationalist claque at Washington will try to bully the senate into overruling its committee. We hope the senate will have the spirit and common sense to ignore it. The nation wants congress to give its best thought to the national situation, to consider well our serious social and economic difficulties, to weed out quack proposals and take such action, and such action only, as wise deliberation suggests for the restoration of normal prosperity. When, as promptly as possible, that is accomplished the nation will be grateful for an adjournment of legislative activity until the next regular session.

FANTASTIC FANATICISM.

A Michigan judge, by name Millington of Cadillac, has added another item of the record of the lex talionis in this land of statutory virtues and of moralities by fanatic prescription. He has sentenced to jail indefinitely a middle aged farmer who was intoxicated at a dance. The man was arrested, drunk, Nov. 7. For over a month he was held for contempt, and except for an order of the Michigan Supreme court, releasing him on bail, would stay in jail until he can reconcile himself to the learned court. His name is Harrand and his trouble is that he does not tell who sold or gave him the liquor.

Harrand says that he does not know because there was a group of men gathered in the dark outside the place and he got the liquor there. Millington does not believe that and he wants the information out of Harrand and apparently proposes to get it with the judicial authority of the state back of him. There is not much in the experience of the Michigan liquor lifers to encourage the victim of this new judicial process to hope that he can escape the majesty of the law if he does not think up some one to inform upon.

The charge against the man is that he was intoxicated. For that aberration he is seized as a person of astonishing and dangerous depravity, with a vigor for which parts of Michigan have become noted, and the law is prepared to give him everything it has in both barrels. This ecstasy of retaliation upon the minor characters of discoverable victims among persons not conforming to moralistic law has historical background, but the spectacle is always found among peoples demented by savage enthusiasms. Civilization is supposed to repress these excessive tendencies and to keep pietistic emotions from getting into the torture chamber with their victims, but civilization sometimes is subjected to overstrain.

It is generally observable that when inconspicuous and trivial offenders are so ferociously handled the major offenders against normal laws of society find their operations comparatively secure. The real turpitudes lose their significance and gain immunity. Criminality grows while peccadillos are hunted down by the enraged law officers of hysterical people.

We look forward to the time when an outraged public opinion will compel the impeachment of the Michigan Jeffreys.

Editorial of the Day

A MISINTERPRETATION.

[Los Angeles Times.]

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE expresses a desire for information as to whether the refusal of Los Angeles voters to approve a bond issue of $2,000,000 for rights of way for a transmission line to Boulder dam means that this city declines to build the line.

For THE TRIBUNE's benefit it may be said that Los Angeles has not declined to build the line, but on the contrary expects and intends to build the line, unless a possibly more satisfactory and economical arrangement can be made between the city and the Southern California Edison company for construction of a joint line, and that in either case the federal government will be put to no outlay in the matter. The $2,000,000 item was rejected by the voters as part of a $13,300,000 local project, most of which was properly regarded as indefensible; and the $2,000,000 itself was not regarded as timely.

There was no object in providing now for a transmission line which has not yet been located, which cannot and need not be built for years, and which may possibly not be built at all. There is no absolute certainty that the legal and engineering problems connected with Boulder dam will be solved. When the dam and the power houses are nearing completion is plenty of time to get transmission lines under way, and to start them now would be a foolish waste of money.

All the vote means is that the voters detected an effort on the part of the politically minded Los Angeles power bureau to put something over, using the popularity of the Boulder dam project as bait.

How to Keep Well By Dr. W. A. Evans

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries under proper limitations when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

LANDRY'S PARALYSIS.

M. E. W. writes asking for an article on Landry's paralysis. A young lawyer in her town has just died after a five days' illness. The diagnosis was Landry's paralysis. The household is still under quarantine. No one seems to have heard of this disease.

REPLY: The anatomical name for this disease is "acute ascending paralysis," but it is commonly given the name of a French physician who died sixty-five years ago. Since Dr. Landry saw cases of it and described them, the disease is not exactly a new one. However, it is rare.

The paralysis starts in the legs, both of them, travels upward, and causes death when it involves the nerves of breathing and heart action. In many cases the illness does not last five days. Very few cases recover. There is not much fever or constitutional reaction, less than in infantile paralysis, and much less than in epidemic meningitis and epidemic encephalitis.

The impression given is that death results from paralysis of nerve apparatus, the integrity of which is necessary for life, and that intoxication with the products of the bacteria is of much more importance. There is no known treatment except to keep the patient as comfortable as possible.

Recently we read day to day newspaper stories of a girl paralyzed from infantile paralysis who was kept alive in a Drinker artificial respiration apparatus until her disease had left the breathing centers and she could again breathe by natural methods. It is logical to think it would be worth while to try this method with cases of Landry's paralysis. The few cases that have recovered managed somehow to keep on breathing until the disease had cleared up in the breathing centers.

Acute ascending paralysis has all the characteristics of a disease caused by invasion by some bacillus of some part of the nervous system, probably the cord. Dr. Osler wrote of at least one case due to the typhoid bacillus, but the bacterial cause of the general run of cases has not been discovered. There is no proof that quarantine is of service in protecting the community against this disease.

PIMPLES ON THE FACE.

A. C. writes: Are pimples on the face the result of bad blood or does bad blood usually manifest itself by boils and pimples on the back? I have heard that soap can cause pimples. Is this true? I am 16 years old and have been troubled with pimples lately. I would be grateful for any treatment you could advise.

REPLY.

The condition of the blood has no relation to pimples. Soap cures but does not cause them.

Among contributing causes of pimples are lack of cleanliness of the face, insufficient exposure to cold, rain, snow, and air; physical inactivity; constipation; diet; age. Keeping the face very clean and massaging and squeezing out the grease will cure some cases.

PUS DISCHARGE FROM EAR.

E. M. writes: Twenty years ago I had two operations on my right ear, for an abscess. The ear has discharged pus ever since. Is there any danger in this condition? Can discharge be stopped?

REPLY.

The chances are that the ear condition has done all the harm it will cause. It should have been attended to before this.

FIND OUT THE CAUSE.

Miss J. E. M. writes: A friend of mine has inflammation of the eyelids. I want to know if it is serious? What is the cause? Cure? Does it take a long time for them to heal?

REPLY.

The answer to your question depends on the nature of the eyelid trouble. Trachoma, one such disorder, is a serious matter. Other forms of granulated lids are not so serious. Then, the eyelids may be red from eye strain.

MINOR CANNOT SIGN NOTES.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I signed a promissory note in 1922, at which time I was a minor. The holder of the note lives outside the state of Illinois. 1. Is it possible for him to secure a judgment in this state, and who would pay costs of same? 2. What time must elapse before the note is outlawed? 3. Would this be from the date of note or the date of the last payment on same? C. S.

1. Your minority is a defense. If it was a judgment note, he might enter judgment by confession, in which case it would be necessary for you to move to vacate.
2. Ten years.
3. The latter.

OBSTRUCTION REMOVED.

Chicago, Dec. 9.—[Friend of the People.]—Am writing regarding a telegraph pole that obstructs the passage to the morgue of a funeral home on Commercial avenue. Inquiries as to the ownership reveal that the pole is the property of the city of Chicago. As this pole is bare and has no connections whatever we desire its removal as soon as possible. S. J. B.

Our inspector reports that the pole complained of has been removed.

JOSEPH J. BUTLER,
Superintendent of Streets.

AUTOMOBILE DAMAGES.

Chicago, Dec. 13.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—"A" is proceeding along the street at the average rate of speed. "B" is following, and when "A" cuts into traffic to the left "B" grazes "A's" fender with his front fender. 1. Who is responsible? 2. Is there anything in the law requiring "A" to give "B" his name and address? E. B. B.

1. We do not understand the facts. Even if your statement were clear, you would still be in a better position to say who was to blame than we are.
2. No.

To prove an automobile property damage case it is commonly necessary to introduce at least two and sometimes more sets of witnesses to cover the issues as to defendant's negligence, plaintiff's freedom from contributory negligence, the extent of the physical damage, and the proper cash measure of that damage. The cost and difficulty of such proof is usually so disproportionate to the probable amount of recovery as to make suit inadvisable.

A LINE O' TYPE OR TWO

OUR BUS DID ITS DARNDEST!

Now from down Springfield way comes the report that the 3 cent gas tax in Illinois this year has paid over $28,000,000 into the state treasury. Why, the very idea! We can't understand this at all! We started running our family bus around last June and we feel certain we must have paid out at least half that much ourselves for gasoline. And with so many people driving cars—well, well! But then, of course, our car may be a little teeny bit thirstier than most cars. It always looks before it starts out sort of gay and roguish, head up, tail up, and just rarin' to go. But it always heads in wherever it sees a filling station sign and leans up against the place in a tired, woebegone sort of way, and acts like it's going to faint and gasps and gasps for gasoline. It swallows gasoline in great big gulps like a fish swallowing water. But she's not like a fish, because a fish is satisfied with the water you give it; a river, a lake, or the ocean, whatever it is, a fish gives a fishy smile as if to say, "All right, that's plenty, thanks." But our car simply never gets enough gasoline. It swallows all we have money to pay for and then pulls away from the filling station very reluctantly and trying to turn around and go back and get some more. And to think that after all the gasoline our car drank this year and paying a 3 cent tax on every gallon, the state collected only $28,000,000 altogether. Well, anyhow, our car did its duty, doggone it.

A CHRISTMAS NOT SO MERRY.

The meanest man of all I ever knew
Was old Jim Findley—mean and ornery, too.
He and his little boy, Jim Junior, batched
Down by the cattle pens. Their hut was thatched
And patched with bits of old tar paper, tin,
And scraps of hog-crates Jim had gathered in.
Small towns, like ours, can't boast much when it comes To squalor, but Jim's quarters were our "slums."
Jim was of weasel visage, small in size,
With pointed, purple nose and watery eyes;
Painter by trade, but mostly cleaned spittoons
For drinks and stale free lunches in saloons.

Jim Junior was a blue eyed five year old,
Half starved, half clad, but crowned with curls of gold;
Impish, cherubic, innocent, and bad—
"Just like his dead girl-mother was, poor lad!"
They said, and sadly pitied little Jim,
And wouldn't let their children play with him.

But Christmas time drew near, and Mrs. Berry,
Who lived alone out by the cemetery,
Took on herself the rôle of missionary—
Swooped down on little Jim with soap and towel,
Sponged and shampooed and bathed him, made him howl.

So loud his father, lying in a stupor
Upon the bed, swore like a drunken trooper
(Which he was not, but just a drunken bum),
Then took him by the hand and made him come
With her to Sunday school. There Jimmy heard,
Wistful and wonder eyed, the Blessed Word.
He understood the stable and the manger,
And all about harsh winter's lurking danger;
But when the teacher told the eager class
The tale, familiar, of St. Nicholas,
He didn't understand at all, but pondered,
And worked his toes, and dreamed and wished and wondered.

Came Christmas eve, and Jimmy Junior strove
Before a cob fire in a battered stove
To keep the shivers off, and to achieve
Such dreams as children dream on Christmas eve—
Of Santa Claus and reindeer, sweets and toys,
And all the fleet and glamorous yuletide joys,
The while his father whined and groaned and dozed
With pipe in mouth and bleary eyes half closed.
It might be so—that tale of old Kris Kringle—
Almost, he thought he heard the sleighbells jingle;
For sure he heard the beat of hoofs, but then
It might be just the cattle in the pen. . . .
He'd try it, anyhow; he'd take the dare,
And so he hung his stockings on a chair
And, just for luck, made up a little prayer.

Intoxicated, gave a scornful laugh:
"What are you up to, now, you little fool?
Something, I'll bet, you learned at Sunday school!"
His taunts were scarcely heard by little Jim,
Who crept to bed, and took his dreams with him.
Then all the meanness in old Jim cropped out.
Slyly and silently he went about
To fill the little stockings. From the shed
He fetched a heap of corncobs, white and red—
There never was a measlier, meaner trick—
Old Nick, himself, in guise of good St. Nick.

At daybreak little Jim awoke and rose
To find his stockings bulging to the toes.
In childish ecstasy he ran to pour
Their contents on the rough and frosty floor.
Then disillusion crushed his heart. With sobs
Of woe and rage, he gazed upon the cobs.
"There ain't no good old Santa Claus!" he cried,
"Nor reindeers hitched to sleighs—the teacher lied!"
While old Jim Findley chuckled at his side.

Jim Findley died, and Jimmy grew to be About as ornery, in time, as he—
A worthless vagabond, perhaps because
There wasn't any good old Santa Claus.

EOLUS.

UP TO THE HOUR of going to press the federal judge in New Jersey who says the sacred 18th was unconstitutional had not been invited to New York, given a brass band parade down Broadway to the city hall, presented with ten tons of roses and the key to the city, but—he will be, he will be. And asked what he wants for Christmas and how he would like to live in the White House in 1932.

OF COURSE YOU WANT TO KNOW!
How to Preserve a Sylphlike Figure!
How to Keep That School Girl Complexion!
What Is the Best Stock to Buy!
What Bait to Use in Fishing!
How to Make Delicious Home Brew!

Of course you do! Every intelligent boy or girl does! Well, dearie, the Linebook of 1930 won't help you a bit about those damn things, but it will help you heaps and heaps in so many other ways, darling; oh, you'd be surprised; and it's only a dime—10 cents on the hoof or 12 cents by mail.

IT LOOKS AS THOUGH the millions to relieve the drought sufferers won't get to them before they're inundated by the spring floods. R. H. L.

FROM THE TRIBUNE'S COLUMNS

16 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 19, 1914.

LONDON.—A dispatch from northern France says: "A week of successes for the allies has followed the resumption of hostilities in France and Flanders. Roulers has been captured after four fierce assaults on the German trenches. Repeated bayonet attacks have been pushed home at Lombaertzyde with the result that our patrols have advanced at Middlekirke, a few kilometers from Ostend."

LONDON.—A Petrograd correspondent sends the following: "The Germans' third incursion in Galicia has been arrested on the borders of the province. Some maneuvering of the Russian troops sufficed to check the invading columns, although they crossed the Carpathians on a wide front extending between Wieliczka and the head waters of the San river. The Russians are close to the Silesian border north of Cracow.

NACO, Ariz.—Many bullets from the Mexican side fell on United States territory today in the siege of Naco, Sonora, by Villa troops. Five bullets passed close to the army bombproofs.

CHICAGO.—Chicago and the country as a whole expect an upturn in business, commerce and industry as a result of the action of the interstate commerce commission yesterday in granting in part the 5 per cent advance in freight rates on railroads east of the Mississippi and north of the Ohio and Potomac rivers.

30 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 19, 1900.

CHICAGO.—Gifts of $1,525,000 to the University of Chicago were announced by President Harper at the convocation yesterday. Of this sum, $1,500,000 is given by John D. Rockefeller, founder of the university, and $25,000 is added by Leon Mandel to the $50,000 previously given by him. Mr. Rockefeller's donation swelled the total of his gifts to the university to $9,202,374.

LANSING, Mich.—The dinner given by Gov. Pingree, marking the end of his term, was a notable affair, despite the absence of the judges of the Supreme court and nearly all members of the senate, who had been sent special invitations. The banquet was given in the hall of representatives and the menu was elaborate, the wines plentiful, and the toasts lively. As soon as the cigars were lighted Gov. Pingree began a long, rambling address in which he scored almost every one against whom he had any sort of a grievance, and the Supreme court and newspapers in particular.

CHICAGO.—Encouraged by a gallon of whisky and a gallon of molasses, a 2,500 pound elephant climbed four flights of stairs in the Chicago Athletic clubhouse. It will take part in the annual circus tonight.

50 YEARS AGO TODAY

DECEMBER 19, 1880.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Kate Case Sprague filed a petition for divorce from Gov. William Sprague, charging adultery, other misbehaviors, and neglect to provide for herself and her family suitably. Gov. Sprague has declared his intentions of fighting the suit by every means in his power.

CHICAGO.—Roswell B. Bacon, supervisor of the town of South Chicago, filed in the recorder's office the bond of Marcus A. Farwell as town collector. It is for $6,075,000, and is signed by C. B. Farwell, George Schneider, J. W. Doane, B. P. Hutchinson, S. A. Kent, O. R. Keith, Morris Selz, John V. Farwell, D. K. Pearsons, Marshall Field, Murry Nelson, L. Z. Leiter, George M. Pullman, William T. Baker, John B. Lyon, N. K. Fairbank, William Borden, George F. Harding, W. C. D. Grannis, W. W. Kimball, and Henry W. King, all being among the best known citizens of Chicago.

CHICAGO.—The most brilliant wedding of the season took place yesterday in Grace Episcopal church, when Miss Addie Vanderpool Hibbard, eldest daughter of William Hibbard, of the firm of Hibbard & Spencer, became the bride of Robert B. Gregory, with Lyon & Healy, music dealers. No one was admitted without a card of invitation and the gathering was a very select one.

CONGRESSIONAL DELAYS.

Olney, Ill., Dec. 17.—Congress has been in session for nearly three weeks. Notwithstanding the urgent necessity for action, they have done nothing. Nothing but stall, heckle, banter, and indulge in personalities and schoolboy antics that would disgrace a well organized crossroads debating society. Constructive legislation has been forgotten in a sparring match for political preference and personal aggrandizement. Statesmanship has given way to the blundering tactics of the cheap politician.

It is high time that the people, with the coöperation of the press, bring pressure to effectively throttle these pettifoggers, show them that public patience is well nigh exhausted, and demand that they stand aside for the transaction of the nation's business. They tell us that "prosperity is just around the corner." Let's turn the corner and get intimately acquainted with it.

C. C. COVENTRY.

STATESMANSHIP.

Oak Park, Ill., Dec. 17.—Will you please tell me through your valued columns just what constructive legislation have such men as Nye, Borah, Shipstead, La Follette, Harrison, Caraway, and several others ever sponsored?

We are all talking hard times these days, and they surely are here. Does it help matters to have such nincompoops as the above mentioned men heckling the President all the time? I honestly believe they are the greatest factor for prolonging these hard times. What big business dares to forge ahead with plans of expansion? We all are looking with misapprehension at the big dome.

These men, to my estimation, belong in Russia. EMIL ANDERSON.

NOT RESPONSIBLE.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—I wish to come to the defense of the Tilden Technical High school students and also to the defense of all of our senior high school students in our city. Instead of criticizing our students for their conduct in rushing for places on our street cars it would be of more benefit to all concerned if our criticizing citizens would investigate the cause of such rushes.

The students are being taught to be on time and if they stand back and wait for our criticizing citizens to get on the car first the conductor looks out and sees the crowd waiting and pulls the bell to go ahead, thus leaving our students waiting on the corner for more cars that never come. This results in the students being tardy.

The question might be asked, "Why are these students waiting for cars during the rush hours?" Because these same criticizing citizens have failed to take an active interest in school affairs. Nearly all of our high schools operate either on double shifts or extended days. School starts as early as 8:15 a. m. and closes as late as 5 p. m., thus putting students on the streets during both rush hours. L. E. S.

A PLEA FOR BANKRUPTCY.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—THE TRIBUNE's editorial, "The Only Way to Reduce Taxes," is timely, but I doubt very much its accuracy. Of course reduction of expenditures could result in reduction of taxes, but would it? Under the present conditions with inferior political powers existent and a complete nonexistence of interest by the public in political affairs, I maintain that the only way to reduce expenditures is to reduce taxes. Complete bankruptcy by the city is the best thing that could possibly happen to it under the present circumstances. OBSERVER.

HOWLING FOR BUSINESS.

Chicago, Dec. 14.—As a resident of the Madison-Crawford district I wish to protest against the ear-splitting broadcasting sponsored by the merchants of this vicinity to stimulate their Christmas trade. Loud speakers have been installed on the roof of the Garfield State bank. These are set to be heard a mile away. Imagine their effect near at hand!

Saturday it was going all day and all evening. We had to listen to the Army-Navy game, literally screeched to high heaven. The rest of the program, apparently phonograph records, of Sousa's marches, "Indian Love Call," and "Silent Night," are bellowed and howled every day until one is tired to death of them.

We and others, I know, are going to do our Christmas shopping elsewhere as a protest against this inconsiderate advertising. M. C. H.

RAILROAD PROSPECTS.

Sterling, Ill., Dec. 13.—The interstate commerce board must feel very proud of the way they have regulated the rates of the railroads. Every day the stocks go lower and lower and each day is one nearer to the bankruptcy of every railroad in the United States. Thousands of people have put their money into the railroad stocks, thinking that being regulated by the United States government they would be a safe and sound investment, but alas, they have awakened to the truth that they have put their money into rail companies which are being driven into bankruptcy by the unfair and unjust methods of the interstate commerce commission. JOHN S. MILLER.

DR. TONNEY.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—The suspension of Dr. Frederic O. Tonney, a man of outstanding worth to the community, who has dedicated his best years to research in the interest of the welfare of mankind, is an insult to the people of this great city. By all means let us hope that public sentiment will be aroused so that Dr. Tonney will soon be back at his post in the research laboratory, where his scientific knowledge and untiring devotion [illegible] to do so much good for our welfare. PROFESSOR LAYS LATIN REVOLTS TO ECONOMIC SLUMP

Cites Decrease in South American Exports.

Political malnutrition had a good deal to do with the inoculation of South American countries with the fever of revolution, but the direct cause of the trouble in Argentina, Brazil, Bolivia, and Peru was a germ called economic depression. That was the analysis given yesterday by Prof. Chester Lloyd Jones, political scientist and director of the school of commerce of the University of Wisconsin, to the council of foreign relations at its luncheon at the Palmer house.

It is Argentina and Brazil in which this country is the more interested, Prof. Lloyd Jones explained, because of the amount of American capital invested there. This country had a $1,180,000,000 trade with Latin American countries in 1929, he pointed out, of which Argentina and Brazil handled 55 per cent.

Blames Economic Slump.

"In practically all four of these countries," the speaker said, "there was an economic element that sharpened a predisposition against the government to the point where, when business conditions began to get bad, there was a gradual reaction against the party or parties in power.

"Bolivia, ruled over by a group of the elite descended from the Spaniards, depends largely upon cotton and tin as exports for its financial health. Tin is one of the most speculative of the baser metals. So we have in Bolivia a population of 3,250,000, having under cultivation less than 2 per cent of the country, which is almost ten times the size of the state of Wisconsin, and these people depending largely on their export market of tin. When that went down there was still 70 million dollars to be repaid to American bankers, which had been borrowed shortly after the war to finance a great program of public improvements.

"There was further the element of resentment at the introduction there of a German to modernize their army. There were high taxes. And what, with all of them, the rebel forces took command, and while the outlook in Bolivia at the moment may be peaceful, I have not much hopes for the future of the American capital there.

Explains Peru's Troubles.

"In Peru, the government had made a good record for keeping peace up to recent times. But when business began to go bad, and copper, cotton, oil and sugar dropped, the opposition to President Leguia rose at an equal pace. Leguia had had a checkered career in the country, having been president, then deported, returned and manipulated an election there—as is the habit in South America—and returned himself to power. He was called the Mussolini of that continent. He had an ambitious program of exploitation for Peru. But the vast public improvements started on borrowed funds have not been brought sufficiently far along to yield any return, consequently the machinery is rusting in the ditches and there is no money to pay for it.

"Leguia may possibly have closed that chapter of Peru's history in which it was ruled successively by dictators, but I doubt it. I believe that there will be others to follow in Leguia's footsteps.

Discusses Irigoyen's Fall.

"Hipolito Irigoyen, Argentina's former president, was one of the most widely known and respected statesmen in South America before he was driven from office. Like other propagandists, he did not recognize the power of organization. He believed in a one man government, so when he was ousted there was no one to take his place.

"He maintained for Argentina a policy of isolation which is now being retracted. Argentina embassies are being reopened in various countries where they had been closed, and I believe it is possible that the country may even at some later time join the league of nations, which Irigoyen never permitted.

"The landed aristocracy are back again in the saddle in Argentina. Many of Irigoyen's policies, which were fine in their way, are being fulfilled, but I do not believe his plan to break up the big land holdings by high taxes will ever be carried out.

Coffee and Brazil's Revolt.

"Three times Brazil has succeeded by a fortunate combination of circumstances in stabilizing the price of coffee in the world market, at much gain to herself. She tried it a fourth time, but whereas before, drought, frost or the world buying market just after the war helped her, this time there was too much coffee, and the Brazilian product flooded the market. Only four times in her history has Brazil balanced her budget. They have taken a foreign bond issue to pay off the debts. But when there is no economic return within the country, its financial situation, as now, is bound to grow more serious. Especially since Brazil, since the world war, has borrowed $232,000,000 from the United States to put through public improvements, and where the money to repay it is to come from is a problem."

GOVERNMENT BUREAU WILL SEEK SOURCE OF POISON ALCOHOL

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Numerous reports of death from alcohol poisoning have caused the industrial alcohol bureau of the treasury to take steps to determine the source of the beverage which it believes to be synthetic wood alcohol manufactured and sold without government supervision.

Commissioner Doran, in a letter to Senator Phipps, called attention to the reports, saying the mixture sold as industrial solvent and anti-freeze solution was not "amenable to any federal statute."

"As to this latter material, namely, methanol, not now under government control, I believe there is presented a very serious problem, and its seriousness lies in the fact of its wide sale and ready accessibility to the general public through thousands of garages and filling stations," Doran said.

"Knowing as I do that some people drink a denatured alcohol mixture regardless of its repulsive character I am alarmed at the reports of fatalities due to this synthetic wood alcohol."

Use of the solution increased with the coming of cold weather and brought larger numbers of reports of deaths.

ROCKOLA TERM IN JAIL UPHELD BY HIGH COURT

David C. Rockola, whose refusal to testify against six police captains in the so-called $1,000,000 slot machine scandal case resulted in the collapse of the prosecution, must serve a six months' contempt of court sentence, the Supreme court ruled yesterday. The court refused to reverse the sentence imposed by Chief Justice John P. McGoorty.

Rockola confessed before the grand jury that graft money was paid to the captains and some ward politicians, but when it came to repeating his testimony before the jury he balked and was given the jail sentence. The court, however, reversed the sentence in this case several months ago.

The sentence which was upheld was one imposed when Rockola continued to be a recalcitrant witness in the trial of James (High Pockets) O'Brien, who was alleged to be the brains of the slot machine syndicate. O'Brien fled at the time of the exposé, but returned and stood trial after the case against the police officials and others collapsed by reason of Rockola's refusal to testify. O'Brien was also liberated because of the same reason.

WRIT FREES MAN JAILED TO FORCE LIQUOR EVIDENCE

Michigan Supreme Court Orders Release.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The Michigan Supreme court this afternoon ordered the release on bail of Frank Harrand, Wexford county farmer, who has been in jail at Cadillac since Nov. 7 because he would not inform Judge E. J. Millington of Cadillac Recorder's court from whom he obtained liquor sufficient to bring about his arrest for intoxication.

Supreme Court Sets Bond.

The high tribunal granted, on petition of A. W. Jenny, Muskegon attorney, a writ of certiorari permitting review of the circumstances of Harrand's incarceration on contempt charges. Bond for release of Harrand was fixed at $500. It was indicated that Harrand will be at liberty at least until well after the holidays, as arguments before the court here will not be heard until the January term.

Harrand's case has aroused statewide indignation and Gov. Fred W. Green was urged to take some action to liberate him. When the governor found that his hands were tied, as he cannot, under an attorney general's ruling, pardon a person jailed for contempt, a resort to the Supreme court followed. A group of Cadillac business men is understood to be financing the effort to bring about Harrand's release and clarify the legal powers of a lower court judge in such circumstances.

Should Judge Millington's position be upheld, prohibition opponents here see an intolerable situation created wherever the judiciary happens to be strongly supporting the dry laws. Every person arrested for drinking could be forced to turn informer or remain indefinitely jailed.

Denies Knowing Wanted Evidence.

According to information reaching the capitol, Harrand denies that he is even capable of complying with Judge Millington's demand, as he did not know from whom he obtained liquor while attending a country dance. He was furnished a few drinks by a group of men standing outside the dance hall in the dark, it is said, and he is so uncertain of their identity that he could not provide the judge with the information were he so minded.

WARREN B. BOVARD, VICE PRESIDENT OF U. S. C., KILLS SELF

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Los Angeles, Cal., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Marriage between a university co-ed and a university officer, her senior by thirteen years, ended today in the suicide of the official, Warren G. Bovard, 45, controller and vice president of the University of Southern California and a son and nephew of founders of that institution. Bovard ended his life with one shot through the temple early this morning at his magnificent home.

His former co-ed wife, Mrs. Berdine Jackman Bovard, whom he married in 1923 when she was a college student, and who recently separated from him, was in Wichita, Kas.

Bovard left two messages and a recent letter, which he received from his wife.

Another message read: "Am going to try to find Ned."

"Ned" was Bovard's name for his long-time friend, the late E. L. Doheny Jr., who was shot to death in February, 1928, by Doheny's male secretary.

Bovard was a bank director, had served as executive secretary to ex-Governor William D. Stephens of California, and was for a time major in the United States army. He was a member of the Los Angeles park commission and of the Olympic games committee for 1932, was ex-president of the Optimist club and a leader in civic, social and lodge affairs. Bovard leaves a considerable fortune.

SEIZE STILL IN HOME.

Prohibition agents yesterday seized a 300 gallon alcohol still at the home of Dan Kapaec, 13534 Avenue N, arresting Kapaec and confiscating 170 gallons of alcohol and 16,000 gallons of mash.

Young Bandits Get $7,000 at Wenona, Ill.

Peoria, Ill., Dec. 18. — (AP) — Two young men, armed with rifles and revolvers, held up five employés and eight customers of the First State bank at Wenona, near here, and escaped with about $7,000 just before closing time today.

The men lined up Lyon Carr, president; Omer N. Harter, cashier; two assistant cashiers and a woman clerk. Six customers and two small girls were forced to lie on the floor. After seizing the loot, the men forced Carr to accompany them to their automobile to prevent their being shot. As they sped away, Harter and R. B. Work, one of the assistant cashiers, fired at them fruitlessly.

Bandit Gets $4,976.21.

Plainfield, Ind., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Waiting outside in a parked automobile until the First National Bank and Trust company was opened for business here today, an unmasked, well dressed, middle aged man, carrying a briefcase, followed the cashier inside and covered him with a revolver. As customers straggled in each in turn were herded into a corner. When the assistant cashier finally came with the keys to the vault, he was forced to produce $4,976.21, the available currency. The robber escaped in his automobile.

ORATORY FLIES IN ALDERMANIC BUDGET DEBATE

Nelson Blames Assembly for City's Woes.

Ald. Oscar F. Nelson [46th], Thompson floor leader in the city council, last night laid the foundation for shifting blame from the Thompson administration to the fifty members of the council and from them to the assessing bodies and the legislature.

Ald. Sheldon W. Govier [9th], a Democrat, in response declared that had the remedy he advocated for financial relief last June been adopted the council would not find itself in the position, as it does now, of not being able to increase the police, fire and health forces of the city.

Govier said that his program then, as now, was to pare the budget to the bone, taking out the jobs of the political henchmen and abolishing useless departments. Then, he said, at least some of the need for the restrictive financial relief legislation would have been eliminated.

The debate in the evening session of the council finance committee also was the occasion for Ald. Nelson's annual speech to the aldermen.

Last year he spoke on reformers. Last night he chose the financial relief legislation and Ald. Govier as a sidelight after the latter had voiced objections to Nelson's logic. Protests of the acting chairman and some of the aldermen were overriden and Nelson carried on with his theme.

Alcock Brings on Debate.

Acting Police Commissioner Alcock unwittingly precipitated the Nelson-Govier debate. He came before the committee and asked for 300 more policemen instead of the 3,500 that he had intended to ask for, saying that he had learned of the city's financial difficulties and that it would be useless to request 3,500.

"The responsibility is ours," said Nelson, "if we do nothing and there is a crime wave. Personally, I think that we will have one. The skirts of the police department are clear, for Alcock has asked for a larger force.

"But to clear the skirts of the council we should transfer the blame to the legislature, where the restrictions were placed upon the council, and to the assessing bodies, who cut the governmental incomes, and ultimately to the people who have failed to bring about a reform in the tax situation over the last 20 years, Republican and Democratic administrations alike."

Govier Attacks Relief Bills.

Govier—The council, however, approved the legislative bills that now restrict us. I voted against approval.

Nelson—We did indorse the bills, but what would have happened if we hadn't?

Govier—We wouldn't have had these restrictions and responsibilities.

Nelson—Nor the relief.

Govier—Those bills were passed to raise taxes, to make it impossible for us to put on more police, to restrict us. We can't have 3,500 more police because the legislature has tied our hands.

Nelson—Without relief how would we have paid our police?

Urge Budget Slashing.

Govier—My answer to that last June and now is that every member of this committee should delve into this budget earnestly and sincerely, pare it to the bone, cut out the political pay rollers, cut out useless departments.

"That was my answer last June and that is my answer now. As an example, take the deputy city treasurer at $7,000 a year. That's not needed. When we have taken out these things then we will have done the best we can and no man can say contrary."

At this and other points the acting chairman, Ald. James B. Bowler [25th], and other members of the committee strove either to end the argument or to take sides. They were unsuccessful and Nelson proceeded as follows:

"We acquiesced in the Strawn program. We were in a critical position. There were only two votes against approval of the bills, Govier and Ald. O. E. Northrup [19th]. Tonight we have the situation where a member of this committee says that we can't blame the restrictions on him.

Nelson Places Blame.

"I want the record to show that when Alcock asked for more men we didn't have the money and that the only remedy is to go to the legislature and get relief, which will mean raise the taxes. The only solution I saw was in a constitutional amendment and that was defeated on Nov. 4 and cannot come again for four years.

"I want the record to show that if there are crime waves, large fire losses and epidemics of the itch or scarlet fever or anything else, that the department heads have made requests for ample forces and the responsibility is on the council and we can only transfer it to assessing bodies, who made the valuations, and to the legislature."

The committee resumed with Alcock, who stated that the department needs 6,800 men in addition to the present force of 5,700, a total of 12,500 to patrol Chicago properly.

Nelson was in the fight again when the license bureau appropriations were under discussion. Of this department, Douglas Sutherland, secretary of the Civic federation said:

"I venture to say that you can abolish the entire department and not lose $50,000 in corporate license fees in the first year."

In the afternoon session the committee heard from Health Commissioner Kegel, Fire Commissioner Goodrich, and a number of other department heads on their requirements for 1931.

Chicago Youth Is Drowned While on Fishing Trip

Robert Williams, 25 years old, a Chicago plasterer, was drowned in the Sale river near Louisiana, Mo., on Monday, according to word received yesterday by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Williams, 2857 North Troy street. Search for Williams and a friend was started when they did not return from a fishing expedition. An overturned boat was found Wednesday and yesterday a deep hole in the river was dragged in the hope of recovering the bodies.

COUNTY BOARD WOMEN DEMAND FOREST INQUIRY

Women commissioners on the county board yesterday raised a storm about purchases of land for the forest preserves and also expresed indignation that a Republican attorney should be employed by the Democratic board at a $100 a day salary.

"The girls are learning a little something more about politics every day," commented an observer after a meeting of the real estate committee at which the commotion occurred.

The committee ordered an investigation of appraisals made by the Chicago and Cook county real estate boards of land to be purchased for the forest preserves. The real estate valuations were alleged to be too high.

When the matter of condemnation proceedings for forest preserve acquisitions was brought up it was revealed that special attorneys representing the county board at $100 a day included Frank S. Righeimer, former county judge, known as a Thompson Republican.

"How does Mr. Righeimer happen to be our attorney and he a Republican?" asked Mrs. Edward J. Fleming, commissioner. "I thought we had a Democratic board. And why must we pay such high fees?"

"We must overlook party principles when we need technical specialists," explained Commissioner William Busse.

Hostess to world celebrities

Mrs. William J. Chalmers

Crowns her dinners with this fragrant COFFEE*

Even a dinner to royalty is all in the season's routine for Mrs. Chalmers. Yesterday, a merchant prince. Tomorrow the Opera Star of the age. What dazzling scenes these Georgian candelabra might describe! What wit, what charming conversations have blossomed here under the mellow influence of savory Manor House Coffee!

"Not only is it priceless at my formal dinners but after a hard day of caring for my 110 little cripples," says Mrs. Chalmers, whose life work centers in the Home for Crippled Children, "nothing lifts my spirit like a cup of cheering, fragrant Manor House Coffee."

Tune in W-G-N every Sunday night, 7 to 8 o'clock, for the Manor House Dramatizations of the Grand Operas ...with stars singing the principal arias.

EVERY detail of Mrs. Chalmers' fascinating apartment on Lake Shore Drive gaily expresses her genius for hospitality. The walls and tables are crowded with mementos of famous folk. Here, a lace cloth presented by royalty — there, a daguerreotype of Abraham Lincoln and Mrs. Chalmers' father, who was Allan Pinkerton, Civil War Secret Service head.

"I have seen so many excellent dinners spoiled by commonplace coffee," says Mrs. Chalmers, "and so many mediocre meals redeemed with this delightful Manor House, that I cannot see why any woman chances her success on any other blend."

"I have used Manor House Coffee since Chicago was a little city. And still it is the richest quality I can find to complete my dinners. I depend on it to create that relaxed after-dinner atmosphere for which every hostess strives."

This rare quality of perfecting the after-dinner moment is the reason why 92% of Chicago's most distinguished hostesses serve no other blend of coffee than McLaughlin's Manor House. This preferred coffee owes its mellow richness to months of natural ageing . . . gains its rare "mosaic of flavors" from the secret, personal blending of a master hand.

A costly method, yes, and yet you may buy this classic blend for but a few cents a pound more than the most ordinary coffees. Therefore, since the entire success of your meals and your reputation as a hostess, depends upon the coffee, it is true economy to serve McLaughlin's Manor House, the blend of connoisseurs.

DEADLINES SET IN GOOD FELLOW CHRISTMAS DRIVE

Many Children Are to Be Made Happy.

With only six days left before Christmas, the Good Fellow headquarters yesterday announced deadlines for Santa Claus enlistments. If you want the name of a family deserving of a Christmas basket of holiday groceries and children's toys, mail your application not later than Sunday to the Good Fellow, THE TRIBUNE, Chicago, or call in person not later than noon of Dec. 24 at the Good Fellow headquarters in THE TRIBUNE offices at Dearborn and Madison streets.

Due to the temporary business depression, there are hundreds of homes in Chicago this year where children will find empty stockings on Christmas morning. If you want to save some of these children from bitter disappointment, there's a coupon printed on this page for your convenience in applying for names of families.

Only One to a Family.

The Good Fellow department receives the names from the Christmas bureau of the Chicago Council of Social Agencies, a clearing house for 200 Chicago charities. If you accept one of these families, it becomes your pleasant obligation to deliver food and toys to the home. Only one Good Fellow is assigned to a family.

Don't send money, food, or clothing for Christmas baskets to THE TRIBUNE. It is your job, Mr. Good Fellow—and you'll enjoy it—to visit the home personally with your basket of groceries and toys.

The money donated to the Good Fellow fund is used in providing necessities for destitute families through the winter or until they become self supporting again. There are no deductions for overhead.

Many Benefits on Program.

During the holidays there will be many social functions raising money for the rehabilitation fund. The Illinois Women's Athletic club gave a supper dance last night. The South Side Old Time Dance club will hold a Good Fellow benefit tomorrow night in the ballroom at 6932 South Halsted street.

The St. Clair hotel, 162 East Ohio street, is sponsoring a Christmas supper dance, open to the public, tomorrow night to raise money for Good Fellow baskets.

A doll show and auction sale will be held this afternoon and tonight in the Seneca hotel, 200 East Chestnut street. Among those who have donated dolls are Miss Anita Blair, Miss Mary McCormic, Mrs. Roy D. Keehn, Mrs. Burt Massee, and Mrs. Parke Brown. Judge Joseph David has been drafted to act as auctioneer. Proceeds of the sales will be divided among the various newspaper charity enterprises, including the Good Fellow fund.

GOOD FELLOWS!

NEW AIR LINE SHIPS TO RUN EVERY 2 HOURS

Reports that the Stinson-Cord corporation will shortly start a passenger air service between Chicago, Detroit, Toledo, and Cleveland, flying planes over the airway eight times daily each way, were practically authenticated yesterday in the announcement from Toledo that the company had leased hangar space for a ticket office and waiting room at the transcontinental airport there.

Announcement of the complete plans is expected today. Chicago is expected to be the chief terminal of the line which, according to reports, will shortly be extended to St. Louis, Kansas City, and Dallas. Part of the plans, it is said, call for the construction of a big hangar and ticket office at the Municipal airport.

Its planes are expected to land and take off from the Municipal airport every two hours during the first weeks of operation, after which the service may be increased to hourly flights.

Mills died Jan. 20, 1929. Deductions of $1,299,631 brought the estate to $39,769,059.

According to their father's will, the undersecretary and his sisters, Beatrice, the Countess Granard of England, and Gladys Phipps, wife of Henry S. Phipps of Long Island and Florida, receive the income from trust funds of $12,199,734 each.

HEGOVIC TAKEN TO PRISON AMID LOUD PROTESTS

Rudolph Hegovic, 19 years old, who was sentenced to 99 years in prison by a jury in Judge Joseph David's Criminal court when he was found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Mary Pelletier of Berwyn, was taken to the penitentiary yesterday afternoon still protesting his innocence. He spent most of the day entertaining some 30 prisoners in the G section of the jail by proclaiming that he is innocent and should be promptly given his liberty.

Warden David Moneypenny ordered Hegovic's immediate removal to the penitentiary because of his possibility in causing trouble among the other prisoners.

Hegovic practically defended himself in the trial which ended Wednesday afternoon. He insisted on making an argument to the jury as well as questioning many of the state's witnesses. His lawyers had advised him to plead guilty as a sure way to escape the electric chair, but he demanded a jury trial.

CANAL TRUSTEES WILL NOT BUY NEW CAR FOR BOWLER

At the request of President Thomas J. Bowler, the sanitary district trustees yesterday rejected a recommendation of the finance committee that an $8,000 automobile he purchased for his use. The action also eliminates from the budget a chauffeur's salary approximating $2,400 annually.

William Rothmann, a Democrat and a former member of the board of education, was named attorney for the district. At the same time Walter E. Beebe, who had been attorney under the Elmore administration, was retained temporarily as associate attorney at $15,000 a year, the same figure as Rothmann's salary. Rothmann is a member of the law firm of West & Eckhart, of which Roy O. West, Republican national committeeman, is the senior member.

MOTHER'S STORY: PENNILESS AND CHRISTMAS NEAR

For weeks Sally Joy Brown of THE TRIBUNE's bureau which is helping the unemployed has been reminding Chicagoans that one of the best Christmas presents this year is a job for some jobless worker.

Yesterday came a letter that speaks for itself as to the needs of hundreds of men and women as Christmas day draws nearer. Therefore, Sally is passing it on for you to read.

"Could you please try and help me get some place to tide me over the Christmas holidays?" the letter said. "You see we have had some very hard times in my home for a year. The house is in the hands of a receiver and I have two boys going to school.

"I have never gone to work before, but really, Miss Brown, it is Christmas almost and we are penniless. Will you try and get me some place quickly? I could not do heavy cleaning, but I can assist with lots of other things a mother needs when she is entertaining. I will do my very best to do well. I am ashamed truly to ask this, but I would like help this Christmas."

Teacher Sends Appeal.

Another letter came yesterday from a jobless teacher, a widow who was employed by the public schools for several years. She is now living in a small attic until she finds work. She has had experience in nursing. She thought she might be able to earn a little money if some one could give her a typewriter.

"People are really responding with Christmas jobs," said Sally, as she scanned the day's receipts of job offers, which were sent to the Illinois Free Employment service, 116 North Dearborn street, to be distributed among the jobless.

"Mrs. B. on Evans avenue put in an order for a woman to help her serve at a party on Christmas night. The S. S. Printing company on Superior street, having extra work due to the Christmas season, called for a typist, and will pay $20 a week."

Store Wants Workers.

Another Christmas list of job offers came from a State street department store, which sent an order for four or five upholsterers. Mr. S., in his factory on West Chicago avenue, found a temporary job for a man during Christmas holidays.

A number of calls came for window washers and men to beat rugs and otherwise help in putting homes in order before the celebration of Christmas. If you have a job or can create one, call Sally Joy Brown at Superior 0100.

75 CITIES AIDING EMPLOYMENT BY BUILDING DRIVE

Survey Shows Work in Illinois Towns.

Seventy-five Illinois cities are stimulating employment by instituting campaigns urging citizens to spruce up their homes and encouraging business leaders to start their repair work and building expansion now, according to a survey of the Illinois Manufacturers association made yesterday.

Thirty other cities are successfully carrying out buying campaigns and these and still other towns are boosting local pay rolls by urging public improvements — the building and repairing of roads, sewers, water works plants, and other public buildings, the survey showed.

Predict After Inventory Spurt.

In connection with its movement to create "steady buying for steady business" the Chicago Association of Commerce yesterday reported the receipt of many letters from retailers and manufacturers forecasting general expansion after the January inventory period. Buyers, the report stated, are already chafing over the scantiness of their stocks, although business heads generally believe that they are impelled from an economic standpoint to withstand the stockup pressure until the completion of the inventory.

Contributions to the $5,000,000 relief fund sought by the governor's commission yesterday totaled $59,000, Philip R. Clarke, chairman of the soliciting force, announced. The individual gifts committee, headed by Joseph M. Cudahy, reported a contribution of $25,000 from Joy Morton. Retabulation of figures at commission headquarters showed the grand total to date has reached $2,486,000.

Elks to Shelter Homeless.

Judge Michael Feinberg, exalted ruler of the order of Elks, announced last night that this fraternal organization will care for homeless men who have no shelter during the winter months. Coöperating with the governor's commission and other agencies the lodge will distribute tickets among homeless men, directing them to shelters be maintained by the lodge.

ELECTRIC TRAIN SERVICE OPENS; RIDERS REJOICE

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The first electric train to run over the newly electrified Lackawanna railroad between Hoboken and Morristown, N. J., pulled out of Hoboken today and was met all along the line by outbursts of civic rejoicing such as rarely have been accorded a train.

Invitations were issued to about 1,000 persons to be the first to ride on the new train and passengers boarded the train at all points between Hoboken and Morristown.

From Millburn westward reception committees, high school children and bands met the train at the station and indulged in appropriate flag waving.

The largest reception was accorded at Morristown, where the mayor, members of the common council and what seemed like all the inhabitants of the town gathered to rejoice over the new train which will get them to New York fourteen minutes quicker than the old steam propelled train.

FIND YOUTH'S BODY IN RIVER.

Quincy, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Authorities are investigating the mysterious death of Theo Wienhoff, 22, shoe worker, whose body was found floating in the Mississippi river here today.

TWO BOYS, 16, STEAL FROM CAFE; GIVE TO WIDOW; ARE HELD

Two boys, each 16 years old, were held yesterday in the Juvenile detention home because they mixed charity with crime. They are George Dicks, 1916 West Jackson boulevard, and James Monton, 16 South Damen avenue.

The story of their predicament began several weeks ago when they looted the restaurant at 1834 West Van Buren street. Food, cooking utensils, a radio, a clock, and other articles valued at $230 were taken. Policemen A. Klasen and David Mulcrone of the Warren avenue station investigated. They found some of the articles in the home of Mrs. Alice Orr, 43 years old, 1836 West Van Buren street, mother of nine children and widow of a month. "Some good boys gave me the articles," she said.

The "good boys" were Dicks and Monton. They were seized and told police they felt sorry for the widow and gave her part of their loot. Mrs. Orr was arraigned yesterday before Judge Frederick Elliott in the Des Plaines street station on a charge of receiving stolen property. She was placed on probation for a year.

RULES EVANSTON BAN ON SUNDAY MOVIES IS VALID

Holds City Council Can Prohibit Them.

Sunday movies in Evanston will be prohibited until the city council decides otherwise. Circuit Judge Philip L. Sullivan so ruled yesterday in denying an injunction to restrain the police from interfering with the shows.

In terminating—at least for awhile—the long drawn out controversy, Judge Sullivan declared the matter is legislative and not judicial and therefore for the city council to decide by ordinance. Attorneys representing the Union Bank of Chicago, who as receivers for the Varsity Theater building in Evanston had instituted the injunction proceedings, announced that they will appeal.

The Evanston Sunday business ordinance under which the movies were banned has been in force for 75 years. In a referendum last April the Sunday movies were approved by a margin of 56 votes. The city council, however, refused to take cognizance of the vote.

Overrules Master's Report.

The injunction petition was referred to Master in Chancery George E. Gorman, who upheld the movies by ruling that the referendum requires the city council to expunge its ordinance. This was overruled by Judge Sullivan.

During the hearings Judge Sullivan had said the ordinance was unconstitutional because it was religiously discriminatory. In his decision he modified this opinion by saying:

"While there is doubt as to the constitutionality of the ordinance, yet no one seems to have been injured by its provisions, or at least sufficiently injured to bring it to the attention of a judcial tribunal.

Referendum of "No Effect."

"It seems reasonable to construe the provisions not as creating any special privilege to any class, but to give all people the right to exercise the privilege of observing whatever day they please as their day of worship.

"The referendum has no effect on the action of the city council other than to indicate the desire of the people. To enforce the decision of the referendum it is necessary to elect persons so inclined to the council."

ENGLAND SPENDS 662 MILLIONS TO GIVE IDLE JOBS

White Paper Cites Causes of World Slump.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The British Labor government had approved up to Sept. 30 an expenditure of nearly £136,000,000 [approximately $662,000,000] on measures to provide work for the unemployed, according to a government "white paper" issued today.

On the basis commonly accepted in England that $5,000,000 provides work for one year for 4,000 men, these schemes would produce more than 500,000 "man years" of work, or 150,000,000 days of labor.

The projects include railways, docks and harbors, water supply, electricity, gas and sewage, land reclamation and sea drainage. There is provision also for defense works, parks and recreation fields and many local improvements.

Tariff Barriers Blamed.

Referring to the unemployment problem, the white paper says:

"Since December, 1929, the character of the unemployment problem has been transformed by a world trade depression of quite exceptional severity. The situation is aggravated by various complicating factors arising from the depression; the depreciation in exchange values of the currencies of certain countries, financial failure and stock exchange losses, a general atmosphere of uncertainty and apprehension which is inimical to business enterprise. These developments have been international in scope and lay outside of Great Britain and indeed outside of Europe."

The white paper asserts that the growth of tariff barriers throughout the world has added to the difficulties of British export trade as a whole.

Open Business Drive.

"These difficulties," it continues, "were further increased by the fact that Great Britain was the only one of the belligerent countries in the late war which had restored its currency from a depreciated level to its prewar parity with gold. As the result of such difficulties, important industries had lost ground in the export markets and the loss was never fully made good by compensating developments in other trades."

The well being of the population, however, has been maintained in a degree comparing favorably with experience in any other crisis, it is declared. An active policy is being maintained to increase the efficiency of the British business organization and to put British industry in a stronger position for competing in world markets, the paper asserts.

60 Needy Families Aided by University Students

Champaign, Ill., Dec. 18.—(AP)—University of Illinois students tonight presented L. M. Tobin, president of the Family Welfare society with $300 and clothing for sixty needy families. T. W. Swain, of Benton, Ill.; John R. Adams of Rockford, Ill.; L. A. Peterson of Chicago, and Elizabeth Deberard of Winnetka, Ill., conducted the campaign for cash and clothing. Swain is president of the senior class.

NEW PREMIER OF FRANCE VICTOR IN HECTIC SESSION

Wins Confidence by a Narrow Margin.

PARIS, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Premier Theodore Steeg and his six day old cabinet today captured a vote of confidence by a majority of only seven votes in their first appearance before a hostile chamber of deputies.

The vote was 291 against 284 and the oppositionists vowed they would overthrow the new ministry after the new year's recess.

Cabinet Loses 3 Officials.

Steeg's day began in an air of pessimism. After much effort last week he finally formed a ministry to succeed that of Andre Tardieu and immediate attacks and defections began. The situation was made worse by the resignation of three officials this afternoon just before the cabinet went before the chamber with its initial declaration of policy. They were opposed to M. Steeg's ministerial declaration in favor of laical schools as opposed to the giving of religious instruction.

But this very thing won the favor of the left groups, which staged a demonstration of enthusiasm such as seldom is seen even in the temperamental French lower house.

Herriot Pleads for Peace.

The intervention of former Premier Edouard Herriot was viewed as another factor in the victory. In an impassioned appeal M. Herriot called on the chamber not to precipitate another ministerial crisis at this stage of affairs.

The voting was hectic, so much so that stuffiing of the ballot boxes gave rise to an early report that government had been defeated by ten votes. It was found that the urn used for the tallying was filled with more than 1,000 ballots, whereas less than 600 should normally be there. And a forecast of future trouble was heard in the shouts of "Dissolution!" from many deputies.

It was noted that M. Tardieu, retiring premier and leader of the opposition, scrupulously refrained from intervention throughout the six hour sitting.

ROB COLLECTOR OF $65.

A Negro robber yesterday took $65 from Robert Sanderfer, 5301 Ellis avenue, a collector for a phonograph company, when he pointed a gun at the collector in a stairway at 723 East 48th street.

FRESH SUMMER FOODS BLOOM IN CHICAGO STORES

Come from All Over World to You.

BY PAUL POTTER.

Snow covered and frozen though gardens and orchards may be in Chicagoland, housewives continue through the holidays to serve the most varied array of fresh vegetables.

Tender leaves of lettuce and a score of other delicate and perishable edibles greet the hungry family in midwinter, looking as fresh as if they just had been picked instead of having traveled a thousand miles or so to reach an eager consumer.

Let's go shopping in the winter fruit and vegetable gardens, transported indoors and located in over a thousand shopping centers of this vast consuming area. It's a safe wager that in any store where customers create a sufficient demand, the variety of greens, tubers, and fruits that the average person would find unidentifiable would scarcely be named and counted on his one hand—possibly even both.

Strawberries from South.

Newest and rarest of the surprises will be the first strawberries of the season. They've been plucked from great berry beds in Louisiana, and are just coming onto the market. They'll rival in appeal the citrus fruits for breakfast in those homes where mother likes to surprise and please the family.

But some of these other odd looking articles in white, yellow and green jackets may offer speculative possibilities. From the sunny southland have come shallots, parsley, escarole or endive, collards, broccoli, eggplants, peppers, squash, cauliflower, chicory, chives, "cukes," tangerines, as well as many other products more familiar to the Chicagoan's shopping list.

Parsley, whose tender foliage is more decorative than edible on most dinner tables, is not so confusing in the store front displays. But try to pick out the relatives in the cabbage family in these collections.

Consider the Shallot.

Shallots, also called scallions or eschalots, are akin to garlic, being prized by some for seasoning or pickles. Collards are a kind of cabbage picked in early youth, before the leaves form a tight wrapping called the cabbage's "head." Cauliflower, with white meaty centers, resemble the cabbage at first glance, while broccoli, with a flavor and tenderness all its own, might be mistaken for baby cabbages.

Head lettuce from Arizona or California comes to Chicago by the trainload for dainty salads and sandwiches. Tomatoes in bright red skins come from Cuba. Cauliflower, carrots, chicory come with the broad leafed spinach from Texas.

Some little cardboard boxes, when the top is opened, disclose a miniature garden encased. The slender shoots of green, flagpoles on a buried tuber, are known as chives, a gift from Europe for Americans who love this cousin of the onion or leek whose awl shaped leaves make a delicious seasoning.

Onions Are Dearer.

Speaking of onions, we wonder at the comparatively increased prices in recent weeks, and are told that hundreds of carloads of them, in temporary storage at market centers, were frozen late in November and early December. One must watch quality and price closely to satisfy the inward demands for the flavor that only onions can supply.

Grapefruit are selling at cheaper prices than for years, just now, with thousands of acres of these trees in Florida, Texas and Porto Rico just coming into bearing after recent years of sudden national demand at luxury prices. Oranges from the south and west coast are plentiful and cheap this Christmas for the same reason, while tangerines are to be found in nearly every fruit store. Have you tasted them this fall? For those who love a milder fruit than the orange, the tangerine is a treat.

A Continent Supplies Us.

Look at the variety of spots on the western hemisphere from which Chicagoland reaches out to draw its daily trainloads of perishable foods: Beets, parsnips, turnips, beans, eggplant, radishes, and many other garden products from Florida, Louisiana, Arizona, New Mexico, California, Cuba and Porto Rico. Sweet potatoes from Tennessee. Onions, cranberries and beans from Michigan, Wisconsin, and near-by farms. Apples from the northwest or from southern Illinois. Potatoes from Idaho, Minnesota, Ohio and nearby truck gardens. Carrots from Texas or California. The whole continent seems to be our winter garden.

The modern Chicagoland housewife has a wider selection of fruits and vegetables, superior in quality and available during a longer season, than did her mother or grandmother who had ample garden space and cellar room. And today her "store gardener" has them waiting for her whenever she gets ready to use them, just around the corner.

Five Are Awarded $5 Each in the "Food Poets" Contest

Five prizes of $5 each were given to winners in the "food poets" contest announced in the Friday food section of THE TRIBUNE Dec. 5. The winners were: Miss Margaret Gedl, 1748 West 100th place; Mrs. Esther Anderson, 613 Main street, Michigan City, Ind.; Mrs. C. G. Powell, 843 North Mapleton avenue, Oak Park; Mrs. R. J. Vrooman, 2005 Hartzell street, Evanston, and Mrs. Kenneth T. White, 4863 North Paulina.

Five Tell What They Want for Christmas Breakfast

Herewith is launched a little propaganda for the Christmas breakfast. Evidence of the gross neglect of this meal, which holds immense possibilities, was displayed in an inquiry made by a reporter investigating appetites.

"For what, in the way of a Christmas breakfast, does your heart yearn?" five persons were asked.

Whereat the five, one by one, looked blank and replied, "Christmas breakfast? Don't you mean Christmas dinner?"

"Well, you do eat breakfast on Christmas, don't you?" the I. R. persisted.

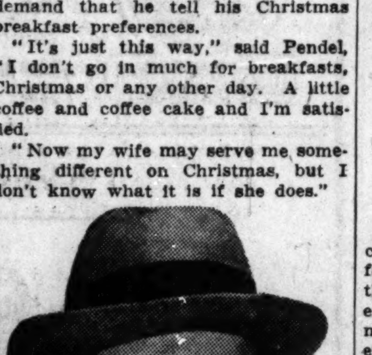
Miss Hazel Brown, 525 North Austin boulevard, a private secretary, thought she did, but memories of Christmas dinners entirely overshadowed any of Christmas breakfasts.

"Well, if I had the ideal Christmas breakfast," she said thoughtfully, "it would be brought to me in bed, and would consist of orange juice, toast and coffee. But wait—that's no breakfast for Christmas, is it? I think I'd have grapefruit, nut waffles with maple sirup, bacon, coffee and the coffeecake my sister makes, with apples and cinnamon cooked on top."

Henry Pendel, 1059 Oakdale avenue, a law recorder, was nonplussed by the demand that he tell his Christmas breakfast preferences.

"It's just this way," said Pendel, "I don't go in much for breakfasts, Christmas or any other day. A little coffee and coffee cake and I'm satisfied.

"Now my wife may serve me something different on Christmas, but I don't know what it is if she does."



Andy Petersen, 3418 McLean avenue, a filing clerk, had considerable difficulty in picturing his perfect Christmas breakfast for other reasons. His mother is German, and his father's ancestry is Danish. Petersen's favorite breakfast dish, he said, is "lut fisk," which is neither German nor Danish but Swedish. It is a fish dish.

And with this dish Petersen would have "strusel kuchen," a form of coffee cake, and "kaffee-ak," which is black coffee with a dash of Bourbon in it. That is his definition of a good Christmas breakfast.

Mrs. Caroline Quigley, 748 Belden avenue, typist, wishes a Christmas breakfast of baked apples, bran toast, country link sausage, fried eggs, cranberry jelly, and coffee.

"I never thought much about Christmas breakfast before," she said.

The moral of which is: Housewives, defend the Christmas day breakfast! Make it as enticing as dinner! It can be done. Certainly the first meal of the day on a cheery Christmas morning should be a feast to remember.

Miss Bernardine Urbanek, 8610 Exchange avenue, divorce statistician, found, after she pondered a while, that actually her mother did serve exceedingly good breakfasts on Christmas mornings. She was usually so excited on Christmas morning, though, that she didn't know at the time just what she was eating.

"I remember, now, we usually have the same thing for Christmas morning breakfasts: Orange juice, pork sausage that my mother makes herself—and it is good; all spicy and everything—and horseradish with the sausage, and fried eggs, perhaps, and home made white bread. Then we finish off with coffee and poppy seed cake."

ARMENIAN COOKS MAKE DELICACIES OF RICE, WHEAT

Culinary Art Is Highly Developed.

BY ADDIE FARRAR.

American housewives, who have adopted so many of the delicious foreign dishes, seem to have quite overlooked the culinary art of the Armenians, an art which has been developed through the three thousand or more years of existence of this race.

The Armenians possess the art of serving delicious and healthful dishes most economically, and two of the great inexpensive articles used in their cooking are crushed wheat and rice.

These cereals prepared in their manner result in an altogether different food from that attained by American cooks, uneducated in Armenian cookery. Rice as cooked by these people is delicious. They call it "pilaff" and its preparation is simple.

How Dish Is Cooked.

They take one cup of rice, soak it for one hour in cold water, then drain off. A teaspoonful of butter is put in the bottom of a pot [not a double boiler], and when it is melted they stir in the rice. Two cups of water that has been well salted is added. The pot is covered and over a slow fire the rice is cooked until the water has evaporated. The dish is served warm without sugar.

The real secret of this dish is the use of the butter before cooking.

Wheat "pilaff" is prepared similarly. The crushed wheat is soaked in cold water for an hour, then mixed with salty water and cooked. The butter, however, is not added until afterward, and is melted in a small frying pan with chopped onions. When the onions begin to brown, the whole is poured over the "pilaff" and the dish is then served hot.

Mixture of Vegetables.

"Fassulia plaki," a very popular Armenian dish, is a mixture of beans, carrots, and other vegetables. The beans are soaked over night, two tablespoonfuls of olive oil are added, then one chopped onion, some carrots, parsley, egg plant, or any other vegetables in season, and the whole is cooked in salty water for about two hours. This dish, like the others, is served hot.

Although the Armenians are great vegetarians, they eat meat with nearly every meal, but so use it that a little goes a long way. A favorite method is to use the meat as a vegetable stuffing. Peppers, cucumbers, squash, tomatoes and eggplant are stuffed with chopped meat (beef, veal or pork) and rice in equal parts. As the rice swells, the inside of the vegetables must be filled only about two-thirds full. These stuffed vegetables are then placed at the bottom of the pot and tomato and onion slices are laid on top to flavor. Over the stuffed vegetables is then poured stock (the water in which a bone or joint has been boiled) and it is well salted. The pot is kept boiling until the water has nearly all evaporated.

"Basti" Stew Tastes Good.

"Basti" is the name of a favorite Armenian vegetable stew. Lamb is mostly used for this stew, although beef and veal are sometimes chosen. The lamb is chopped and with a little water and is boiled until half done. Seasonable vegetabels are added with sliced onions and tomatoes the invariable ingredients, while string beans, peas, eggplant, carrots and potatoes are used also.

"Shishkebab," another favorite meat dish of the Armenians, is made by placing little cubes of meat, usually lamb, on a skewer, alternating with small pieces of onion, tomato and eggplant, when in season, and broiling.

RESTAURANT MADE FAMOUS BY KING IS CLOSED IN PARIS

PARIS, Dec. 18.—Paillard's, the restaurant made famous by the late King Edward VII's discriminating patronage, has closed its doors. It is the last of the famous boulevard temples of good eating to go.

Like Tortoni, the Cafe Anglais, the Maison Dore, and the Cafe Riche, it is but a memory of a time when one went to a restaurant to eat and not to be entertained, when a meal was a rite and not a mere feed.

The house in which Paillard's was installed was built in 1792.

There was always a restaurant there, but Paillard, who purchased it in 1896, made its cuisine, wines, and service famous among gourmets the world over.

ENGLISH ENJOY OLD FASHIONED YULE HOLIDAYS

Christmas Always a Cheery Time.

BY ANN WHITTINGHAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Dec. 18.—If I were given a choice of countries in which to spend Christmas I am sure it would be England every time. Christmas in France, Germany, and my own America, each has its delightful national features, but nowhere can be found just the combination of ancient customs and modern fun which makes the real English festival so cheery and so colorful.

This real English Christmas is not generally to be found in London, for London is not England any more than New York is America. It is not to be found at a seaside or a spa hotel where flat dwellers and footloose people go for bridge and jazz. For the unspoilt English Christmas we must get into the heart of the country.

The air is soft even though there is frost in it. The trees stand dark and naked but the grass beneath them is green and the hedge rows keep their rich dark leaves.

Late Flowers Bloom.

The great stone house is there. It may be a Tudor structure with a Norman keep; it may be Gothic, Georgian, Victorian or pseudo-something, but its walls are thick and it stands in its own grounds, be they one acre or a thousand. A few Michaelmas daisies and late chrysanthemums are still blooming against the north wall. When I pull the bell, a rosy cheeked maid will show us in.

A blazing fire will light the open hearth and tea will be laid before it with the firelight reflected in the silver muffin dish. A quiet and homey welcome, and tea goes down with good talk and subtle wit.

Christmas begins with Christmas eve and in many a great English home and more modest country farmhouse, the yule log is still the start and center of the festival. It is a log of ash, the biggest that can be found, and since the first of the month it has stood in some dry sheltered spot and has been partly split so that it will season. Setting fire to the yule log was a Druid rite. In ancient Britain they did it with an ember from the sacred and perpetual flame, but we do it, "for luck," with a charred bit of last year's yule log.

Wassail Bowl Filled.

With the yule log of Christmas eve comes the wassail bowl—a pagan drink to the mock king of the pagan saturnalia. It is strong and spicy and from a "county squire" I have the recipe centuries old.

"To make a bowle of wassaile:

Boil ¼ ounce each of bruised ginger, cinnamon, nutmeg and a couple each of cloves, corianders and cardamons in three quarters of a tumblerful of water for ten minutes. Add one quart of ale, a bottle of sherry, and from half a pound to one pound of sugar. Heat but do not get it near the boiling point. Then heat the yolks of 6 eggs and the whites of 3 eggs and throw them in the bowl. Slowly add half the heated ale and wine, stirring all the while. Bring the remainder to the boil and pour it also into the bowl. Lastly, throw in 6 roasted apples which have been cored and stuffed with sugar.

Many of the typical things about an English Christmas are pagan survivals of "mother night," which fell on Dec. 25. It was the early Briton's celebration of the night of the winter solstice. The early Christian church could not at times but compromise and

PREPARING CHRISTMAS COOKIES

An attractive basket, a plate or a box full of cookies makes a nice "Merry Christmas" to nearby friends. For sending away they will need to be packed like other fragile things.

HOT SPICED WINE CHEERS GERMAN 3 DAY YULEFEST

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—If you wander through the streets of Berlin, or of any German town or hamlet, on Christmas eve everywhere you will see brightly lit Christmas trees shining in the windows, as it is the custom to keep the blinds carefully drawn back—be it in the basement of the janitor, or the proud second and third floors, or the upper floors of poorer flats.

From ground floor to top floor, they forget their year around disagreements. The hausfrau of the second and third floors will make it a point to give the janitor not only his Christmas tip but a plate of apples, nuts, and her own special brand of Christmas cookies. It is a simple paper plate gayly decorated with stars, angels, evergreen boughs, and candlelights.

Bachelors Not Forgotten.

Around 6 o'clock every true German endeavors to be home with his family. If he has no family some friend will invite him and proudly show off the joy of little Hans and Gretchen on Christmas eve. If he is a really close friend he may even be allowed to masquerade as Santa Claus and bring the presents which "Das Christkindchen" has sent. The German Santa or Kris Kringle is the exact counterpart of our own, only he knows nothing of reindeers and chimneys and stockings. He needs them not as "Das Christkindchen" is supposed to tell him where to go and which children deserve presents.

Naturally he could find out for himself, because Hans or Gretchen and their millions of brothers and sisters have been zealously learning small poems and Christmas songs. Ever since September every lad and

The chef removes roasted turkey from the oven. Delicious looking, isn't it? Perhaps many men might say, "It is not as good as mother used to make," or "Friend Wife can do as well or better."

"Bill" Klauer's a Cook! Ask 'em in Old Dubuque

BY WILLIAM K. M'KAY.

"Bill" Klauer of Dubuque has fished and hunted big and small game all the way from the tropics to the arctic circle; he has felled his deer and mountain sheep and such on his 12,000 acre forested domain in the uplands of New Mexico, and has brought down bear, moose, and caribou in the tundra of Alaska; he runs a big factory whose metal products are distributed all over the continent; he is a discriminating art collector, going in principally for vast and rugged landscapes limning the glories of the boundless outdoors—of the canyons, gorges, and mountains of the southwestern states, and including such compelling views of rose clad adobe houses and ancient mission churches near at hand as Walter Ufer depicts; he is an authority on the handicrafts of the aborigines of New Mexico and Arizona, and has envy provoking examples of Navajo blankets and poetry—

But over and beyond all this, "Bill" Klauer is a swell cook. Whether it be the simple broiling of a sirloin, the frying of a mess of pan fish, the roasting of a turkey or a haunch of venison, or the baking of a goose, it's all alike with "Bill" Klauer, who is equally facile with flesh, fowl, fish, red herring or vegetable.

These Will Testify.

If this chronicler's judgment is doubted you are referred to Carter H. Harrison, former mayor of Chicago; to Carl and Emil Eitel of the Bismarck hotel; to Oscar Mayer, Chicago meat packer; to Charles A. Comiskey of the Chicago White Sox; to my discerning and discriminating coworker, James O'Donnell Bennett, and to George Reedy, TRIBUNE police reporter, who, as a trencherman, deserves a rating nothing short of valiant.

As host and culinary expert Mr. Klauer rates high in Dubuque, and that's a distinction in a community with long legends of good living and neighborly traditions of hospitality—in a town nestling in entrancing hills and vales, before which sweep the waters of the Mississippi and around which flourish all the arboreal glories of the oak, the elm, the maple, the black walnut, the hickory, and scores of other woodland aristocrats—a town of 45,000 population now nearing the centennial of its incorporation which has never had a boom, but which has always prospered with its varied industries and the rich products of the farms of its adjacent territory.

Abodes of Hospitality.

It would not be fair to mention Bill Klauer alone as host and entertainer. Mr. and Mrs. Tom Mulgrew, at their fine old mansion on Alpine street, with its grand sweep of lawn and long surviving forest trees, cannot be overlooked. And Grandma Cosley's fine old brick house at Julien, six miles west, with its orchards, vineyards, shooting traps, and corn fields, must not be forgotten; and surely one can never forget a day's visit to entrancing Riverview, the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Zieprecht on the west bank of the Mississippi, fifteen miles north of town. But this is Bill Klauer's party.

Had you spent a jocund and joyous boyhood in Dubuque; had you coasted on bobsleds its long sloping roads in midwinter; had you sniffed the delicious scents of its springtime, with its blossoming wild crabapples and grapes and berries, and been intoxicated with the sweet smells of the other growing things of its hilltops and valleys; had you in the summer camped, fished, and sailed along the river, and, when you were 14, actually swam the big stream from the Standard Lumber company's log boom to the opposite Illinois bank; had you in autumn picked red haws, hazelnuts, walnuts, and butternuts along the river's hillsides—if, let us say, you had enjoyed life in this real Tom Sawyerland—you might return from year to year as I do to quaff again those delicious fragrances of your boyhood and, most precious of all, to grasp hands that you clasped in those days and to look into melting eyes that you knew when youth prevailed, and all the world was fair and gay, and there never could be too much of fried yellow legged chicken, of soda biscuits piping hot, of strawberry jam and large pitchers of unskimmed milk.

Glories of Revisiting.

And so we are back in Dubuque for one of our semi-annual visits, and we have, after a round of overnight calls, slept late at the Julien Dubuque hotel, and we have received an invitation to dinner at Bill Klauer's suburban cottage that evening.

It has been a hot day in mid-September, but as our car rolls northward we emerge into the benignly cooling embrace of the Couler valley. To our left arises a precipitous bluff, to the rocky sides of which cling stunted bushes of hazelwood and sumach, with here and there, farther up the heights, maples, elms, and walnuts, and all about, clinging to the rocky projections of the hillside, ferns and violets and myriads of other wildwood flora.

We course along until we reach the bridge across Maquoketa creek, and there, rearing its ruined gaunt walls, is the relict and remainder of Thompson's mill, which in the dim and forgotten pioneer days harnessed the tumbling waters of the stream to grind the grain from the nearby farms into flour and meal.

Where the Tall Corn Grows.

Into this cleft in the hillside we turn, and, skirting the bed of a one time lake, annually the recipient of a deep deposit of overflow silt and humus, we view a corn field, sturdy as it grows tall in Iowa, its tassels gayly waving and its heavily kerneled ears hanging at right angles to its man high stalks.

A moment later we debouch into the Klauer grounds. We roll up to the cottage—it has sleeping accommodations for 20 or more—we ramble in-

BOTANIST COMES TO AID OF THOSE WHOSE POP CORN WON'T POP

The gentle purr of fast popping popcorn has ever been a lure to children and to grown-ups. It is the culmination that leads directly to the addition of butter and salt and the crunching of crisp exploded kernels. But what if the popcorn refuses to burst open or "pop"? F. C. Stewart, botanist of the New York state agricultural experiment station, says it is due to lack of proper moisture content, usually, and that good popping condition can be restored by raising this content of moisture.

"Place some of the shelled corn in a fruit jar, add a little water, seal the jar thoroughly with a rubber ring, shake thoroughly and allow the jar to stand unopen for two days," says Mr. Stewart. "The amount of water required depends on the dryness of the corn. For corn that gives exceedingly poor popping, perhaps five tablespoonfuls of water to each two pounds will not be too much. Not less than two tablespoonfuls of water for each two pounds is recommended to get results from this treatment."

He indicates that the storage place for an appreciable amount of popcorn kernels is important. When it is new or of the latest crop season, it can be stored in an outside shed or on a protected back porch where the air can circulate freely about the corn. Then it usually is ready to pop about Christmas time and will remain in almost perfect popping condition until the following summer. When stored in the house it dries out rapidly and soon becomes too dry. Mr. Stewart has found that about 14 per cent moisture is needed in the kernels for best results, but that often in the home this content drops to eight per cent or less.

CHICAGO GIVES YULE PICTURE OF OTHER LANDS

Foreign Born Cling to Customs.

BY VIRGINIA GARDNER.

To many foreign born Chicagoans roast turkey is not to be thought of on Christmas day. Perhaps it is a special dish of fish, perhaps a roast goose, or ribs of pork, which their native customs prescribe as the most delectable of Christmas dinners.

No meat is eaten at the Christmas feast of the Lithuanians, which comes on Christmas eve. On Christmas day goose or duck is served, but the Christmas day dinner is not to be compared with the Christmas eve feast, preparations for which are in progress days in advance.

On the day before Christmas the dining room is prepared. A Christmas tree stands in one corner. The table is decorated and underneath the snowy linen is placed a layer of straw. This is to signify the birth of Christ in a manger and lends to the feasting a religious cast. Preceding the meal unleavened bread, which has been blessed by fathers of the church, is served.

Order of the Feasting.

Beef soup in which Lithuanian mushrooms are thickly strewn is the first course. It is followed by broiled herring, which in turn is followed by a more elaborate fish dish. Any variety of fish may be used. With it are served "kose" potatoes, or mashed potatoes.

A compote of vegetables cooked together follows. Next comes sweetened water, an important part of the Lithuanian tradition at Christmas, and tiny squares made from thinly rolled out dough, sprinkled with poppyseed. Cranberry pudding and a sort of oatmeal pudding, which is considered a great delicacy, complete the meal.

In the old country the Lithuanian children were not visited by a Santa Claus. They received presents, but no Santa Claus is included in their traditions.

The Italian Christmas.

A fish which resembles a sort of devil fish is fried and quantities are served as the main dish in the Christmas eve feast of the Italians, who follow the old country traditions closely at Christmas time. Christmas day is merely an afterthought to Christmas eve with them.

Perhaps an eel, baked and fried, will be substituted in many homes for the fish. It is another Christmas specialty. On Christmas day a young pig, or chicken, may be served, with, of course, macaroni. Caraway, which resembles celery, broccoli, artichokes, and other fresh vegetables accompany both the fish feast and the dinner, as do black olives and anchovies. Special Italian pastries are sold each year in west side bakeries.

In the homes, the Christmas activities center about the presepio, a miniature representation of the birthplace of Christ, instead of around a Christmas tree. No evergreen is used in the old country, but flowers adorn tables and in many shops olive trees hung with oranges lend a gay air.

Vikings Enjoy Feasts.

With the exception of Germany, Norway and Sweden probably exceed all others in their lavish celebration of Christmas. For weeks the housewives prepare pastries and breads, a bread of wheat and rye rolled thin and cut in disks being prepared early in December and hung up to dry in baking rooms in Norway. There, in the land of the Vikings, hearty Christmas fare is popular, and cheeses are piled up and wine, spiced and improved still further by almonds, is popular.

The Swedish people in Chicago stick closely to the old country Christmas observances. They serve their real feast about 8 or 9 o'clock Christmas eve. The Christmas tree is prominent in decoration, and flowers and green leaves bedeck the tables.

The lutfisk, which is a sort of codfish caught off the shores of Norway and Sweden, is the main dish in each country. It is buried for days before in wood ashes, or soaked in soda water, boiled and served with milk gravy. Preceding the lutfisk, however, comes the famous Swedish hors d'œuvres, of which there are no less than twenty-five. Prominent among them is herring salad, made of hard boiled eggs chopped up, herring, diced beets, onion, and potato. A dozen different sorts of herring may be included. After the lutfisk, fried ribs of pork and cabbage are served.

Waltz Climax of Evening.

In the old country beer and "aquavit," a Swedish specialty, as well as rare French and Spanish wines and Rhine, flow freely at the Christmas eve celebration. Swedish punch and coffee with benedictine are served with special Christmas pastries. As a climax to the evening, all members of the family waltz around the Christmas tree, singing Christmas songs.

When Christmas morning dawns, every one shouts, "Glad Frill" [Good Yule] and the celebration is begun all over again, lasting for a week in the old country, where stores are closed for three days. Swedish children have as generous a Santa Claus as do American born children. They call him "Julenisse," meaning "the Christmas man." He does not crawl down their chimneys, however, but in the dead of the night sneaks into the room which hides the Christmas tree and surrounds it with gifts.

Croatian housewives are famous for their cooking and in households which can afford it the Christmas dinner consists of a roast goose, a roast chicken, and a roast duck, reposing side by side on an enormous platter, each stuffed with giblet dressing. Soup with homemade noodles precedes the fowl

Christmas Cheer in Olden Times

Bringing in the Boar's Head!

BY JUDITH BOND.

King of the Christmas feast nowadays is the turkey or the goose. But in England long ago these were merely side dishes of lesser importance.

The main course, the foremost delicacy, was the boar's head. Ah, there was a royal dish!

Heralded by trumpets it came, reposing on a golden platter, with an apple in its mouth and rosemary garnishing its ears. The chief steward himself bore it proudly into the great hall and set it before the lord of the manor.

Peacock Shared Honors.

Dividing honors with the boar's head came next the peacock, as proud and regal on the platter as in life. "Food for lovers and meat for lords," it came to the table served up in its own feathers, with its beak gilded. While the musicians struck up a lively air the gorgeous peacock was carried in, held high in the hands of the fairest lady guest.

After these two, like courtiers crowding behind their king and queen, came the other feast day dishes. Here is a menu for a Christmas dinner as it might have appeared in the days of Queen Elizabeth or James I.

Plum-Porridge
Geese Capons Pheasants
Carps Tongue Pie
Boar's Head Peacock
Turkey with Furmety
Hackin' [Plum Pudding] Mince Pie

The very first course, the plum porridge, was made of mutton or beef broth, thickened with brown bread and flavored with prunes, raisins, currents, cloves, and ginger. [Do you think you'd like it?]

And after it came the many courses of game and fowl, all piping hot from the spit and the open fire.

Furmety, once considered indispensable with turkey, was a dish made of wheat, eggs, and milk. A recipe for it is given very quaintly in King's "Art of Cookery," which begins:

"Seethe Till It Burst."

"Take clean wheat and bray it in a mortar, that the hulls be all gone off, and seethe it till it burst——"

I should like to see a modern cook puzzling over that recipe of a bygone day.

No one is likely to be eating boar's head or peacock or furmety this Christmas, but on many modern tables will appear either plum pudding or mince pie—or both. The plum pudding used to be called "hackin'" because the suet is hacked into small pieces. Mince pies were called Christmas pies, and it was thought that with their spicy richness they were symbols of the offerings made to the Christ child by the wise men.

Yes, we still have so many of these royal dishes I don't think we have any reason to envy the folks of olden days. And I am pretty sure I wouldn't like to eat a peacock!

No Mincemeat Pie Almost Implies No Christmas Dinner

Hot mincemeat pie. Enter a kitchen when the lady of the house has taken from the oven a nice hot mincemeat pie, and you will not leave unless your coercions prove fruitless, before at least an eighth of that pie is missing from the pan.

Cold weather is mincemeat pie season. And there is no more eligible occasion for serving mincemeat pie than Christmas. After the turkey or goose or capon, whatever the main meat course may be, is over, a most satisfying ending for that Christmas dinner is a piece of hot mincemeat pie.

Cold cooked beef makes the best mincemeat. It should be put through a food chopper with a coarse blade. The apples and suet may also be chopped up in this way to secure a more uniform texture and a better blending of the materials. Good quality raisins, currants, and candied fruit are important in making a delectable mincemeat.

Spices must be freshly ground to retain the maximum amount of their aromatic flavors. Fruit juice or cider or a combination of both add the final touch to the blend. The mincemeat can be made up, packed into stone jars or sterile glass jars and kept in a cool, dry place until the time when you wish to make a pie.

The recipe we are giving today is an excellent one, very simply made. The mincemeat is stored without cooking. This method seems to retain the most flavor. When you want to make a pie, cook three cups of mincemeat [quantity sufficient for one pie] with one-half cup of cider or fruit juice for twenty minutes. It is then ready to put into the pie. Cider for mincemeat is best when it is boiled down to one-half its original volume and then kept in sealed jars until needed for pie. In this way it will not sour.

MINCEMEAT.

3¾ cups suet.
2 cups brown sugar.
1 lemon, juice, and grated rind.
2¼ cups currants.
4½ teaspoons ground mace.
3 teaspoons grated nutmeg.
4¼ teaspoons ground cinnamon.
3¾ teaspoons ground cloves.
2 cups chopped apples.
1 cup citron.
2 1-3 cups seeded raisins.
1 orange, juice, and grated rind.
1 cup fruit juice [grape juice].
½ cup boiled cider.
1 tablespoon salt.

Boil beef until very well done and chop it fine. Chop suet and apples and add to beef. Mix sugar and spices and add to them the grape juice, boiled cider, lemon juice, and orange juice. Mix raisins, currants, citron, and lemon and orange rind. Combine gradually the three sets of ingredients. After adding the salt to the liquid part, using a portion of each until all are used, pack in stone jars, cover closely. Keep in cool, dry closet. Yield: 11 1-3 cups: Sufficient for four pies.

MINCEMEAT WITHOUT MEAT.

1 peck smooth green tomatoes, chopped fine, and well drained.
5 pounds brown sugar.
2 pounds raisins.
1 pound currants.
½ pound chopped citron.
2 tablespoons cinnamon.
2 tablespoons cloves.
1 tablespoon allspice.
2 grated nutmegs.

Boil two hours and when nearly done, add one cup of vinegar or boiled cider and one teaspoon salt. A half peck of chopped apples may be added to this recipe.

SERVANT PROBLEM? THEY HAVEN'T HEARD OF IT IN GERMANY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Dec. 18.—To American housewives this story may sound fantastic, but in Berlin, where it all happened, it is quite in accord with things as they are—or were—at least for the elder generation of present day Germans.

Following an old custom, the Housewives union of Berlin recently held a celebration in honor of faithful family servants. Diplomas—certificates of service—were distributed to 140 domestics, all of whom had been in their present positions for at least 5 years, and some who had been 10, 20, 30, and even 40 years in the same household.

The record, apparently, is that of one servant whom the German papers have justly named "a pearl." On the second day of January, 1931, she will have been in her same situation for exactly half a hundred years! On that day she will receive a message of congratulation and good wishes from President Hindenburg, himself, which shows that even Germany's president knows how to appreciate what the Germans call a real "Hausgeist"—"Spirit of the Home."

FRENCH PLAN TO RAISE GRAPEFRUIT IN AFRICA DESERT

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Dec. 18.—France intends to raise grapefruit in her north African colonies of Algeria and Morocco to compete with the products of Florida and California. Grapefruit is extremely expensive in Europe as it becomes perishable when imported from the United States, but it has attained enormous popularity all over the continent and in England. It is supplied by all the leading hotels, restaurants, dining cars, and steamships.

Grapefruit in Europe, however, costs in the neighborhood of 32½ cents in shops, and when it is served in a restaurant a portion costs at least 40 cents.

The French committee on rose and orange culture in the Sahara gave a luncheon today at which Marshall Lyautey, commander of the North African army, presided. Vice President Ricard announced at this luncheon that a campaign was on to produce grapefruit in the colonies as well as special types of roses in the oases of the Sahara desert.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

When making Christmas cakes or cookies if one uses citron, orange, or lemon peel, place these in a double boiler for a short time When cutting, dip the knife or scissors in a pan of hot water and you will be surprised what time it saves.

"BILL" KLAUER'S A COOK! ASK 'EM IN OLD DUBUQUE

side its wide screened verandas, we pass through the spacious living room and the kitchen, with its entrancing odors of roasting, boiling, and frying "eatments," and in the area outdoors behind the cottage we get a view of Bill Klauer, our host.

At Last We Smell Dinner.

In immaculate cook's garb, white capped and all, he stands behind a brazier, six feet long, two feet high, and 15 inches wide, filled with glowing and incandescent charcoal. Over the scorching coals is a gridiron and behind it all is "Bill" with a long two tined fork in either hand, resembling those long tongs used in fireplaces. At "Bill's" right and left are two small tables. On one is a large platter of thin sliced cutlets of tenderloin of beef and in another slices of bacon. Alternately a slice of the beef tenderloin and the bacon "Bill" impales on the prongs of the two tined forks, in such fashion that they cannot wiggle or wriggle. When he has thus spitted two of the two foot long forks with the portions of beef and bacon, "Bill," donning his heavy snow white cotton gloves, lays the prongs across the glowing bed of charcoal. As the meats sear and simmer and sputter, "Bill" dips them occasionally into a bowl of melted butter, into which has been blended various aromatic extracts and condiments.

We view this process of cookery until we fairly drool our gustatory yearnings and then "Bill," with a final deft wielding of his long forks, shoos us into the dining room while meanwhile "Bills'" first assistant, John, who has been officiating in the kitchen, has placed for each diner a plate so warm that it brings a protest from the touching finger.

A Mound of Golden Bantam.

John comes along a moment later with a long and broad platter on which rests a golden mound—the rich kernels of yellow bantam corn which, first parboiled, then stripped from the cob and, mixed with diced fried bacon and some of its savory juice, and finely chopped green peppers and chives, has finished its cooking in a huge iron skillet.

Now comes Mr. Klauer. Deftly but hastily he slithers on to each warm plate the piping hot portions of tenderloin and bacon. And right behind him John follows with servings of the corn saute, with portions of buttered beets and string beans and potatoes, French fried in scalding deep fat, and a huge tureen of lettuce salad immersed in French dressing, redolent with a whiff of garlic.

"Bill" Klauer, meanwhile, divested of his chef's apron and cap, has taken an inconspicuous place at the long table and is eating with all the hearty gusto of one to whom each article of the menu is a surprise. John has come along with an apple strudel and some bowls of hulled walnuts, almonds, filberts, grapes, and raisins. A large old fashioned enameled coffee pot appears and our cups are filled. With the apple strudel and the coffee we munch tangy cheese, beaten biscuit, and thin shaved slices of Westphalia ham.

Song and anecdote and toast rule the board until a waning moon fades before a flushing dawn.

You sleep late; you hear as you awaken the tumbling waters of Maquoketa creek as they sing their way through the bowlders in the gorge beneath the cottage windows.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

The graining of chocolate sauce or sirup can always be avoided by first cooking the chocolate with part of the hot water and then adding gradually the sugar and the remainder of the water or the milk.

alter or even allow these "heathen" customs to be carried over to celebrate the Christian belief. So it is we have today entwined in our Christian festival many a pagan custom and it is, perhaps, that ancient element which gives the English Christmas its special characteristics.

The Puritans were the first to discover this and in 1644 they forebade by act of parliament any merriment on Dec. 25 on the ground that it was heathen. The members of the commons and the lords, with exemplary discipline, walked through the streets to take their seats in Westminster. The holy synod met as usual and in Canterbury, the market was ordered to be kept as on any other Tuesday. The Puritans expected every one to attend to business as usual but the "pagan" element in the British breast arose and shops were closed while festivities continued in secrecy. When Charles II. came to the throne, the Yuletide feasts were reëstablished, but the Scots adhered to the Puritan view and even today in Scotland, the twenty-fifth of December is much like any other day and the real celebration comes, as in Latin countries, on January first.

Bells Herald Day.

The gray morning of Christmas day breaks with the peal of bells, old bells that were cast right in the village churchyard by itinerant foundrymen before any town had won its fame for making them, old bells rung by the stalwart sun burnt farmer lad's strong arm—the same tunes his father played before him. And we waken to a day of feasts!

At Christmas dinner today, turkey is generally the "pièce de résistance," but it is really an innovation of the seventeenth century! Before these birds were brought here from America, the Englishman turned to bitterns, puffins, herons, cranes, curlews, porpoises, geese, ducks, woodcocks, neat's tongues, blackbirds, pigeons, swans, and peacocks.

The boar's head with the red apple in its mouth—the oldest and noblest English dish there is—continues to be the Christmas fare at Queen's college, Oxford, where its entrance into the hall that day is heralded with great pomp. Elsewhere the boar's head is in general reserved for substantial business men's banquets.

Gone also from our menus is the roasted swan. Those stately fighters which infest the waterways are now under the special protection of the crown. Peacocks also fell from grace at about the same time the Christmas menu dropped from seventeen courses to twelve and "three bottle men" discovered the delights of French wines.

In many English homes there will be no turkey from Norfolk or Ireland but something even more to the liking of the race—roast beef. A baron of beef—two ribs of sirloin—that is what they claim Britain's greatness is built on. Here is a typical English dinner for Christmas:

Chicken Soup
Fried Soles Anchovy Sauce
Jugged Hare Red Currant Jelly
Roast Baron of Beef Horseradish Sauce
Yorkshire Pudding
Roast Potatoes Brussels Sprouts
Plum Pudding with Brandy Sauce
Vanilla Custard Mince Pies

With the baron of beef we must have a noble Burgundy, such as 1919 Romanée. Or here is another equally typical menu:

Mock Turtle Soup
Fried Whiting Lemon Sauce
Fillets of Beef with Tomatoes
Veal and Ham Pie
Roast Goose Stuffed with Apple Sauce
Chipped Potatoes Braised Celery
Plum Pudding with Brandy Sauce
Mince Pies

Should turkey grace the fare, the menu will probably be like this:

Hare Soup
Boiled Turbot Shrimp Sauce
Lamb Chops with Braised Celery
Roast Turkey Stuffed with Sausage Meat
Cauliflower
Potatoes
Plum Pudding. Apple Tart and Custard

With turbot our host will bring from his cellar a fine Grave, perhaps, Château la Tour Blanche and with the Christmas pudding we shall have a fine old brandy with, possibly a choice of crême de menthe.

Plum Pudding Famous.

English plum pudding, celebrated for centuries in prose and verse, that amazing delectable amalgam of dried fruits flavored with brandy, has captured the world. Around it clings many a superstition. In it we can recognize the gifts of the three wise men, the "peel, meat, and currents." The grandmother of the English plum pudding, as we know it, is a 1470 recipe which shows that it was made and eaten in a semi-fluid state. Today it is solid and oval in shape to represent the holy crib. It wears a wreath of holly which is symbolical of the crown of thorns. Every thorn is some pain that can be escaped if its shadow is nailed to the pudding. The thorns impale these shadows and render nil their power. Plum puddings are made with thirteen eggs for Christ and the twelve apostles. And carrots are added because Christ was born in a manger and carrots were cattle food. It is considered far more lucky to bring the plum pudding lighted to the table. But here we revert to the pagan for the firing of the brandy is a relic of the pagan oblation, symbolic of the returning sun.

On the side table of the Christmas feast in the heart of England there will be an array of cold comestibles. They are always there on Christmas and are as much a part of the dinner as the holly, even though none of them are eaten until evening or the next day. A braised game pie, a glazed ox tongue—and always, a York ham.

Too Much Crowding.

Many people make a great mistake about Christmas. They crowd all the good things that Christmas brings into the one short day, whereas our great grandfathers used to make twelve days of it.

Time may be more precious now, but in England there seems to be something of the old time leisure and Christmas spreads itself over several days instead of being concentrated all into one. The twenty-sixth day of December is a bank holiday and the most important of the four during the year. That makes two days together. If Christmas falls at the end or the beginning of the week the holidays can be stretched into four or perhaps five days, making a substantial break in the year's routine.

This Christmas bank holiday is the modern acknowledgment of the ancient "boxing day"—and in reality it is more often called that. The Christmas box was originally the bounty of well disposed people who were willing to contribute something toward rewarding the industrious and supplying them with necessities. Now this Christmas offering to the poor is demanded as a right. A knock at the door, and the maid returns saying, "Christmas box, madam, for the greengrocer's boy." Another knock—"postman's Christmas box." Then—"news agent's Christmas box," "dustman's Christmas box," "milkman's Christmas box"—etc., etc.

All Who Serve Remembered.

And so on throughout the whole day or, one might almost say, for several days. Any man or boy who serves you in any capacity expects a substantial tip, and ten dollars lasts no time at all, even with small gifts. It is an absurd custom of antiquity which has spread itself almost to a national nuisance. We shall see, a few days after Christmas, several letters to the papers deploring the custom. We always do.

But offsetting the nuisance of "boxing day" is the delight of the children, for on that day, in the large cities, the circus comes, not in tents, but in vast, barnlike amphitheaters. To the little Briton the circus brings the same thrill that it does to young America.

TWO-TO-ONE TWO-TO-ONE TWO-TO-ONE TWO-TO-ONE

NEARLY all baking powders leaven by a double action—part in the mixing and part in the oven.

But best results are obtained when this leavening action takes place in the proportion of two-thirds in the mixing to one-third in the oven. This is called "Two-to-One Leavening."

When you use Rumford you can count on perfect two-to-one leavening every time. 52 laboratory tests in its manufacture are your assurance that Rumford's leavening action always takes place in this perfect proportion.

Remember, two-to-one leavening is possible only with pure all-phosphate powder such as Rumford. So be sure to ask your grocer for Rumford and give your baking the advantage of leavening that doesn't depend on luck.

CHILDREN OF ALL AGES AT XMAS LOVE DESSERTS

Young and Old Expect Them to Be Plentiful.

Not only Christmas day, but all the days in the coming holiday, when children will be home from school with great expectations concerning food, must be more or less special days, when appetites are catered to without scruple. There is no better way of appealing to children of all ages, as well as to the fathers, than by having plenty of desserts, and those home-made.

Here are four recipes for wholesome and delicious pudding desserts none of which is difficult to make:

Wash and dry ¾ cup of rice. Cook in double boiler for 40 minutes with 1 quart of rich milk. Stir occasionally for the first half of time and then stir in ¾ cup of sugar, ½ teaspoon of salt and ½ cup of almonds, blanched and ground. Cook until rice is very well done and creamy. Flavor with ¼ teaspoon each of vanilla, lemon, and orange flower water. Serve warm or cold with cream only or with compote of fruit.

Caramel Tapioca Cream.

2 tablespoons butter.
2 cups milk.
2 tablespoons minute tapioca.

Put butter and sugar in top of double boiler. Stir over the fire until it boils. Let boil 1 minute. Do not let it burn. The sugar should be only slightly caramelized. Add 1¾ teaspoons of minute tapioca softened in the milk. When tapioca is clear, pour on to 2 egg yolks mixed with ¼ teaspoon of salt. Return to double boiler, and stir constantly until thickened. Remove from fire and pour mixture over 2 egg whites beaten stiff with ¼ cup brown sugar. Stir and add 1 teaspoon of vanilla when slightly cool.

Toffee Tapioca.

2 cups light brown sugar.
1 teaspoon vanilla.
¼ teaspoon salt.

Rinse and soak pearl tapioca overnight well covered with water. In the morning add sugar, salt and vanilla. Cook well covered in double boiler on top of range until tapioca is clear and pudding is rather dry. Serve warm or cool with whipped cream.

Prune Whip.

Wash and soak overnight 1 pound of prunes in water to cover. Stew them in same water until tender. Stone and add ½ cup of sugar to the pulp. Dissolve 1 packet of gelatin in ½ cup of cold water; add to prune pulp with juice of 1 lemon and 1 orange. Beat until foamy. Fold in beaten whites of 2 eggs; mold in individual molds. Serve topped with whipped cream.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

Thorough rinsing is as important as thorough washing for successful laundering. Soap or soda left in clothes yellows them and increases their tendency to scorch when ironed.

Square or oblong refrigerator dishes save space in the ice box because of their straight sides. Their flat tops will also hold other dishes.

To cut your chocolate squares easily and prevent breakage, heat your knife. K. D., La Salle, Ill.

With their reputation for opulence, the movies arouse no skepticism when they risk the realistic portrayal of turkey simmering in the oven. We see the steam arising from the delicacy and are thus convinced that it is no papier-maché bit of stage property.

The directors apparently assume that theatergoers have dined with sufficient recency not to be diverted to the point of losing interest in a plot designed to reach the senses of eye and ear. Arousing of a debate as to whether it is better to forego the excitement of what may happen to the heroine, or push back through one's seat companions in search of something to appease a conflicting appetite, does not tend to that undivided attention which is one of the requirements in screen entertainment.

Even though stirrings of hunger may not interfere in following the drama, certain speculations are apt to arise that cause stray thoughts long after the scene has shifted beyond the kitchen. Who actually ate the dark meat and the stuffing?

Surely, the stars, with their big salaries and their problems of holding their figures, would not have been tempted to indulge between meals. Or did they camera the scene at regular dinner time? Maybe it went to the "extras," thus tiding them over a lean period in their uncertain careers. No doubt about it's having been a real turkey.

Play Tricks with Camera.

And the next scene revealed the aftermath of crumbs and drumsticks. But we are aware of certain camera tricks. No telling how much time really elapsed between "before" and "after." That touch of art known as "suggestion" has deprived us of watching the turkey vanish by morsels. The mystery of the actual episode battles with the scenario plot for supremacy. The fate of the food has a tendency to become paramount to the fate of the villain. So the glamorous depiction of food on the silver sheet is capable of detracting an audience, every member of which has the eating habit.

Luncheon speakers know that a few audience—if not t... ...en fed—is an aid to receptivity. Also, that even the surest of jokes miss fire during the clatter accompanying the clearing away of dishes.

Many aspiring orators act upon the advice that they can talk better on an empty stomach, and they, therefore, make but a pretense of partaking of food just previous to the presentation of their message. In planning to put over their flow of wit and wisdom they are prompted by a spirit of sacrifice. And yet, at the effort's close, it has cruelly been said of many such self-denying speakers that "they might as well have 'et.'"

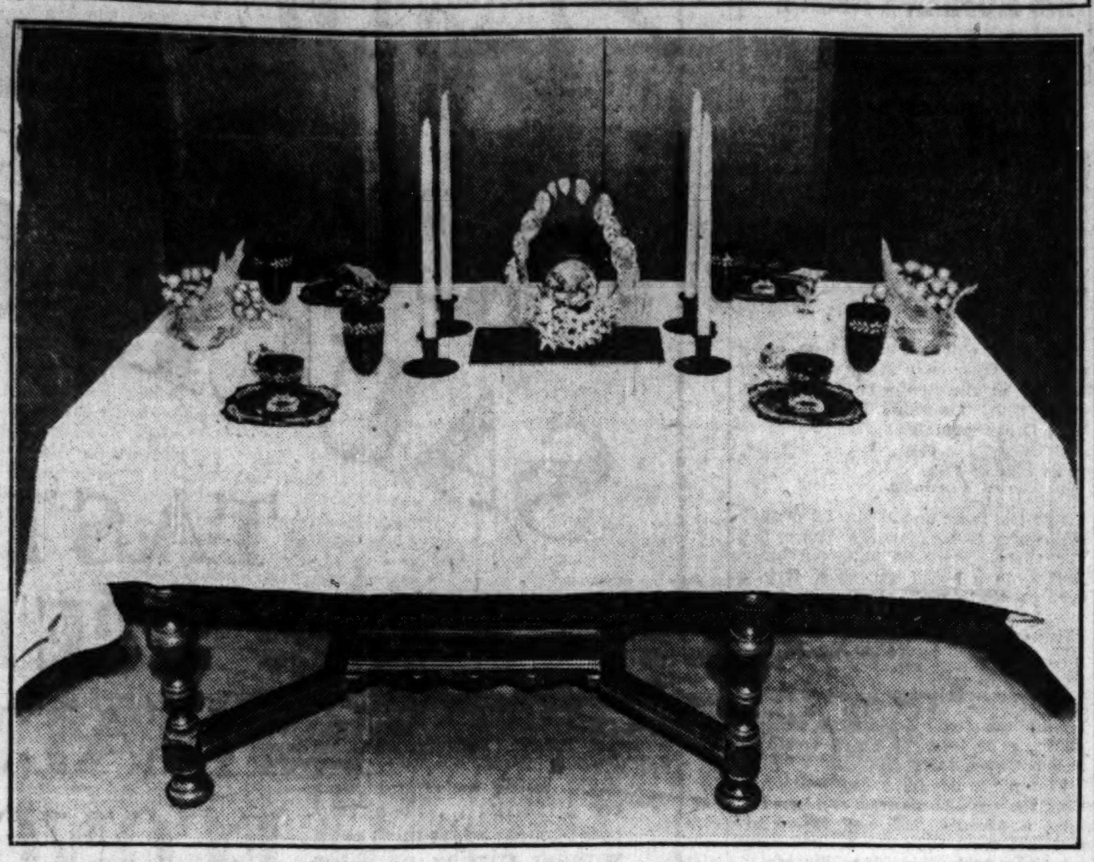
PERFECT DINNER TABLE



A perfect Christmas dinner table for the small family in the small apartment. The central decoration is a green glass ball surrounded with silver acorns set on a red glass plateau. The swans, the grapes, and the candles are green and the glassware is ruby red.

Reindeer Steak, Now Luxury, May Soon Become Common

Reindeer steaks cut from animals many years younger than those known as Dancer and Prancer of Santa Claus fame can be eaten in Chicago, if one shops around a bit at six of the leading hotels, several prominent restaurants, exclusive clubs, and even at some of the large retail meat shops.

This is the assurance of Carl J. Lomen of Nome, Alaska. He recently stopped in Chicago long enough to describe what the reindeer may mean to the meat appetites of Americans if Alaska continues its plans to enlarge reindeer herds sufficiently to market 1,000,000 carcasses per year.

Prices Should Be Reasonable.

He is an outstanding authority in that he is president of the Lomen Reindeer corporation of Alaska, which now owns herds which have a total number of 250,000 reindeer. All of these reindeer and 750,000 others owned mainly by Eskimos have been the natural increase from a total of 1,280 imported from Siberia between the years 1892 and 1902.

"One might say that when a sizeable retail trade in reindeer meat is developed in Chicago, it should sell at the same price as corresponding qualities in other meat cuts. Choice steaks shoud be worth around 50 to 55 cents per pound, while stew meats should be obtainable for about 20 cents per pound," Mr. Lomen said.

"At Seattle we are able to quote prices of 14 cents per pound, freight on board. Transportation is a large factor in the cost of the meat, yet when I found that one retailer charged me $1.25 per pound, I told him that he was charging too much and that he was restricting the logical expansion of reindeer meat consumption."

Working as Experiment.

Mr. Lomen has spent the last 16 years in Alaska, where he calls Nome his home. He first visited Canada more than twenty years ago. No commercial returns have been obtained by his firm in the reindeer business, as nearly all the work has been experimental coöperation with the government in starting out Eskimos in herd management. The open season in Alaska limits slaughtering and shipping to five months, which this last year enabled the selling of 20,000 carcasses.

No danger of reindeer steaks monopolizing the meat trade of the United States is seen by Mr. Lomen. Alaska has 350,000 square miles which can be used for grazing. The animals are said to require 30 acres each for sufficient feed. Mr. Lomen estimates from this that the total reindeer the country will support is between five and six million head, from which he estimates the annual slaughter would be around 1,000,000.

Each animal when dressed for shipping weighs a little over 100 pounds. Therefore, Mr. Lomen reports, if all the reindeer meat came to the United States there would be but one pound per person per year.

No Disease in Reindeer.

No disease has ever been found in reindeer herds or in reindeer meat, which is said to have led the surgeon general and the quartermaster general of the American army to sponsor buying large quantities of the meat for regular supplies.

Reindeer stock is said to be valued very low while on the range. The chief items in computing the cost of the meat lie in the erection and maintenance of corrals, abbatoirs, cold storage plants and refrigerating plants on boats plying between the storage plants and Seattle. Transportation from that shipping point to consuming centers is an additional expense.

In addition to making use of the present waste expanses of Alaska, Mr. Lomen said that the main reason for placing reindeer in the country was to give occupation to the thousands of Eskimos and to provide them with meat supplies. Five to seven thousand natives will be employed twelve months in a year if the herds continue to increase, he said. In 1929 his company employed 579 during the five months' slaughtering period.

KING HENRY III. GAVE YULE PARTY LASTING A WEEK

Mothers who fear they will not fix enough plum pudding, or wonder anxiously if the turkey will hold out until the last guest and the last child is served Christmas day may console themselves by thinking of a Christmas party King Henry III. gave in Westminster hall in 1248. It lasted a week, and thousands of persons were served.

Four years later he gave another Christmas party in honor of the marriage of Princess Margaret to Alexander, king of Scots. More than 1,000 knights, peers and other nobles were served, and among other delicacies provided were 600 fat oxen.

A century later Richard II. held a Christmas feast at Litchfield at which 2,000 oxen and 200 tuns of wine were served.

IT'S ORIGINALITY THAT COUNTS IN SETTING A TABLE

BY HELEN BARTLETT.

Putting to the test our pet theory that effectiveness in table decorations is more often the achievement of originality and effort than mere outlay of money, we went searching for appointments for the Christmas table that would be seasonable, artistic, and well within a moderate income.

And did we find them?

In answer we ask you to look at the table illustrated. The most formal dinner table, laden with family silver or with the newest of the new appointments, could be no more Christmaslike, no more effective, than that.

Small apartments and small families and small incomes naturally have rather special needs and the ingenious women who dressed this table had them particularly in mind.

They selected for the cloth a damask set that could by no stretch of the imagination be called expensive. Its cost, with napkins, is $20. It's ivory with a crossbar pattern in faint yellow—but it is not of the novel variety. It has considerable dignity.

For the centerpiece they selected a plateau of glass, oblong in shape, ruby red in color, as a base. On it they placed a green silver ball, set in a holder, which cost about $3.50. Tucked around the ball are silver glass acorns. On either side of this are inexpensive low red glass candlesticks, containing tall green candles. At each end of the table is a green glass swan into which is nestled a luscious bunch of green grapes.

These decorative Christmas touches were moderate in price, but extravagant in effectiveness. The actual appointments of the table were selected just as skillfully and successfully.

All set for the first course are glass plates with a silver leaf pattern, bearing cocktail glasses of the same design. And the color is a rich, ruby red. Could anything be more effective?

GOOD THINGS TO EAT MAKE WELCOME GIFTS

Wrap and Tie in Gay Christmas Colors.

BY META GIVEN.

Are you wondering what to give to your friends, neighbors or relatives this year? Perhaps your budget may not allow much of an outlay, but still you wish to spread the usual Christmas cheer with useful gifts that have the personal individual touch which makes gifts so appreciated. Have you ever thought about using good things to eat for gifts—some that you can make in your kitchen or already have on hand? There are numerous things one can make and all are sure of a welcome.

You may have a nice assortment of pickles, preserves, marmalades, jams and jellies from which to choose. Maybe you have two or three extra fruit cakes. They will be certain to make just the kind of gifts that some one is wanting. Then there are the many cookies, cakes, candies, candied grapefruit and orange peel, glaced and salted nuts, that will enable you in these few remaining days to assemble a gorgeous array of gifts.

Attractive Wrappings.

All of these foods must be neatly packed and tastefully wrapped and tied with the Christmas colors. Cellophane or Christmas wrapping tissue that comes in all colors may be used for the outside and tied with red or green ribbon of either the cloth or paper variety. Cellophane is particularly nice for fruit cake and plum puddings. [Note the fruit cakes attractively wrapped and tied in Christmas fashion in the picture.] If the ordinary tissue is used a good quality of paraffin paper will be needed to wrap the cake first. A perky bow and a spray of holly or mistletoe will add the final Christmas touch.

One novel way of treating glasses of jelly or marmalade is to insert in the paraffin a small artificial red flower, say a tiny poinsettia or geranium [something inexpensive but pretty]. Then add more hot paraffin to hold the flower secure. When cool, cover with chocolate shot to resemble earth. Plait a piece of green paper and tie it around the glass. Then ruffle the top and bottom to make it look like a small pot of flowers from the florist. Who wouldn't be glad to receive such a flower pot all tied with red ribbon and labeled with some happy Christmas greeting?

Pack in Baskets or Boxes.

Candy and cookies pack well in baskets or boxes. The regulation Christmas carboard box is very satisfactory, but if one can afford it the tin boxes are still better. Both cookies and candy should be of the very best —fresh, perfect in shape and color. Wrap or fold each piece in paraffin paper. The little crinkled paraffin paper cups used in the commercially packed candy boxes may be used for homemade candies. These may be purchased at most of the large confectioners.

All of the candy recipes appearing in last Sunday's issue of THE TRIBUNE [Dec. 14] and the cooky recipes which appear this next Sunday [Dec. 21] will be good Christmas gifts.

We announce a mimeographed copy of a collection of recipes for holiday candies, cookies, and mincemeat which we will send on receipt of a long, self-address envelope with 4 cents postage.

SPANISH EGGS.

1 tablespoon butter.
1 teaspoon onion juice.
1 green pepper, seeded and chopped.
1 cup thick stewed tomatoes.
12 olives, stoned and minced.
6 eggs.
1 teaspoon salt.

Place in a skillet the butter, water, onion juice, green pepper, tomatoes, and olives. Cook five minutes until bubbling hot and well mixed. Beat the eggs just enough to mix the yolks and whites and turn into the frying pan. Cook until the eggs thicken. Add the salt. Serve.

every lass who is learning to play the piano has been practicing:

Stille Nacht,
Heilige Nacht,

in versions of utmost simplicity or fanciful complications—all depending on their age.

Mother, or the most musical member of the family, plays the first Christmas eve tune, and all join in, from grandparents to tiny tots, with the servants standing in the background. Yes! Servants! Times are hard, but servants almost belong to the family, and right now, anyhow, we are taking our first peep into the homes on the second, third, and fourth floors. Things are not quite so black there as in the tenement sections of the capital.

After the first Christmas tune has been played, the doors to the living or drawing room open and the Christmas tree, in all its majestic luminosity, appears in full splendor. Tiny toys handed down from generation to generation beautify it as well as red apples, tangerines, cookies in all shapes, many cut to resemble different members of the household, and gay tinsel to charm the youngsters, the sparks who have been living in a frenzy of excited anticipation for weeks and weeks.

After the children have recited their poems, sung their "lieder," the presents have been distributed, and the whole family has joined in singing:

then Santa Claus comes on and the real Christmas feast begins.

Now for 3 Day Feast.

It really is a three day affair. On Christmas eve, carp is the traditional fish. The best Berlin hausfrau I know, Frau Lotte, says she will serve her carp as

"Karpen blau, mit Meerrettich Sauce und Aepfel, zerlassene Butter.
Kartoffeln,
Kompott.
Kaese,"

Here is a typical German household; her husband is a professor in a high school; her son, eleven year old Gert, is a promising young man with a remarkable appetite., Frau Lotte's husband has brought home a few bottles of wine which he carefully places on the porch, or if it is very cold, close to a window to have them properly cooled—to buy ice would be an extravagance, since just a little bit of care will cool the wine at this time of the year. In the dining room, he also has a few bottles of red wine, one brand for those who prefer red to white, and a cheaper variety for "Glühwein," which is drunk after the children have gone to bed.

Should Frau Lotte's two "men" and the stray, lonely old aunts she has invited for dinner still feel inclined to eat something after the carp and stewed fruits and cheese, they will have to resort to their "Christmas plate"—the plate of apples, nuts, cookies, spicecake, and marzipan which every guest finds under the Christmas tree. Not all may get a real present in these hard times, but the Christmas plate will be there with the best the hausfrau can afford.

After dinner, the presents are enjoyed all over again, the family sits together, sing "lieds," until the children are put to bed, and, while the candles burn down, the grown-ups talk of old times and the hausherr brews a "Glühwein"—a hot concoction of red wine and spices. The master of the house says it is the right drink for Christmas time cold, especially if the family has decided to attend midnight service. After church service there may be another glass of "glühwein" just to get rid of that "cold feeling."

A really good glühwein has something in common with the British plum pudding. Rum is poured over it, a match is set to it, and the blue sheet of flame of the rum blends with the candlelight and the perfume of rum and spiced wine blends with the tang of the Christmas tree. It is a perfume and a drink calculated to make those who are worried forget their anxieties for a brief while.

How to Make Glühwein.

The simplest kind of red wine will make a delicious "glühwein." Home brew that is not so much of a success can taste quite nice as Glühwein. The trick is to dress up the red wine with tea.

Make a good strong tea; while it is still hot pour in red wine, whole cinnamon, sugar, cloves, whatever spices you have—a few slices of lemon and place it on the fire. Don't boil this mixture but bring it as close to the boiling point as you can—draw it away for a second—taste—if the taste is not round enough to suit you, add the missing flavor—place again on the fire and withdraw it when the boiling point is reached.

Norwegians, Swedes and Germans for Christmas time then add rum. Sugar is placed in a fireproof ladle, rum is poured over it, a good dose of rum is carefully poured on top of the red wine, a match is set to the ladle, the rum burns—you artistically let the flames pour onto your wine and surface rum catches fire too. It is a most impressive sight. The flame burns quite a lot of alcohol out of the rum—therefore the true "Glühwein" artist knows exactly when to let the blue flame of his rum be drowned by the red wine and tea.

Meanwhile, down in the home of the janitor on the groundfloor, or in the basement, the celebration is much the same as on the upper floors. There may be no piano, but "O Tannenbaum," "O Du Froehliche" and cookies and candles of the Christmas tree will spread their promise of happiness for all. The janitor's wife will try hard to have a carp too. She might make it in "beer sauce" or Polish sauce up in northern Germany, but if she cannot afford carp, she may have "Bratwurst in Biersause," which is fried country sausage in beer sauce with cheese.

Beer will be served with this meal, but owing to the high taxation a quart will cost almost 20 cents.

and peas, potatoes, cranberries, and a vegetable salad accompany the fowl. Wine and four or five kinds of Christmas cakes, including poppyseed cakes and nut cakes, which is made with finely ground walnuts, complete the meal.

Mark St. Nicholas Day.

The Croatian Christmas dinner is served on Christmas day, but they hold a celebration around the Christmas tree on Christmas eve, singing carols and exchanging gifts. On the eve of Dec. 6, which is St. Nicholas day, as it is in Germany, to the Croatians, they give small gifts to the children—providing they have been good children, of course.

The goose is the central delight of all proper Denmark Christmas dinners. In France, Noel is associated with the yule log, as it is in England, and with "naulets," Christmas cakes, but it is not celebrated as extensively as it is in many countries. Chicago Bohemians may buy in bakeries here the "valocha," or Christmas cakes, which, with goose, are their most distinctive Christmas foods.

The codfish which Sweden and Norway relish at Christmas is shipped to Spain and there likewise it forms their chief Christmas dish, as it does with Spanish born Chicagoans. By the Spanish it is called "bacalao," and is fried in oil. That and fruit salad in which the mayonnaise is colored red from water in which beets have boiled, form the special dishes served at the Christmas eve feast. It is begun at midnight, and is a gay affair, followed by song and dance and the click of castanets. The "Jota" is a dance the Spanish set aside for Christmas festivity.

In addition, almond soup, truffled turkey, and sea bream are famous Spanish Christmas eve dishes. In the old country, if a man has no family with whom to eat, men will prepare these dishes for him over "braseros" of charcoal in the street. Layer cakes of preserves with almond icing, and cakes on which are liquor filled sugar figures, also are Christmas specialties with the Spanish.

HOUSEKEEPERS LEARN ABOUT ODD VEGETABLES

Chicago housewives were introduced to a number of vegetables not commonly known in American households, by a lecture given at a combined meeting of the food and markets committee of the Woman's City club and the Chicago Housewives' league, in the Woman's City club last Wednesday. Mrs. Wilbur Fribley, who is chairman of the committee and president of the league, gave the talk.

"A few vegetables, not unheard of by you, of course, are in plentiful quantities on the market but are not utilized fully," she said. "Among these are zuccini, an Italian vegetable resembling the cucumber, which is cooked rind and all. The black radish, which is cheap, is another. It is delicious ground and mixed with butter and salt and pepper, or ground and mixed in salads or in sandwich fillings.

"Escarole is likewise inexpensive. The center of it is good in salads. The outside leaves, which resemble endive except that they are not curly and are bleached, may be cooked. It is cheaper than romaine.

"Anise is a whitish vegetable which tastes like aniseed. The top resembles asparagus fern; the bottom, celery. It may be eaten as celery or chopped and used in vegetable salads."

YOUTH PASSES ON HIS MOTHER'S RECIPE FOR A CUSTARD PIE

BY JOHN CONWAY.

Custard pie, assembled by an expert (and here's where I bow to my mother), is a great civilizer. After consuming the major portion of one of my mother's pies, apple, peach, or custard, preferably custard, I am at peace with the rest of the world. There may be custard pies equal to those my mother serves, but I never have tasted them and am positive there could be no better.

Her fried chicken, baked ham, apple pies, and layer cake are great, but for present let the theme be custard pie, deep, rich, fragrant, and luscious. Here is her formula:

Crust.

Two cups of flour.
One cup of shortening.
A pinch of salt.

Mix the flour and lard; add enough cold water to moisten the dough, and stir thoroughly with a silver knife. Roll it on a board and place it in a deep pie tin to make the bottom crust.

Filling.

Four eggs.
One and one-half pints milk.
One-half cup of sugar.
Teaspoon of vanilla.
Add a pinch of salt and grate in a dash of nutmeg.

Beat the ingredients with an egg mixer, pour into the crust, and bake in a hot oven forty minutes.

This pie is not for those desiring to keep their girlish figures. Fed on this fare, a growing lad may attain six feet and more than 200 pounds while yet under 20, but he will be cheerful.

GASOLINE ALLEY—NEWS—BAD AND GOOD

By Royal Command

BY DORNFORD YATES

SYNOPSIS.

Richard Chandos and his wife, Leonie, former grand duchess of Reichtenburg, are visited at their estate near Littal, in Austria, by George Hanbury. A telegram arrives from Marya Salm, countess of Dresden, an expected guest, stating that she dare not come.

Prince Paul, ruler of Reichtenburg, had hoped to marry Leonie and was incensed at her marriage to Chandos. Fearing for Marya's safety, because of her friendship for Leonie, Chandos and Hanbury, with their servants, Bell and Rowley, depart for Vigil, capital city of Reichtenburg, where Marya resides. Because of the enmity of the prince they must enter the country in stealth. They drive to the frontier and leave Rowley with the car at a farm and proceed by foot. A peasant, named Ramon, whom they befriend, leads them over the border by a secret path. They reach the home of Marya unseen and learn from her that she sent no message and that she plans to drive to Austria that night. Realizing the telegram was a ruse to lure them within the prince's dominion they are preparing to flee with Marya when the prince arrives. The men hold the prince and his servants at point of gun and escape in the royal car. They find the border so closely guarded that hope of crossing is abandoned.

Chandos remembers Ramon, who lives in the nearby town of Gola. They seek him for aid. He agrees to hide Marya and Carol, her trusted servant, in his house. Chandos and Hanbury join a traveling circus, where they feel fairly safe from discovery. They are planning to desert the circus and return to Gola when Carol reaches them with a car to take them to Bariche, across the border, where he says Marya is waiting. They recognize the car as Grieg's, the chief of police. Arrived at the inn in Bariche they receive another message from Marya, stating that she is to be pardoned on condition that she remain in Reichtenburg, and that she does not communicate with them and that they must never enter the country again.

Realizing that Marya, endeavoring to save them, has made an arrangement with Grieg, to which they could never consent, they return and attempt to cross the border at a different point. Hanbury and Rowley pass, but Chandos is apprehended and taken to jail. Chandos identifies himself to the inspector and proves that Grieg has betrayed his trust. Grieg, who has learned of the arrest, arrives. He orders two detectives from Vigil back to prepare a cell for Chandos and takes his prisoner alone in his car.

Chandos realizes Grieg intends to kill him, and, although handcuffed, manages to reach his own gun and prevents Grieg from carrying out his intent. Hanbury and Rowley, knowing their friend's plight, post themselves along the road and hold up the chief's car and capture it. They fly with the captive chief to Vigil in a futile search for Marya. They find her at the estate of Baron Sabre. Grieg they left tied to a post along the roadside. Marya tells them that she cannot leave with them, as she was married that morning to Grieg—her price for their freedom. Hanbury, who is in love with Marya, is stunned at this news.

INSTALLMENT XXIII.

THE PREY ESCAPED.

I remember thinking that George would never move.

He stood like a man that has seen some Gorgon's head and has in the act of vision been turned to stone. His lips were parted and one of his hands was half way up to his head, and the dust with which his features were powdered gave him the look of a being that was not of flesh and blood.

Then I saw his chin go up and I turned to the door.

A moment later I was descending the stairs.

One thing had to be done, and done at once.

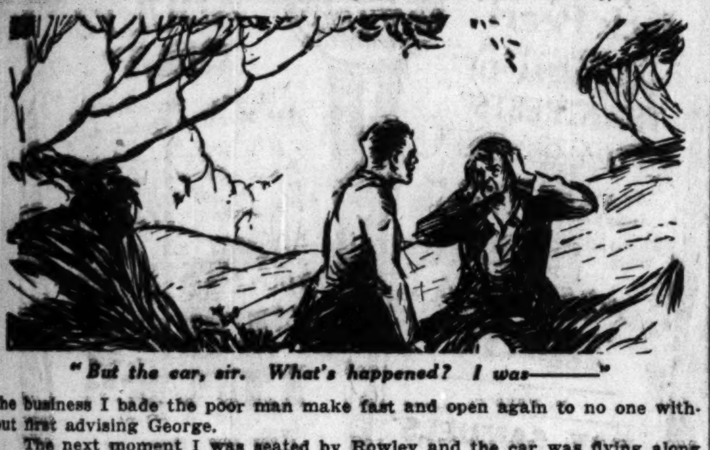
Marya's ship was afire. It was no good her winning her action if she was to be consumed. The fire must be put out at once—before it could spread.

So I went out to do murder, if you can call it such.

George, of course, could do nothing. For if he were to play the hangman, he could hardly expect to marry the widow that he had made. Any woman must have recoiled from so grisly a bed.

Now I was so bent upon my purpose that I forgot my handcuffs until I slipped on the stairs and sought to stretch out a hand to lay hold of the banisters. At once my embarrassment hit me between the eyes. Unless I were to kill Grieg as one kills a pig, before I did anything else I must free my wrists.

What the old servant imagined I cannot tell, but I think the events of that night had disordered his failing wits. I told him to draw the bolts and open the door, but he only gaped at my gyves, and when Rowley had done



"But the car, sir. What's happened? I was———" the business I bade the poor man make fast and open again to no one without first advising George.

The next moment I was seated by Rowley and the car was flying along the thin, white road.

I am not given to imagining vain things, but fancies crowded about me during that drive. The hour was ghostly: neither day nor night could have claimed it, and the sleeping world was abused by its treacherous light. The seats behind were empty, yet I had a horrid feeling that we were not alone, but that something was riding with us, and sitting where Grieg had sat. All the time Grieg danced before me in a hundred postures of death.

Rowley drove me to Gola and Ramon, the smith, came down and set me free. Though he begged me to let him do it, I would not wait for him to cut off the cuffs themselves, but when he had severed the chain that held the two together I shook his hand and left him, with a bracelet on either wrist.

The dawn was near now: color was creeping into the woods and meadows, and distance beginning to take her lawful form. I was driving, and I think that I frightened Rowley, so high was our speed. My one idea was to have done with the business, for Grieg was haunting me now as I was very sure his ghost would never haunt me when once he was dead.

At last we flashed through the village a mile or so from which we had left him lashed to the post and, since I could not be sure of his exact position, I slackened speed.

"Not yet, sir," said Rowley, peering.

"It was dark," said I. "I can't be sure to a mile."

"I shall know it, sir," said Rowley. "It's a furlong beyond some crossroads and round a bend."

"Watch for the crossroads," said I.

It seemed an age before I heard him cry out.

As I set my foot on the brake I saw the crossroads ahead.

I overran them slowly and brought the car to rest.

"Are you sure you're right?" I said.

I stepped down into the road.

"Stay here," I said. "Turn the car and stay here. If you hear a shot, don't worry. I shan't be long."

"Very good, sir," he said, quietly.

Before I had taken ten paces I heard him turning the car.

As I went I tried to determine the course I should take.

For Marya's sake the man had to be destroyed. That he deserved to die was beside the point. A millstone had been hanged about the Countess' neck, and nothing but Grieg's decease could take it away. That it was he that had hanged it there made his death just: but had he made her marry a swineherd the clown would have had to die. I was not there to punish Grieg. I was there to free the Countess from her most dreadful plight.

It seemed that after all I must play the butcher, and, as once before that morning, my stomach turned at the thought.

I could see the stones now—a low barrow of metaling, ready to mend the road. It occurred to me that that was his gravestone. A ditch lay behind the barrow. There I must lay the body and cover it thick with stones from the pile to hand.

I went on with dragging feet and my eyes to the ground.

I decided to tell him the truth and give him two minutes in which to prepare for death. After that I would shoot him through the head. After all, there was no cause for compunction. The man was worthy of death.

I raised my eyes to see an empty gate post some twenty paces ahead.

For an instant relief came flooding. Then I perceived that Rowley had made a mistake. A hundred yards further on was another bend in the road, and just at the turning another gray barrow of stone.

As I moved forward I trod on a piece of cord.

I picked it up, staring. . . .

More cord was dangling by the gate post, caught by the latch of the gate. I found there were three short lengths, the edges of which were clean cut.

I do not think I should have been human if I had not been honestly thankful to find that my prey was gone. But even while I stood frowning, twisting the cord in my hands and blessing the early riser that had put such a spoke in my wheel, I heard the sound of a car being hastily started.

In a flash I had leaped to the bend, to see the car reach the crossroads and fling up the broad, black road down which we had come.

And two hundred yards away lay a figure in a white dust coat, half on and half off the grass

* * * * *

The sun was up before Rowley opened his eyes.

I had carried him over a meadow and down to a little brook, and but for the fresh, cold water I think that he would have lain senseless another hour.

I do not know which was the stouter, his heart or his head, for, though on the back of the latter there was an ugly swelling the size of a pocket watch, he had hardly recovered his senses before he was up on his feet.

"Lie down," said I. "Lie down. You're not fit to move. You won't be fit for ten minutes. Perhaps not then."

Wildly he stared about him.

"But the car, sir. What's happened? I was———"

"You were laid out," said I. "Laid out by Grieg. It wasn't your fault. Somebody must have undone him, for when I got there he was gone."

The man's hand flew to his side.

"He's taken my pistol, sir."

"I know," said I. "What's more, he's taken the car. He's off to Baron Sabre's, where we left Mr. Hanbury."

Good Morning!

You'll be moderately entertained by this number, but your enthusiasm over it won't exceed bounds.

"Free Love" is the screenization of the play "Half Gods" by Sidney Howard, which, I am informed, didn't click so well on the stage. It is in the nature of a satire on the married life of people who get bored with each other, but otherwise haven't much to complain of. The subject matter, pithy enough in itself, has been inadeptly handled, with the result that, despite some good acting, the picture strings along rather pointlessly and, after a time, you begin to think—endlessly!

You start out on a rosy honeymoon with the hero and heroine, Mr. and Mrs. Ferrier, and are with them six years later when the aurora flush has given way to a drab sky from which issue thunderous mutterings of discontent. All Mr. Ferrier asks—like a martyr!—is that he be allowed eight hours sleep and a hot breakfast. Mrs. Ferrier aggrievedly desires to stay up till all hours and sleep late.

Having been told by a burlesque psychoanalyst that her marriage CAN'T be a success because she is a rare and interesting subject known as an "intuitive introvert," while her husband is, unfortunately, an "infantile extrovert," the lady takes her two children and leaves the specimen so scornfully described by the doctor.

A sock in the jaw from extrovert to introvert has a decided bearing on the ending—which is a happy one if you feel that way about it.

Conrad Nagel does good work as the husband and Bertha Mann, Ilka Chase, et al. are pleasing in supporting rôles. Zasu Pitts inspires laughter as the limply distraught Ferrier housemaid who finds consolation in the man who comes to turn off the gas.

Genevieve Tobin? Well, I was much disappointed in the performance of this young woman, who, to quote a girl I know, "looks so sort of sweet and pussy-cat" and gave such a fine characterization in "A Lady Surrenders." As Mrs. Ferrier she is a thoroughly disagreeable person. This, perhaps, is largely due to the rôle, but only Miss Tobin is responsible for Miss Tobin's mechanical laughter and manner of line rendition.

Photography, sound, and some of the dialogue are good. Direction falls down because of long-windedness.

I don't know just why the piece should be for "Adults Only," but censors and exhibitors seem to be going haywire on the "pink permit" question. Films that need 'em don't get 'em and plenty that don't—do. But I reckon there's no use yelling about what we can't help, excepting that repression is said to be bad for us and a good yip now and then acts as a safety valve.

See you soon.

TWO GRANDCHILDREN OF PRESIDENT SEE THEIR FIRST SNOW

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Two youngsters from California, much in the news of late, today enjoyed the novelty of playing for the first time in the snow.

Mrs. Hoover bundled her two grandchildren, Peggy Ann and Herbert Hoover III., into a White House limousine and took them to Rock Creek park.

Excepting glimpses of distant mountain tops, it was the first snow they had seen.

'I RIDICULE AMERICANS; AND THEY ADORE ME,' SHAW ADVISES LEWIS

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The New York Times correspondent asked George Bernard Shaw this week for his opinion of Sinclair Lewis' address in Stockholm in which the Nobel prize winner attacked the literary standards of America. This is Shaw's reply in his own handwriting:

"As far as I am qualified to judge, Mr. Sinclair Lewis has said just the right thing in the right way to the Swedish academy and at his own countrymen. They will not resent it. They expect to be flattered; but far from being grateful to their flatterers, they accept the tribute as a matter of course, just as they accept the cleaning of their boots at a hotel. To rouse their eager interest, their distinguished consideration and their undying devotion, all that is necessary is to hold them up to the ridicule of the rest of the universe.

"Dickens won them to him forever by merciless projections of typical Americans as windbags, swindlers and assassins. Mr. Sinclair Lewis has knocked Washington off his pedestal and substituted Babbitt, who is now a European by-word. Thereby he has become so indisputably America's leading author that at the early age of 45 he has been marked out for the Nobel prize.

"I, myself, have been particularly careful never to say a civil word to the United States. I have scoffed at their inhabitants as a nation of villagers. I have defined the 100 per cent American as 99 per cent an idiot. And they just adore me and will go on adoring me until, in a moment of senile sentimentality I say something nice about them, when they will at once begin to suspect me of being only a cheap skate after all, and drop me like a hot potato.

"Most of the things I say of them are obviously true of all peoples that on earth do dwell; but as the Americans can never believe that other nations could possibly resemble them, you get them every time, just as Mr. Sinclair Lewis does.

"I hope he will keep pegging away at them. Otherwise, there will be no holding them."

Prince of Wales Better; Abed a Day with Chill

LONDON, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The prince of Wales, who developed a chill and is in bed for the present, was reported "very much better" in an official statement issued from York house late today. It was thought that by tomorrow night he will have thrown off all effects of his ailment. The royal patient was said to be very cheerful although he had to call off an appointment to go riding.

Stewart's Old Church Calls Dr. M'Allister

Baltimore Rector Accepts Evanston Pulpit.

Baltimore, Md., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The Rev. Dr. Charles Eldredge McAllister, rector of St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal church here, announced today that he had received a call to be rector of St. Luke's church, Evanston. During the last 26 years St. Luke's church has been led by the Rt. Rev. Dr. George Craig Stewart, who recently resigned as rector in order to become bishop of Chicago. Bishop Stewart is well known in Baltimore Episcopal circles as a Lenten preacher. On several occasions he had been approached on his availability as rector of Emmanuel church to succeed the late Dr. Hugh Birkhead.

DR. C. E. M'ALLISTER.

Dr. McAllister has not announced whether or not he will accept the Chicago offer. He is widely known in this section as a preacher and parish administrator. He is in great demand as a speaker before civic and university groups. Dr. McAllister is 37 years old. He has a wife and two children, a son and a daughter.

In 1914 Dr. McAllister was graduated from St. Stephen's college, and in 1917 was awarded a master's degree by Columbia university. While at Columbia, Dr. McAllister won the Greek alumni prize and the McVicar historical prize. He completed his theological studies at General Theological seminary, New York, and was ordained priest in 1918.

Dr. McAllister came here from Newark, N. J. There he had been the executive secretary of that diocese. Prior to that time he had held rectorates in Hampton, Va., and Hyattsville, Md. For two years he was secretary of the field department of the national council of the Episcopal church.

The Evanston parish to which Dr. McAllister has been called has a membership of more than 3,000 and a plant worth more than $1,000,000. The church also owns and operates large apartment houses on the church property.

IOWA TEACHER'S BOOK CROWNED BY INSTITUTE OF FRANCE, SHE'S TOLD

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Dr. Anna N. Heyberger, a professor at Coe college, was notified today that she had been given the 1930 prize for her book, "The Life and Works of John Amos Cominenius," on French education, philosophy and religion, by the Academy of Political and Moral Sciences of Paris. She is authorized to assume the title of "Laureate of the Institute of France," and to use on the title page of the book which won the prize "Crowned by the Institute of France." Dr. Heyberger's book was published in 1928, and has received a great deal of attention in university circles in all countries in which French is read.

Ruth Hanna, Daughter of Late Dan Hanna, Married in New York

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Ruth Hanna, daughter of the late Daniel R. Hanna, Ohio politician and editor, tonight was married to James Grinling, son of Harry Grinling of Wood Hall, Surrey, England.

The ceremony was solemnized in the priest's house at the Church of the Holy Name at New Rochelle, with only members of the family in attendance. The bride's mother, Mrs. M. Stuart Hanna, gave her in marriage. Three sisters, Mrs. Stanley Carr, Mrs. Richard Davidson and Mrs. Richard Hume, were attendants. Forbes Hotchkiss was best man.

The honeymoon will be spent in the west. The bride, a granddaughter of Mark Hanna, political sponsor of President McKinley and former senator from Ohio, has divided her time for the last four years between New York and Ravenna, O.

HOW TO KEEP FROM GROWING OLD!

THE STAGE

"OVERTURE," a drama of the social upheaval that followed the war in Germany, written by the late William Bolitho, appears to be the favorite topic of the moment among the journalists of Broadway. They are writing about it as freely as they did about "Grand Hotel," and with almost as much enthusiasm.

Richard Lockridge says in the Sun: "'Overture' is a play with more bite, more hard, incisive thinking, than any other to which New York now is host." . . . Percy Hammond of the Herald-Tribune calls it "interesting, literate theater founded on a serious idea, and promoted by its sponsors with skill and understanding." . . . Edna Ferber, the novelist, is writing letters to her friends about "Overture," saying: "I don't know whether it is a good play or a bad play, technically speaking. I don't care. I only know that it contains splendor—the one quality I demand in the theater. And by splendor I mean an idea magnificently presented."

But other critics disagree vigorously. The division of opinion suggests the controversy, in New York and Chicago, over "Hotel Universe."

The Theater Guild has acquired the American rights to three dramas that are attracting attention in Germany. One of them, "Miracles at Verdun" ["Wunder um Verdun"], by the late Hans Chlumberg, may figure in the Guild's current season. It is a tragic fantasy depicting the reincarnation of soldiers who were killed in the terrific fighting around Verdun. The author was injured by a fall from the stage during rehearsals of the play at Leipzig, and died the day after its premiere.

The Guild's other purchases are "The Sailors of Cattaro," by Friedrich Wolf, and "Three Times Waterloo," by Eugene Gurster. The former is a drama of post-war chaos in Germany, and deals with a revolt in the fleet. The latter is described as a satiric farce, the action of which centers around a play during its rehearsal period.

The producing firm of Green and Gensler has signed a contract which transfers their allegiance, so far as "bookings" are concerned, from the Erlanger group to the Shuberts. This arrangement does not affect the two Broadway hits now managed by Green and Gensler—Joe Cook in the musical show called "Fine and Dandy," and Lenore Ulric in "Pagan Lady." It refers to the firm's forthcoming productions, among which are "The Gang's All Here," an entertainment with Ted Healy as its leader, and "Rock Me, Julia," a drama in which Helen Menken and Paul Muni are co-starred. Both of these shows are now in rehearsal. The latter will have its first performance in Newark, N. J., Dec. 29.

The Jack and Jill Players, who give performances for and by children, are now to be found at the Chicago Woman's Club theater. "Indian Chief" is announced for Saturday afternoons, Dec. 20 and 27, and Jan. 3; three short comedies for Sunday afternoon, Dec. 28, and "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp" for Sunday afternoon, Jan. 4.

CONAN DOYLE'S WIDOW DECLARES HIS SPIRIT LINGERS NEAR EARTH

CROWBOROUGH, Sussex, Eng., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Her profound conviction that the spirit of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle is deliberately lingering near earth in order to help those still living was expressed by Lady Doyle today.

This conviction, she said, was based on messages she herself had received from her dead husband.

Saying she had heard that in an article reporting conversations through Mrs. Eileen Garrett, a medium, the term "earthbound" was used in connection with Sir Arthur, Lady Doyle declared Sir Arthur was "certainly not earthbound."

"I happen to know," she said, "that he could have gone very high, but deliberately remained behind in order to keep contact with the earth and influence the spiritualist movement."

Lady Doyle said she had heard also that in Mrs. Garrett's spiritualistic conversation Sir Arthur had spoken against establishing a memorial center for spiritualistic activities.

"I am unable to understand this," Lady Doyle said. "I have had messages through many mediums to the effect that Sir Arthur is very keen on establishing this memorial."

Asked her opinion as to how a contrary message could have been received in this instance Lady Doyle, who paid a high tribute to the mediumism of Mrs. Garrett, emphasized that even on earth a message transmitted through the medium of one or two persons could be distorted.

Stores Filled, Charity Tinges Holiday Spirit

With Children's Parties Given, Planned.

While bundle laden shoppers crowded the loop streets and stores, while jolly Santa Clauses greeted wide eyed children in top shops, the Christmas spirit was found abroad over the city yesterday in Christmas parties or in plans for them daily until New Year's.

Many a Chicago family this year is not only thinking of its own Christmas but following a program, including a Christmas tree and turkey dinner for families caught by the financial depression.

Many a child, knowing that Santa Claus will bring him all that his heart desires, is asking that some of these gifts be divided with boys and girls who otherwise would find an empty stocking on Christmas morning.

A Christmas party was held yesterday by the Optimist club at the Hotel Sherman for 225 boys who received their invitations through the several settlements run by Northwestern university, Hull House, and the Spaulding School for Crippled Children, and the University of Chicago. There not only was a turkey feast but gifts of candy and nuts to take home. For entertainment was Peter Pan, the trained horse owned by Frank Bering of the hotel, who took every one for a ride.

The needy in the vicinity of Wadsworth school, 64th and University avenue, received well filled Christmas baskets yesterday morning, distributed by the school.

More than 800 patients of the children's clinic at Northwestern university will attend a Christmas party to be given by members of the faculty and staff of the medical school at the Cinema theater, 151 East Chicago avenue, from 10 to 12 o'clock tomorrow. A puppet show, "The Night Before Christmas," and a picture, "Scrooge," based on Charles Dickens' "Christmas Carol," will be presented. After the show each guest will receive a gift from the Christmas tree.

The Goodman Children's theater has extended an invitation to a group of orphans to attend Saturday's performance of "Oliver Twist." Yesterday several of these orphans represented their group at a Christmas party at the Goodman at 1 o'clock, when Santa Claus and members of the cast presented the tickets as a Christmas gift.

Another party yesterday was that at the Hotel Sherman given by the advertising council of the Chicago Association of Commerce. About $50[illegible] was realized to give the boys and girls of the Off the Street club a real Christmas.

Santa Claus will arrive in Chicago by airplane two days before Christmas this year with a bulging pack of Christmas toys for boys and girls served by the Salvation Army, Commissioner W. A. McIntyre announced yesterday. Santa will be accompanied by Commissioner McIntyre and they will arrive at the Municipal airport at 2 p. m., Tuesday. On hand to greet the visitor will be the Salvation Army staff band and a group of Life Saving Scouts. And all Chicago boys and girls are invited to join the receiving committee. Santa will be escorted to the Coliseum to supervise the filling of Christmas baskets which will be given to the worthy poor the following day.

A Christmas play telling the story of the birth of Christ will be given at the University of Chicago chapel on Sunday evening. Student and faculty members will take part in the pageant.

Yesterday the Chicago Woman's Ideal club met at the Blackstone hotel to hear a program of Christmas carols by the club chorus. A musical and dramatic program was given in the afternoon.

The junior class of the Faulkner school for girls will hold a Christmas dance this evening at the Shoreland hotel.

Five hundred public school children will sing Pierne's "The Children at Bethlehem," with the Chicago Symphony orchestra this afternoon in Orchestra hall, Dr. J. Lewis Browne, director of music in public schools, announced yesterday. The program will be repeated at the popular concert of the Chicago Symphony tomorrow night, and again at a special performance for teachers Monday evening, Dec. 29.

Skill of Seven Nations Fights Against Cancer

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The latest developments in cancer in more than 0 scientific institutions in seven countries were made public today.

They are summarized in the contents of the first issue of the American Journal of Cancer, now in press. This, it is stated in the summary, was not possible previously in the United States because of the prohibitive expense of printing the long papers with the colored illustrations which make them useful to physicians.

Funds for the new venture were supplied by the Chemical Foundation, of which Francis P. Garvan of New York is president, as part of a plan to facilitate national coöperation of physicians and scientists in combating cancer.

Dr. Francis Carter Wood of Columbia university is the editor. The first issue has 500 pages, dozens of illustrations and numerous articles and abstracts of the work of scientists in America, Japan, England, France, Spain, Italy, and Germany. There are special articles from Columbia, Harvard, the Memorial hospital of New York and the Mayo Foundation.

Among the unusual sidelights in the first issue is an expression of doubt that age is a cause of cancer. Dr. William H. Woglom of the Institute of Cancer Research, Columbia university, writes:

"Today it is known that sarcoma, like carcinoma [both are forms of cancer], become more frequent the greater the burden of years, and it is strongly suspected that age itself may really have nothing to do with the inception of malignant disease [cancer] save only that long life means an extended period throughout which the action of an irritant can be exerted."

By "action of an irritant," Dr. Woglom refers to observations that irritation of some sort frequently precedes cancer.

Withdraws Offer to Wed Any Man with $5,000

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Miss Catherine Nichter, 18 year old blonde who offered last week to marry any man who would give her family $5,000, has retracted. She said today she had received five proposals, but tore them up. The marriage offers were received, she said, from Spencer, Ind.; North Manchester, Ind.; Columbia, Ga.; McKee, Ky., and Terre Haute, Ind. She gave no reason for changing her mind.

Mr. and Mrs. Raskob Jr. Return from Honeymoon

North Chelmsford, Mass., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Mr. and Mrs. John J. Raskob Jr. returned home here last night after a honeymoon of five days, to be greeted by a large gathering of newspapermen. They went immediatley to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Stopherd, where they will live. Young Raskob's father is chairman of the Democratic national committee.

Sunday Evening Affair Goes Out Week Nights

BY BETTINA BEDWELL.

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Sunday night ensembles, or what we used to call such, are being worn in Paris for every evening in the week. Many smart French women prefer them for the theater to the trailing grand soir ensembles that they wear to big private receptions, because they're so much less conspicuous, more manageable, and just as chic.

White, as you know, dominates the Paris evening mode, and, though it is pretty combined with bright colors, it is never so smart as when judiciously tempered with black.

The Sunday night ensemble from Suzanne Talbot, sketched above, is of black and white velvet.

The simple frock of white velvet has its bodice shirred into two waistlines, outlined with velvet cords that tie on the left side—one placed slightly high and the other around the hips. From this point the skirt falls very full and body is given to its wide hem by many cordings of the white velvet. It has short puff sleeves and a round décolleté finished in the cordings.

The short fitted jacket of black velvet is typical of the "little wraps" that Parisiennes adore. It has a simple "smoking" collar and flaring cuffs. A long coat or cape may be worn over it in extremely cold weather. The Talbot bonnet is of white velvet, shirred and corded, with a little bow to point out a pretty nape. It has a veil of fine black tulle edged with black velvet dots. Purse and slippers are also in black velvet.

Let the Children Trim Their Tree Alone This Year

By GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

The supplying of Christmas carols will be resumed by Mrs. Bevans this year. Those desiring carols please inclose 1½ cents in coins or stamps.

Just as there comes a day when your young son or daughter realizes that there is no Santa Claus who comes dashing over the rooftops behind the tiny reindeer, so there comes a day when they know that the tree doesn't get itself trimmed by magic, but is the loving work of their father's and mother's hands.

The next step with many children is, "O, mother [or daddy], let me help you trim the tree." And with some children the plea is, "Let me trim the tree all myself."

When the children want to do this I believe in letting them do it—with just one stipulation. That is, give them plenty of time for it. And if they're fairly young don't let them tackle it late, when they're tired, because it's a job that takes time and patience and judgment.

If they really want to do it all their own way—and I know of several children who beg that they may be allowed to trim the tree without help—let them. And don't criticize and don't "barge in." You may not like the result, or think it balances in effect. But if it's to be their job, let them alone. It's a piece of work that holds possibilities for them. They have to be patient and careful to do it at all, and it develops quite a sense of arrangement and color balance.

It seems to me important not to have the tree engulfed in decorations. A dark green spicy Christmas tree is a beautiful thing, and the children can be helped to see that. But not by overcrowding it with ornaments. Of course, one wants enough of them to be gay and bounteous looking, but not enough to swamp the tree itself.

And, incidentally, have you ever let your imagination play with the idea of the various ways in which trees can be trimmed?

The baby's first tree can be a silver tree; that is, a small tree decorated with silver beads, small silver balls, both frosted and shiny, tinsel, and silver rain, snowballs and white candles.

Then there's the tree done in a color scheme which is quite lovely. Red and white; that is, red and silver and white make a handsome tree.

Last, there are the old-fashioned trees of two kinds. There's one old-fashioned Christmas tree that has all colors and some of everything on it. And, last, there's the other old-fashioned tree that has nothing but ornaments made at home on it. Of course the preparations for this tree need to be begun a little early. It takes time to make these ornaments, which include such "old timey" things as strung popcorn, strung cranberries, chains of colored and gold and silver paper, gilded nuts, tarletan stockings filled with little toys, stars, paper baskets and [bought] candy canes.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—President and Mrs. Hoover gave a dinner tonight in the White House in honor of Vice President Curtis. The guests included the governor of the Panama zone and Mrs. Harry E. Burgess; Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Gann, Maj. and Mrs. Charles P. George Jr., William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith of Des Moines, widow of a former secretary of agriculture; Mr. and Mrs. George F. Baker Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Hilles, all of New York; Dr. and Mrs. Richard C. Cabot of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Falk of Milwaukee, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Hallanan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hepburn, and Mr. and Mrs. George H. Strawbridge, all of Philadelphia; Mary Roberts Rinehart; Mrs. Herbert Hoover Jr., Mrs. Stark McMullin, and the President's military and naval aids.

After the dinner additional guests were asked for a program of music in the east room by Frieda Hempel, soprano, assisted by Frank Bishop, pianist.

Miss Gertrude Lamont, younger daughter of the secretary of commerce, whose engagement to Charles Eskridge Saltzman of Brooklyn was announced last Saturday, returned to Washington this morning from a visit to her sister, Mrs. Chauncey Belknap, in New York.

Arts Club Displays Some Fine Pictures; Some Are Mysteries

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The Arts club has opened this week an exhibition of pictures which, while bearing many of the characteristics of modernism, yet startle and amaze the inquisitive visitor by their unusual quality and magnificent workmanship. Valentine Prax is the wife of the sculptor, Ossip Zadvine, and, as well, one of the better known younger painters of Paris. This is the first time her work has been exhibited in America.

Only infrequently in the exhibit do you feel called upon to cross your fingers and mutter below your breath; "Jumble—bumble—pother and fret; if you don't look out modernism (with its high gods Picasso, Modigliani, and Braque) will get you yet!" So infrequently are you forced to this recourse that the incidents, "Fillettes a la Balle," "Femmes Courantes," and "L'Inspiration," fade into almost insignificance in the light of such assurance, sincerity, and beauty as throb through the many paintings of shells, butterflies, flowers, and birds.

It is obvious that Mme. Prax is finding her way. It is obvious that she adores romance and adventure and the high seas where no trails lie clear to tempt or bother her. She paints freely, generously, vividly, and independently. She has an unusual mastery of her craft. A thousand details bear witness to this. She has an extraordinary knowledge and command of color. She has a sense of humor that is gallant and red blooded. She paints with a love of her job that sings through her pictures. You may luxuriate at will in the beauty of her "Fruits et Papillons," "Le Coquillage," "Escargots," "La Fenetre," "Boite a Ouvrage," "Bouquet," and "Coquilles."

The number of paintings already marked "Sold" attest to the fact that others beside myself have found something unusually fine here. The exhibit will continue to Dec. [illegible] and is one that should not be missed.

[Copyright: 1930: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—St. Margaret's Westminister, the scene of many fashionable weddings, was thronged this afternoon for the marriage of Lady Mary Lindsay, daughter of the earl of Crawford and niece of Sir Ronald Lindsay, British ambassador to Washington, to Reginald Manningham-Buller, son of Sir Mervyn and Lady Manningham-Buller. The ceremony was performed by the archbishop of Canterbury.

All London society was represented at the wedding, which is one of the last of 1930. Parliament square was filled with spectators, most of them women, who waited for hours in the rain.

Bright Sayings of the Children

A Sunday school teacher had just finished a long and tedious talk on giving to the "mite box" owned by the class. Seeing one small pupil paying no attention, she decided to attract him by asking him a question.

"Johnny, why do we call this little box a 'mite box'?"

Johnny, after some consideration, answered, "Well, I guess it is because we might give and again we might not." F. J.

I was in the basement cleaning the furnace when my small daughter, Elinor, called to me, "Daddy, come up here; I want you!"

I said, "I can't come now, daughter. I'm all dirt."

Again she called, "Daddy, I want you to read to me."

I answered, "Honey, I'm busy now."

A third time she called, "O, Frank! T-e-l-e-p-h-o-n-e!" F. H. K.

"Three years ago I was in the hospital with pneumonia, and when I came out my stomach started to give me trouble. I had sharp pains and night sweats. I was told that I had ulcers of the stomach. Nothing helped me until I tried Konjola, and six bottles, and it certainly is great to feel good again. I am better than for years. Now my wife is using Konjola, and with the same splendid results."

Betty Poor and C. W. Canfield Are Engaged

BY THALIA

MR. AND MRS. FRED ARTHUR POOR of Lake Forest and Miami Beach, Fla., announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Betty Poor, to Charles Winn Canfield, son of the Charles Y. Canfields of 199 Lake Shore drive.

Miss Poor is a forthright young soul of the type that used to be referred to as an "outdoor girl." She is a very good horsewoman and spends as much of her time as possible on horseback. She went to Dana hall until last year, and never has made a formal debut.

Mr. Canfield, who is brother to the Canfield twins, the little girls who won all the swimming prizes at the Woman's Athletic club meet last winter, attended Hill prep school, and is working in the Upper Avenue bank. They are to be married in June.

There was no party to "spring" the news of the betrothal, but Mrs. Poor is to give a luncheon for the bride-to-be a week from tomorrow at the Woman's Athletic club. The following day the Poors are going south to Miami Beach. Their yacht is moored in the harbor down there, waiting for them to have their usual gay cruises aboard it—and they won't be back until well along in the early spring. They're in town at the Drake just now.

Mrs. Farwell Winston and Mrs. Kent Clow are managing the arrangements for the annual New Year's eve party at Onwentsia, that takes in practically all of the young crowd in Lake Forest.

G. O. P. Women's Luncheon Does Cook Book Justice.

Impressions of Mrs. Baur's luncheon party yesterday to tell about the Woman's National Republican club's cook book, infused with the hostess' dynamic spirit from the pouring of the wishing powder on the wood fire to "T. P. O." [Mrs. Baur's "The Party's Over"] . . . the Astor street house with Rosemary's stuffed red Santa Claus peering out a lower window to welcome her when she gets home tomorrow from Bryn Mawr . . . the spirited arguments about the price of the book [it's to be red and black with "Distinguished Hostesses" on the front cover and a G. O. P. elephant done by John McCutcheon on the back, all lacquered and very de luxe] . . . distribution of style pages ["This book is dedicated to those who realize that cooking is chemistry, chemistry is science, science is art, art is life, and life depends upon good cooking"—Bertha D. Baur] and explanation of the fine get-up of the book [Mrs. Herbert Hoover's caramel tomatoes leads off the list, and besides there are contributions from national committeewomen, Dolly Gann, opera singers, governors' and diplomats' wives, and many Chicago hostesses] . . . discussion of the various publishing details and hazarding a guess as to the possible date of publication . . . delicious cheese soufflé and popovers from recipes in the book . . . everybody having a good time, buoyed along by Mrs. Baur's vivacity. . . . On the way out they were greeted cheerfully by Mrs. Townsend McKeever's small dogs, Chin-chin, the Pekingese, and Sharkey, the miniature Boston, bull, who get along together beautifully. Mrs. McKeever, Mrs. Harry Atwood, and Mrs. Baur are the cook book committee.

Chicago society should be awfully pleased about the fact that the John Lowries of New York City are coming here to live. They've taken an apartment at 1242 Lake Shore drive, and Mrs. Lowrie has been here this week to see about getting it ready for them to occupy about the first of the year. They're both attractive, intelligent, and most personable. Mr. Lowrie is the grandson of Mr. Gale, who founded Galesburg, and he owns a great deal of Illinois property himself.

[Underwood & Underwood Photo.]

The engagement of Miss Betty Poor to Charles Winn Canfield, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Y. Canfield, is announced this morning by Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Poor.

Here's More Information About Interesting Persons.

It was learned yesterday . . . that Dr. and Mrs. Arnold C. Klebs of "Les Terrasses," Nyon, Switzerland, have been visiting Mrs. Klebs' son-in-law and daughter, the William Burrys Jr., in Lake Forest, and that Mrs. Klebs is going on to New York City today, having been preceded there by Dr. Klebs, and that they will sail on Jan. 4 . . . that Mary Rend has been at the Presbyterian hospital for an operations, and is doing so splendidly Dr. Heaney says she may be home for Christmas day . . . that the Howard Eltings, whose son, Howard Jr., is not coming from Washington, D. C., for the holidays, are living at the Lake Shore Drive . . . that Margaret James is having a pre-prandial this afternoon at the 220 East Walton place apartment that the James family is occupying this year . . . that the John Payne Kelloggs are to be in New York City for two months [Lee, Higginson & Co. is sending Mr. Kellogg there on business], but will come back here for Christmas.

Speaking of enviable jobs, Theo Platt of Evanston does research and secretarial work for Prof. Edwin Oakes Jordan, the University of Chicago bacteriologist, and besides meeting a great many interesting bugs she goes on a trip to some nice out of the way and climatically pleasant place every winter. Last year it was Porto Rico, and this year the staff is off with all its paraphernalia for Panama. They departed a few days ago and are to be gone until some time in March. Miss Platt helps write the books and corrects proof, and likes it very much.

Janet Fairbank Jr. Here; Acts with Junior League.

It's news . . . that Janet Fairbank Jr., recently returned from studying singing in Germany, is planning to stay home for a while, that beginning tomorrow morning she is to take the part of the interlocutor in the Junior league's children's Chauve Souris, because Gloria Chandler, who did it so engagingly last Saturday, is going away, and also that she is putting a new interpretation on the rôle and wearing a different costume . . . that Don McLennan won't be coming in with the Yale boys tomorrow because he's staying over in New York City till Monday to play in a hockey game . . . that Barrett Mason, who will be home from Yale tomorrow, is to give a dinner party the night of the Yale Glee club concert [next Tuesday] . . . that the Thomas L. Marshalls of 10 East Schiller street have a second son, born on Tuesday at the Presbyterian hospital [Mrs. Marshall was Buffy Carpenter] . . . that the Commonwealth club had a duck dinner at the Racquet club last night.

Mary Garden Again Wins Acclaim, Singing in "The Resurrection"

BY EDWARD MOORE.

For several years it had been supposed that of all the Mary Garden operas "Resurrection," based on the novel of Leo Tolstoy, did the most toward sidetracking musical values in favor of dramatic situations. This is now believed to be incorrect. In its revival at the Civic Opera house last night and by comparison with certain other operatic manifestations in the not too distant past, it seemed like a gushing fount of melody.

You may say, if you like, that it is music of too gentle and caressing a sort to be a reflection of the excited melodrama which develops in the story and the chances are that you will be right. Still, it is something to have singable melody, to remember how superbly Cesare Formichi sang his brief bit in the final act, and what an effect René Maison produced in the prison scene just before.

Which is by no means saying that Miss Garden did not sing also. She did. There have been times in the past, many of them, when standardized vocal conventionalities concerned her but little in the creation of her effects, but in this unconventional rôle she did quite a bit of conventional singing, good singing, too, in a voice perhaps less powerful than it used to be, but capable, as it was toward the end of the prison scene, of projecting touching sincerity.

As for drama, it is there in all varieties from that in italics to that in large capitals, from joyous youth in the first act to tragic despair in the second and twitching hysterics in the third, finally in the final act to fine, poised, restrained serenity.

Miss Garden projected them all vigorously and vividly. And she had first rate assistance from Mr. Maison and Mr. Formichi, also from groups of lesser principals. And Mr. Moranzoni at the conductor's stand searched constantly for the melodic line of the score, and found it.

Society at the Opera

SOCIETY in the boxes at the Civic Opera house last night thrilled to Mary Garden's performance in "Resurrection."

Miss Bertha Palmer was present in the family box, for the first time this season, with a group of young people as her guests. Her party included Princess Elizabeth Cantacuzene, who is visiting the Palmers; Miss Phoebe Logan and her fiancé, Joseph B. Terbell Jr., and John Pierce. Miss Palmer wore a black velvet gown and ermine wrap, Miss Logan a blue satin dress and white lapin jacket, and Princess Cantacuzene a black velvet gown and a wrap of blue velvet trimmed in beige fox. Miss Palmer's chaperon, Miss Webb, accompanied the party.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter B. Wolf, the latter in black velvet and an orchid corsage, had with them Mrs. Wolf's daughter, Miss Ghita Watson, and her two sons, Walter and Hathaway Watson Jr. The boys arrived home on Wednesday from St. Mark's school.

Miss Mary Porter, who came from Vermont this week to spend Christmas with her father, Henry H. Porter, acted as hostess to Mr. Porter's guests, who included Mrs. Richardson Dunham, Baron and Baroness Raffolowitch, and Mr. and Mrs. Byron S. Harvey.

Mr. and Mrs. Bowman Lingle, Mrs. James C. Ames and Willard Boyden were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wirth S. Dunham. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ayer were hosts to Miss Elizabeth McCormick, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Storrs, and J. A. Pyer. Mr. and Mrs. Allan Kempe and Mr. and Mrs. W. M. Spencer were guests of the F. Edson Whites.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Clay Judson, Mrs. Bryan Lathrop, Henry Channon and Edwin D. Krenn. Miss Eleanor Rosenwald, Richard Rosenwald and Mr. and Mrs. Howard L. Willett were guests of Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Herbst.

This Bleach Will Remove Stains from the Fingers

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Some women's fingernails, though scrubbed carefully enough, still have a grayish tint. A bleach may be used. Dishwashing and housework sometimes leave this stigma on the nails. If nails are stained or discolored for any reason, or for none, you can mix a preparation of four parts of peroxide, one part of ammonia, and one part lemon juice. Prepare just enough bleach for immediate use. Immerse the finger tips in the preparation, or dip a padded orange stick in it and go under each nail tip in turn with the bleaching lotion.

If stains are heavy down the finger sides and do not respond to the above bleach, take a nail brush, dip it in the solution, then dip it in powdered pumice stone and scrub hard on the stained surface. The pumice stone, be warned, is disastrous to the nail polish. But, of course, you can renew the shine from your manicure kit. There are good proprietary bleaches on the market, in case you'd rather some one else did your mixing for you.

A nice nail habit to get is to use a nail cream around the nail cuticle nightly. You can either push the cuticle back then with your tissue remover, shaping as you do so, or use an orangewood stick with cotton wrapped around its flat edge, and shape the cuticle so.

Well kept hands never show a tight clinging of cuticle to nail. And some nails have to be fought all the time to prevent this ungroomed look.

There is no reason, while you are at it, why you shouldn't put enough cream or oil on the entire hand and go ahead with a minute or two of hand massage. It is expected of hands, now that they have just as massaged a look as faces. It's the one way to keep them from getting old looking.

And if there is a tendency to chapped hands, you may save yourself much embarrassment and acquire hand beauty by the nightly creaming or oiling. You may use olive oil, which is excellent for both cuticle and skin on the surface of the hand.

BEAUTY ANSWERS

L. H.: LEMON JUICE HAS NO particular value but orange juice is rich in vitamins, as proved by the prominent place it has in a child's diet. It aids digestion and is recommended by dental authorities for teeth preservation and mouth hygiene.

PATTERNS BY CLOTILDE

(Registered U. S. Patent Office.)

JUNIOR GIRL'S DRESS.

Here is a snappy model with a grownup air that girls will be certain to adore. It is so straight and slender looking, and has such a gracefully swinging hemline. Bone buttons from neck to hem add further distinction to this scarlet red wool jersey frock. The white pique collar and cuffs are stitched in red. The side bodice sections, both front and back, could be cut crosswise, creating a smart effect.

The pattern, 2849, comes in sizes 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2¼ yards of 39 inch material with ½ yard of 35 inch contrasting.

FARM AND GARDEN BY PAUL POTTER

WHAT MAKES AN AMATEUR?

Distinctions between amateurs and professionals who trod the paths of flower gardens are almost as difficult to outline as those in the field of sports. Justice needs to enter into several considerations in classifying the amateur flower gardener, says Furman Lloyd Mulford, specialist in floriculture and landscape gardening with the United States department of agriculture.

"An amateur is one who grows plants for the love of it, while the professional is one who grows them for the money he can secure from it," says Mr. Mulford.

He says it would seem easy to class any who sold the products of their gardens as professionals, but that it would nevertheless be unjust to many enthusiastic gardeners who spend large sums for new varieties and occasionally sell some of the surplus materials to others and reinvest in new kinds. Many of these are unquestionably amateurs, in his opinion.

Mr. Mulford, however, does not leave the subject under controversy. He simply outlines a new definition for the amateur: "One who grows his plants for the love of it and whose sales from his garden do not equal his outlay for seeds and plants."

Middle Aged Widow, Lonely, Considers the Altar Again

BY DORIS BLAKE.

"I am a widow of 45, am told I'm young looking; am healthy, and have a cheerful disposition. My husband died years ago, leaving me with three small boys. I have worked hard to educate them. Two of them have degrees already and the 'baby' is away in college. Two are supporting wives now, and wonderful girls they are.

"I am left alone and find it very lonesome, as you may imagine. I am still self-supporting. Thank heaven, I do not have to depend on the children! Now, I have a staunch friend who advises me against marriage. She claims that when women get my age it is the few dollars they have accumulated that attract; that marriage is too much of a gamble then, with character and habits set.

"I tell her I would marry a good, honest American man who promised me the companionship I would like. What do you think of a 'ridiculous 45 year old lovelorn'?

"MRS. C. M."

I think if a good, honest American man came along offering companionship and a home you'd be a foolish one to pass him up. Any woman who has successfully raised three boys to marriageable age certainly knows how to handle men and undoubtedly would be a prize in a marriage bargain. He'd be lucky to get you.

Let us suppose that a few accumulated dollars are no drawback to a middle aged person looking for a husband. It is quite reasonable to suppose they wouldn't be. The accumulation represents a certain stability that is not disadvantageous as an asset in a woman. Rich widows have been the target for comedians, always. But their possesions needn't be held against them, either. It does not follow that widows of means are married for their money only. They are frequently married because they're liked immensely.

Naturally, they do not expect to be bowled over by some impetuous lover more becoming their age some twenty years before. It is companionship that only a man of contemporary years can give that is sought, at this time of life. And arguments against such women completely abandoning thoughts of remarriage are ridiculous. Nothing is more pleasing than to see a woman who has sacrificed years for the upbringing of her children, ensconsed comfortably in a home of her own with a mate of agreeable tastes.

Felt Hat Output Slumps.

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The fashion of having a felt hat for every gown has reduced the American production of wool felt hats for women. In buying a large number of hats, women are buying less expensive ones, bureau of census figures show. Cheaper foreign made hats are being imported, government experts say.

Guerlain parfumeur Paris

a Gift, Messieurs of Kingly Elegance

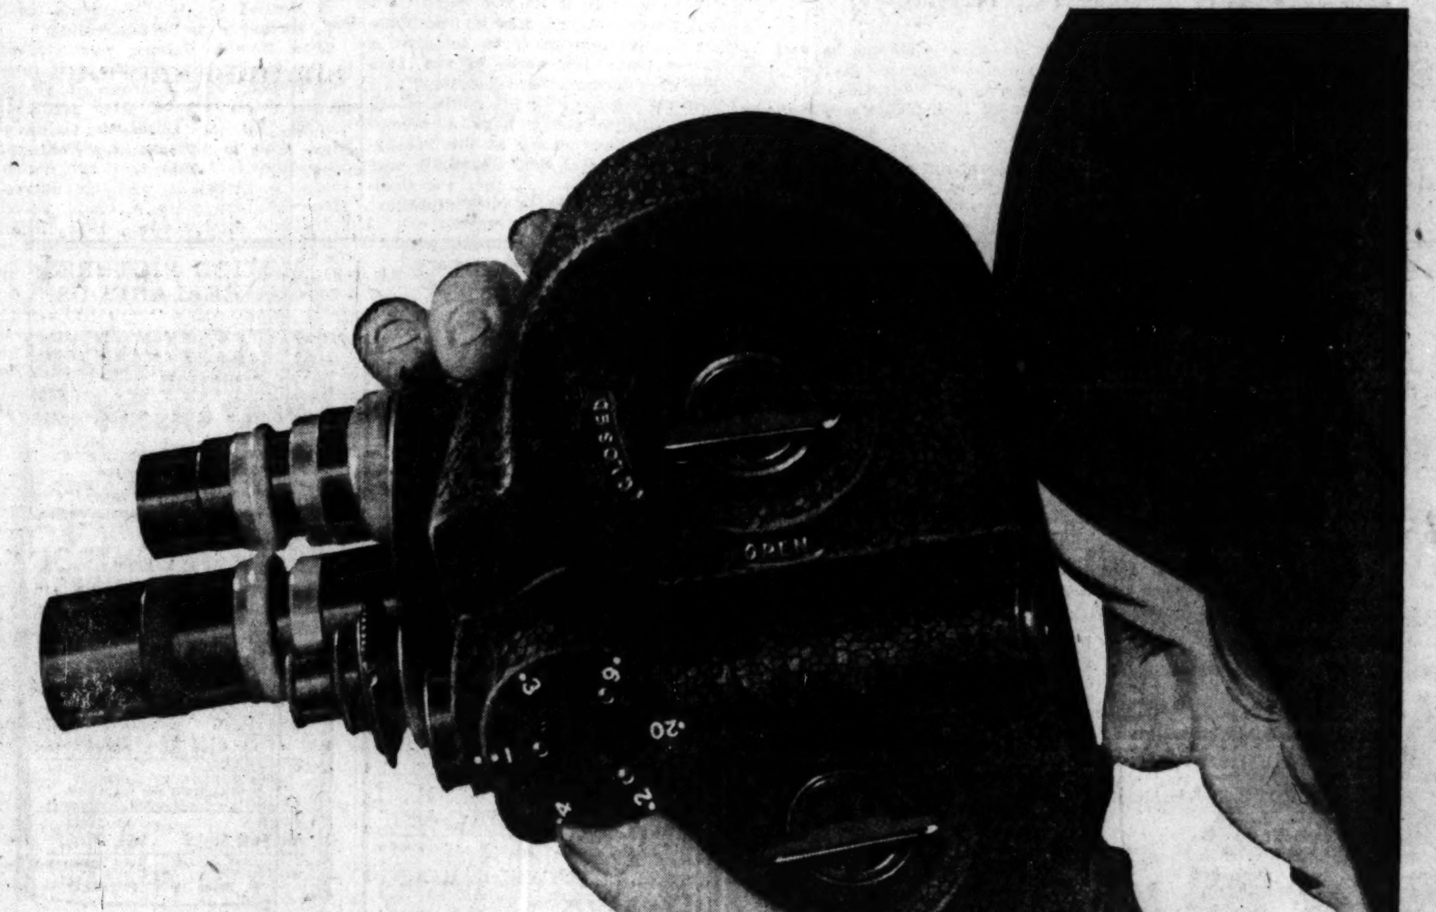
There are very few priceless things in all the world. One of them is the finest perfume. It does seem dear, in its bulkless bottle, but all the rubies in the world could not command a finer perfume than Guerlain. For it is one of the few things, absolute in its perfection, that tinges with elegance the act of giving.

LIU (above), Guerlain's newest perfume, has a strange and modern charm, and if newness is to be an added virtue of your gift, Liu is an offering without compare . $30.00

TALC GLOBE (below). In its glistening universe, a talcum, soft, impalpable, and a luxurious down puff. Odeurs: Shalimar, L'Heure Bleue, Rue de la Paix, Mitsouko. $9.00

SHALIMAR is the reigning perfume of the world. Women of elegance in all the great capitals bow to its power and its beauty . . . . $12.50—$25.00

L'HEURE BLEUE is $5.00, $15.00, $22.50, and $45.00. It has the haunting remembrance of soft Parisian twilights. Its devotees will have no other.



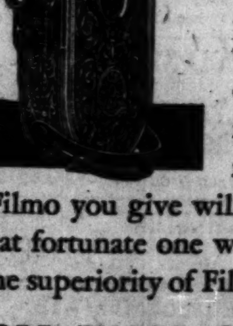
A Splendid gift . . .

a Genuine

Bell & Howell FILMO

Personal Movie Camera

as low as $92



The season for fine things—Christmas. And no finer gift could you select than Filmo, the better personal movie camera, with its jewel-like precision, its sturdiness, its scientifically accurate photography. Years from today, the Filmo you give will still be the source of real pleasure to that fortunate one who receives it.

The superiority of Filmo in making personal movies, both in case of operation and in excellence of photographic results, is a genuine superiority. For Filmo is made by Bell & Howell, makers for nearly a quarter of a century of the professional studio movie cameras used by the major film producers of the world. And the same qualities that give Bell & Howell leadership in the professional field, give the Filmo its leadership in the field of personal movies . . . a leadership reflected not a little in the fact that Filmo is the choice of more princes and kings than you can name on all your fingers.

There is a Filmo for every desire, every purse. See them at the nearest dealer's. Then you'll know why we say Filmo is such a really fine thing to give for Christmas.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The Chicago Shamrocks and the Kansas City Pla-Mors last night at the Chicago Stadium gave 7,000 American league hockey customers their first demonstration of how exciting the new wrinkle in overtime play can be made. The clinic came to a fitting close, for the Shamrocks won in 4:35 of the second overtime period, 2 to 1.

Under the new rules of the American league a tie game calls for two 10 minute overtime periods with the proviso, however, that the first overtime goal decides the issue. Last night the first overtime session was played in toto, but in the second bargain interval Pewee Wiseman skated past a flock of gents twice his size and sent the folks home in a noisier mood than any American league spectators at the Stadium this season.

Timmins Makes 46 Stops.

While Wiseman and Fuller, who scored the two Chicago markers, are entitled to full praise for their skilled behavior, the busiest man on the rink was Sam Timmins, Shamrock goalie. Sam was all over the place while engaged in making 18 stops in the first period, 12 in the second period, 10 in the third, 5 in the first overtime, and 1 in the second for an evening's total of 46, as compared with Goalie Byrne, who had a fast evening himself with a mere 25 stops.

Despite the skill which enabled the Pla-Mors to lay down the barrage on Timmins the Shamrocks would have won in regulation time but for a rather startling relapse on the part of Bouncer Taylor and Andy Mulligan three-fourths through the third period, when they thought Ken Dunfield was doing some fancy skating. They never dreamed he had the puck until they saw him score and even then they charged that he must have been carrying it under his jersey.

Customers Enjoy Themselves.

The contest was the best received of any of the wares the new league has shown here this year if the shouting of the customers was to be accepted as a basis of judgment. There might have been a claque but the noise had all the earmarks of sponaneity.

Although the Pla-Mors rattled 18 shots off Timmin's anatomy during the first period, as compared with only five stops by Byrne, the Shamrocks came out of the session leading, 1 to 0.

When nine minutes and 22 seconds of the game had elapsed, Fuller did a bit of placement shooting to put the Green and White fellows ahead. Wiseman had taken a shot at an angle and Goldie picked up the carom about four feet away from Byrne's boots. Instead of shooting at the boots the young man focused on the far margin of the cage and whanged the puck exactly where he was looking.

Timmins Is Kept Busy.

Timmins made 12 more stops in the second period but the cleverest of these was no more exciting than the tamest of the dozen and a half in the first period, principally because the Pla-Mors were doing most of their shooting from the blue line. Again Byrne had less work in the goal tending business, with a total of nine stops.

Dunfield made Mulligan and Taylor look bad when he tied the score in 14:35 of the third period. Ken took the puck on the bar blue line and with grace and ease started toward the Chicago goal while Bouncer and Andy stood back on the heels of their skates, charmed by the enemy's pretty stick handling. After he had passed the inert Shamrock defense men he leisurely skated down to the brink of the cage, then slashed home the tying marker.

Timmins Stops Attacks.

Timmins continued to be the main man in the first overtime period with a total of five stops, three of which were red hot. Byrne made only three.

The game came to a close when Wiseman and MacKenzie rushed the puck down the ice and the former propelled the puck past Goalie Byrne for the deciding counter.

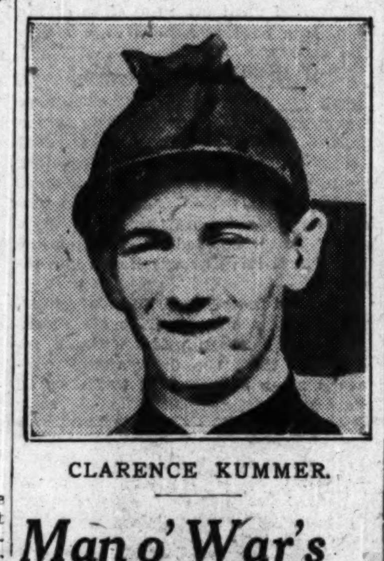
TURF'S LOSS



CLARENCE KUMMER.

Man o' War's Jockey Dies of Pneumonia

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Clarence Kummer, whose heels booted Man o' War home and who rode some of America's finest thoroughbreds to victory less than a decade ago, died of pneumonia today at his home in Jamaica, N. Y. He had been ill only a week. He was 31 years old.

Kummer was driven from the saddle by increasing weight three years ago after a career stretching from apprentice days in 1915 through triumphs in almost every important stake on American tracks. His mounts, among them Man o' War, Chance Play, Audacious, Snob, Blazes, Westy Hogan, Naturalist and Ladkin, brought him home first in the Preakness, Suburban, Realization, Belmont, Travers, Withers, Juvenile, Toboggan, Tremont, Nursery, Champlain, Grand American, and Manhattan. The only major stakes that evaded him were the Kentucky Derby and Belmont Futurity.

Weight Spoiled His Comeback.

Last spring, seeking a comeback, Kummer went into training for several months under Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons, conditioner of Gallant Fox, but could not remove enough weight to ride. He was negotiating for a position as trainer when he became ill, probably as an indirect result of his exertions in the spring.

Rode Ladkin to Beat Epinard.

In 1924 Kummer was credited with another masterful bit of riding in an international match race, classic of that year. He was astride Ladkin in a neck and neck finish to defeat Epinard, famous French racer.

Kummer rode Man o' War in almost all of his 3 year old engagements, including the decisive victory over Sir Barton, Canadian champion, in a match race for $75,000 at Windsor, Ont., in 1920. This was the last race in which the famous pair teamed, but Kummer continued to ride the best of the turf for years afterwards.

MOHLER, TROJAN QUARTER BACK, TO WED MOVIE STAR

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Hollywood Cal., Dec. 18.—Rosita Moreno, Spanish screen actress, today announced that she is engaged to marry Orville Mohler, quarter back on the University of Southern California football team. Mohler has two more years in college. They have no immediate marriage plans, the actress said.

She was born in Madrid and is 19. Mohler is the son of Kid Mohler, old time professional baseball player, now coaching at West Point. Young Mohler is 20, and a licensed airplane pilot, specializing at college on aeronautics. Miss Moreno is living here with her parents.

DE PAUL WINS, 30-20

Carbondale, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—De Paul university of Chicago beat the Southern Illinois Teachers basketball team 30 to 20 here tonight. A final spurt after the Teachers had climbed to within three points of the visitors, clinched the game for the Chicagoans who sank five goals in rapid succession.

At the half the score was 15 to 9 in favor of De Paul, although the Teachers took the lead when Hiller sank the first field goal. The Teachers were held to three field goals for the rest of the game.

Coan, De Paul forward, was the high scorer with four field goals. B. O'Connor, guard, and Powers, forward, each made three field goals. Lineup:

Des Moines, Ia., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Scoring only two field goals the Drake Bulldogs succumbed to St. Louis university, 13 to 8, in a nonconference contest here tonight. St. Louis led, 7 to 3, at the half.

Stadium Shows Profit in 1930. Drops Recapitalizing Plan

BY WILFRID SMITH.

The recapitalization of the Chicago Stadium, the world's largest sports palace, which was proposed several months ago by Sidney N. Strotz, president and general manager, to avert bankruptcy, has not been completed, it was revealed yesterday. Furthermore, Mr. Strotz said, the plan has been abandoned and the Stadium will continue with a $7,000,000 capitalization.

Bankruptcy was threatened when the Stadium defaulted interest on the first mortgage of $1,750,000, Mr. Strotz said, repeating information he had conveyed to the stockholders in July. The interest was due last July 1.

Make Interest Payment.

"There will be no bankruptcy proceedings," Mr. Strotz said yesterday. "We completed payment of the $52,500 defaulted interest on the first mortgage after the Stribling-Griffith fight. The interest falls due again Jan. 1, and it will be paid from current receipts not later than the middle of February.

"The interest on the second mortgage of $183,100 at 7 per cent amounting semi-annually to $6,408.50 will be paid at the same time.

"The mortgage holders, of course, will not institute bankruptcy proceedings as long as the Stadium meets its interest obligations. The creditors for operating expenses will not force foreclosure as long as they believe their bills will be paid eventually. The opening deficit on Oct. 31 dating from March, 1929 when the Stadium was opened is $227,534.34. This deficit was incurred prior to my election as president.

Shows Profit This Year.

"We have shown a gross operating profit of $173,061.28 between Jan. 1 and Oct. 31, 1930. This has encouraged the creditors to wait for payment."

Mr. Strotz' explanation of the financial condition of the Stadium follows:

"No deposits have been made in the sinking fund to retire the first mortgage of $1,750,000 which is due in 1943. The first mortgage actually amounts to $1,698,000, however, by previous reduction.

"The second mortgage of $183,100 falls due in 1935. This is privately held

"Ninety per cent of the 500,000 shares of common stock issued, with a valuation of $2,500,000, and 50 per cent of the 25,000 shares of preferred stock issued, at $2,500,000, have been deposited with the Stadium corporation. These deposits were at the request of the stockholders' committee in anticipation of the recapitalization plan now abandoned.

"The operating expenses of the Stadium this fall have been paid, in addition to the bond interest. We have paid $13,000 on account to creditors. One of the largest creditors holds $66,000 in notes, the balance due on the pipe organ. He is satisfied to wait until the Stadium can pay."

The gross income of the Stadium from Jan. 1 to Oct. 31, according to Mr. Strotz, was $669,114.22, with a direct operating expense for that period of $496,052.94. The resulting gross profit of $173,061.28 was subject to administrative expense.

How Fall Sports Contributed to Stadium Income

Fights.

Sept. 11—Canzoneri-Petrolle fight. Gross receipts, $44,804.08, with paid attendance of 13,061. The net receipts of $7,700 were turned over to the Patricia Harmon trust fund.

Oct. 14—Singer-Mack fight. Gross receipts, $29,125.27, with 9,643 paid attendance. Operating deficit, $648.04.

Nov. 6—Levinsky-Slattery fight. Gross receipts, $50,221.07, with 16,855 paid attendance. Net profits approximately $12,000.

Dec. 12—Stribling-Griffith fight. Gross receipts, $84,232.41, with 15,179 paid attendance. Profit approximately $20,000, of which $5,000 was paid to unemployment campaign.

Six Day Bicycle Race.

Gross receipts, $68,703.40, with attendance of 63,605. Fifty per cent of the profits, $9,351.70, went to the Stadium.

Ice Hockey.

From Nov. 16 the Blackhawks have played seven games at the Stadium with a total rental of $35,000. The total paid attendance at these games was 73,402.

From Nov. 27 the Shamrocks have played five games [not including last night's game]. The Stadium is leased to the Shamrocks on a percentage basis. The Stadium has received $6,435.50. The total paid attendance for five games was 25,739.

The total receipts from public ice skating have been $2,417.50, with an operating expense of approximately $30 a night.

The sale of programs for the same period shows a net profit of $14,718.63 from gross receipts of $18,696.68.

The income from concessions and programs will be augmented when the November and December statement is compiled. The gross receipts for the six day bike race were $17,000.

Tipster Back Home and the Laugh Is on Him, It Seems

BY FRENCH LANE.

Jimmy Dooley—if you frequent the Chicago race tracks you will recall Irish Jimmy—is back in the loop after a rather hurried trip to the Jefferson Park course in New Orleans.

Jimmy Dooley isn't a tout. He says so himself. But if you call him a hustler his chest expands. "There's money to be made at the race track and anybody who hustles can get some of it," is Jimmy's size up of the situation.

So Jimmy not many days ago steamed away for New Orleans full of ambition and hustle. The prospect of a winter along old Canal street, in the land of the palms and the sunshine, and an opportunity to help improve the breed of the thoroughbred lured Jimmy.

Helps Uninitiated Pick 'Em.

On the race track it is Jimmy's business to help pick the winners for the boys and girls who possess bankrolls, but whose turf knowledge is limited. And during Jimmy's first two visits at Jefferson Park the horses were not running exactly to the form of Jimmy's handicap figures. The inside information he picked up was worse.

"They were running so terrible I broke four good men on my first day out," Jimmy said. "The bankrolls of five others had bit the dust when my second day's jaunt to the track ended."

On his third visit Jimmy was somewhat desperate. He was out bright and early and by the time the horses were led into the paddock for the third race he had struck up an acquaintance with a tired New Orleans business man who was at the track for an afternoon of recreation.

Finally Convinces Him.

With a high powered sales talk, Jimmy was endeavoring to convince the fatigued business man that he should make a good sized wager on a 15 to 1 shot.

The tired business man was reluctant, so Jimmy's story goes. But Jimmy says he clinched him just as the bugle sounded. "This horse can't lose," pleaded Jimmy, "the jockey is a nephew of mine."

The business man elbowed his way into the mutuel betting ring and made his wager. Then he joined Jimmy along the rail to watch the parade to the post.

Their horse was No. 8. And No. 8 came prancing past them with Jockey R. Simpson in the saddle. Simpson is the only Negro jockey now riding on the larger tracks. His ebony hued skin glistened like an overgrown ace of spades beneath the Louisiana sunshine.

The tired business man turned to Jimmy. But Jimmy was gone. And he was back yesterday to spend the holidays with the home folks.

BADGERS' RUSH IN LAST HALF WHIPS PENN FIVE, 25-12

9,000 Jam Fieldhouse for Dedication Game.

Madison, Wis., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Before a crowd of 9,000 spectators who jammed every corner of the large building Wisconsin dedicated its new $500,000 fieldhouse tonight with a smashing basketball victory over Pennsylvania, 25 to 12.

Close guarding by both teams held the score down in the first half, which ended 9 to 6, in favor of the Badgers, but when the teams took the floor after the intermission Wisconsin quickly assumed a commanding lead. Toward the end Coach Meanwell of Wisconsin used about every member of his squad and the subs were able to maintain the safe lead.

Badgers Score First.

Wisconsin took the lead when Tornowske slipped through for a close shot a few seconds after the first tipoff. Peterson gave Penn a point on a free throw, but successful free tosses by Steen and Paul raised the Badger lead to 4 to 1. McNiff looped in a long one, making the score 4 to 3.

Baskets by Torfnowske and Nelson again enabled the Badgers to pull ahead to 9 points, while Penn added a free toss by Sander and a goal by Ulrich to raise its score to 7 shortly before the half ended.

The second half was all Wisconsin with Tornowske, Steen and Wisconsin's veteran guards, co-Captains Chmielewski and Paul scintillating with brilliant floor work and clever shooting.

Badgers Run Lead to 17-7.

In six minutes the Badgers had run the count to 17 to 7, and then Meanwell began shooting in substitutes. Penn did not score for more than ten minutes and made but five points during the half.

Before the game formal dedication exercises were staged in which John Callahan, state superintendent of public instruction, representing Gov. Kohler; H. J. Schwartz, Penn's assistant graduate manager, and George Little, director of Wisconsin athletics, made brief addresses.

Meanwell Honored.

Then Little presented Dr. Meanwell, Badger coach, a six foot bronze plaque as a testimonial to his 16 years of service to Wisocnsin, during which his teams have won eight Big Ten basketball championships. Lineup:

REGAINS CROWN

Rudolph Beats Greenleaf for Billiard Title

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Erwin Rudolph of Chicago won the world's pocket billiards championship tonight, defeating Ralph Greenleaf of New York, defending champion, 125 to 120, in the deciding match of the tournament.

Rudolph's triumph over the champion gave him a final tournament record of seven victories and no defeats. Greenleaf, dominating figure in pocket billiards for a decade, was runner-up with five triumphs in seven starts.

Rudolph held the title once before, beating Greenleaf in a challenge match here in January, 1927. He was beaten four months later by Tommy Hueston. Last year in the Detroit tournament Rudolph won his first six games, but lost to Greenleaf on the final night, the championship ending in a deadlock. Greenleaf then repeated his victory over Rudolph in the playoff to capture the title.

The final match tonight was a tensely played duel that lasted three and one-half hours. Greenleaf seemingly had the game won when he led 118 to 73 in the 27th inning but Rudolph outgeneraled his opponent in the long safety duel that followed.

In the 36th inning Greenleaf ran his total to 120 but he got poor position and missed on a difficult shot. Rudolph then got the balls under control and ran 23 to end the match.

By his victory Rudolph wins $8,500 in cash and an emblem worth $1,000. Rudolph's high run was 28; Greenleaf's 33.

A playoff between Taberski and Lauri for third place will be held tomorrow. Each won four games and lost three.

MONTREAL, Dec. 18.—(AP)—The Chicago Blackhawks and Les Canadiens fought to a scoreless tie tonight in their National Hockey league game. Sixty minutes of regulation time and ten minutes of overtime failed to produce a goal, so efficient was the work of Gardiner and Hainsworth, the rival goalies.

Vic Ripley was banished from the game in the third period after making an untoward remark to the referee.

Les Canadiens were at the peak of their form as the first period opened and ripped in five attacks before Hainsworth was troubled with a shot. Morenz and Joliat, teaming in perfect style, led the home attack.

A change of front lines after five minutes' play brought Chicago into prominence, the line of Ripley, Gottselig, and Couture pinning Les Canadiens in their own area for minutes at a time. Ripley made a clever play when he took the puck from Pete Lepine, rounded Marty Burke, and slapped a perfect low shot that Hainsworth just kicked out.

Gardiner Prevents Scores.

Twice within a few seconds Morenz and Joliat broke through the defense. The first time Gardiner dived to smother Morenz's shot and on the second occasion Joliat shot an inch wide. The pace was fast throughout the opening period.

Les Canadiens launched two attacks early in the second period, a defense man featuring in each Marty Burke and Howie Morenz were in the first and Morenz and Sylvio Mantha in the second. The Montreal defense men were playing out to their blue line and the visitors found it difficult to get close enough for effective shots.

While Cook was serving a penalty for holding Gagnon, Gardiner made a great falling save of Larochelle's shot. Morenz skated through and was racing in on Gardiner when Bostrum pulled his feet from under him. The defense man took a penalty, but prevented an almost certain score.

Ingram Nearly Scores.

One of Chicago's most dangerous rushes, a Cook-Dutkowski affair, was broken up by Leduc before they could get the shot away. Penalties to the Chicago defense men for heavy checking gave Les Canadiens many opportunities, but Gardiner brilliantly handled drives from Morenz, Joliat, Gagnon, and Lepine. Ingram and Romnes pulled a smooth bit of passing which enabled Ingram to get away a hard shot to the corner. Hainesworth barely kicked it away.

Chicago almost got a break at the start of the third period. Cook blazed a hard shot at Hainsworth, who was standing with his legs straddled. The goalie barely snapped his pads together before the puck hit him.

When Burke was penalized for interference, Chicago pressed for a tally. But Sylvio Mantha and Joliat kept the puck most of the time the Canadiens were short handed and the danger passed. McCaffrey intercepted a pass from Ripley to Gottselig, and another Chicago chance went astray.

Ripley Chased from Game.

While Chicago was changing lines, Vic Ripley made a remark to Referee Cleghorn and was banished for the rest of the game. No penalty was given his side, however. Joliat gave the crowd its most sustained thrill of the night with perfect stick handling while Lepine was serving a penalty.

Hainsworth made a great save from Arbour, who came in from the right boards. Cook took a penalty for slashing, and Les Canadians piled in on Gardiner, who was turning back everything. Tempers grew short as the end grew near, and both sides handed out merciless checks. The furious pace of the earlier part of the game was maintained.

With four minutes to go, Morenz and Joliat, Les Canadians' great marksmen, made futile attempts to tally. Sylvio Mantha's penalty passed without incident, and the game went into overtime.

The overtime opened with furious attacks. It looked as if lady luck would smile on Chicago when Couture broke in on Hainsworth and almost tricked him with a high shot.

Then it was Les Canadiens' turn to just lose out. Morenz raced away and passed to Larochelle, whose shot was blocked by Gardiner.

PHYSICIAN FINDS REST IS ROCKNE'S GREATEST NEED

He'll Spend Two Weeks at Rochester Clinic.

Rochester, Minn., Dec. 18.—(AP)—Worn by the strenuous football season just ended, Knute Rockne, famous coach at Notre Dame, was registered at the Mayo clinic here again tonight for a physical inventory.

Although Rockne said he feared a recurrence of an old leg ailment which laid him low last spring, his physician, Dr. C. J. Barborka, said a preliminary examination revealed the coach may be suffering from a fatigued physical condition. Further examinations will be made later, but Dr. Barborka said he expected to find nothing organically wrong.

Will Remain Two Weeks.

Rockne said he would remain here about two weeks for a thorough examination and rest, and "to make sure" that the recent slight twitching in a leg is not a recrudescence of phlebitis which brought him here six months ago.

Dr. Barborka, who has taken care of Rockne for the last two years, said his preliminary examination revealed no definite symptoms and he believes his patient is suffering from fatigue "induced by strain of emotions" to which he was subjected during the football season.

"Mr. Rockne looks fine," the physician said, "except that he is tired from strain and from making three or four speeches every day. His condition is just what is expected of any one who has gone through such a strenuous season. I don't see any reason for confining him to his bed."

ANOTHER OF THOSE RUMORS.

South Bend, Ind., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The South Bend Tribune in its last edition today featured the following story on the front page:

"Rumors regarding the possibility that Knute K. Rockne would retire from active coaching and confine his work at Notre Dame to that of athletic director, starting next season, persisted in South Bend today. Some followers of the game are of the opinion that one of Rockne's former players, possibly Harry Stuhldreher, 1924 quarter back and successful head coach at Villanova college, near Philadelphia, would return to take up the head coaching job, with Hartley [Hunk] Anderson, as an assistant. It also was rumored that Jimmy Phelan and Slip Madigan, former Notre Dame men, would be in line for Rockne's job.

"Persons holding this opinion point out that Rockne has several times in the last few weeks expressed doubt as to whether 'it was worth it all,' and made other utterances which would indicate that possibly he was beginning to tire of the constant glare of publicity and manifold duties that accompany his present position. They also say that Rockne has, like Bobby Jones, 'won about all there is to win.'"

Evanston Prep Rifle Team Third in National Meet

Washington, D. C., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The rifle team of the Evanston Township High school, Evanston, Ill., finished third in the expert division in the first series of the junior biweekly rifle matches conducted by the National Rifle association here. The results of the series were announced today by H. H. Goebel, manager of the junior division of the National Rifle association. The first team of Kemper Military school, Boonville, Mo., was first in the expert division with 500 points. Malden High of Malden, Mass., was second, with 440 points. The Evanston school shooters scored 380 points.

Catholic Cage Games Produce $10,000 for Poor

More than $10,000 will be turned over to Cardinal Mundelein's fund for the Associated Catholic Charities as a result of three basketball games staged at the Coliseum last Wednesday night when Walsh hall of Notre Dame played a Knights of Columbus picked team, De La Salle, Chicago, played De La Salle, Joliet, and Aquinas met St. Patrick. Gross receipts of the games totaled approximately $11,000, which included $800 raised on programs and an autographed football.

The game attracted a record crowd of 12,000 and the receipts are the largest from indoor events presented to charity thus far. Recent promotional ventures and the amounts given to charity are the Stribling-Griffith bout, $5,000, and the Cardinal-Bears indoor football game, $2,000.

CONSENSUS
Daily Racing Form Selections

JEFFERSON PARK.
1—Mardie, Amour, Tan Face.
2—Dodie Leighton, McTinkle, Tin Hat.
3—Rahway, Zoom, Theo. Rochester.
4—Betty Beau, Whileaway, Silver Cord.
5—LANSQUENET, Clearance, Col. Campus.
6—Aviator, Duelist, Fair Folly.
7—King Kelly, Fair Orb, Marette.

New Orleans, La., Dec. 18.—(AP)—A well judged ride by Jockey Russell enabled C. V. Whitney's Snooze, the favorite, to win the Evergreen handicap, feature of the card at Jefferson Park today. Snooze was under pressure all the way and had to be ridden out to win by a head from Cog Air, with Omareen another head back.

Snooze broke fast, but Supreme Sweet, with her usual brilliant early speed, quickly ran into the lead and Russell took Snooze back and waited for the leader to tire. At the half Supreme Sweet was through and Russell sent Snooze into command. She drew away in the stretch, but tired, and had to be ridden out to win.

Snooze ran the 6 furlongs in 1:13 and paid $5.40 for $2 to win.

Long shots won most of the other races. Scot Free paid $12.20 in the second; Our Johnny, $52.40 in the third; Delmonico, $12.80 in the fifth; Bardalid, $43.40 in the sixth, and Forbis, $53.40 in the seventh.

HAWKS LEND TWO HOCKEY PLAYERS TO LONDON TEAM

Maj. Frederic McLaughlin of the Chicago Blackhawks announced yesterday that Earl Miller and Stew Adams, left wing players, will be loaned to the London Tecumsehs of the International league.

McLaughlin said the arrangements of the transfer provide that both men be played in the regular Tecumseh line-ups at once and that they are subject to recall to Chicago at an hour's notice. Miller and Adams have been with the Blackhawks for more than a year and have shown flashes of ability.

While both men are in good playing condition it is felt that daily ice practice and regular berths on the London team are just what they need to keep them in shape. Miller and Adams left last night for London.

SULLIVAN TROPHY.

Bobby Jones, already surfeited with honors, has been awarded the first James E. Sullivan memorial trophy. This distinction will be conveyed annually on that amateur who by performance, example and influence does most to advance the cause of sportsmanship during the year.

With the committee disregarding his movie contract as a bar to consideration, it was not surprising that Jones won by a margin of nearly two to one over his nearest competitor. His quadruple crown of golf triumphs was overwhelming. That Clarence Demar, Marathon runner, was second over Helen Wills Moody, tennis internationalist, was surprising in this section where we do not hear much of Marathon racing, but where every one has heard of Helen Wills, now Mrs. Moody.

This Sullivan trophy, in its conception, is similar to The Tribune trophy given annually to the Big Ten player of greatest value to his team, where the qualifications are not only performance but also leadership and sportsmanship.

Pro Football.

Pro football received good advertising when the New York Giants, with Benny Friedman and Chris Cagle in the lineup, defeated Rockne's All-Stars, or former players, for charity. The Giants ARE one of the greatest pro elevens in the country. The All-Stars WERE among the greatest players in the country. They entered the game without adequate practice and in many instances out of condition.

The best pro elevens no doubt would defeat the best college elevens in nearly all instances. Their players are more mature, more experienced and picked with no weak spots in the lineup. They are recruited from the best of former collegians. The game just played, however, was not a complete test of the question.

Not a Bad Score.

Sir: Our neighbor's child, a sweet young thing, attended the local high school's most important game. On her return, brother, anxious to learn the outcome, called, "How did the game come out?"

"O, we lost 6 or 8 to 0," she replied.

"That's not so bad," he consoled.

"O, I mean 6 or 8 touchdowns," she wailed. L. N. of McHenry.

Ditto.

The streets and stores are crowded now
With shoppers spending money.
The way they're pushed and shoved about
Is anything but funny.

They should have used their foresight,
Then they'd now be in the clover.
They see it now—when next year comes
They'll do the same thing over.

IRISH CAGERS HOST TO PENN TEAM TONIGHT

Notre Dame, Ind., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's basketball team will play its final home game until after the holidays here tomorrow night when the University of Pennsylvania team drops in on its midwest invasion.

Notre Dame has won three games from Penn, one in each of the last three years, at Philadelphia, but whether the Blue and Gold can run the streak to four is doubtful.

After winning from Kalamazoo college in their opener, Notre Dame lost to Northwestern and Purdue. In these two games they scored 29 and 22 points, respectively, and Coach George Keogan has stressed defense this week. He has moved Johnnie Baldwin, who was an all-American choice when he played with Englewood High school of Chicago in the Stagg tournament two years ago, to varsity guard, although he played forward at Englewood.

926 Pay $1,560 for Charity Wrestling Show.

Don George, who recently took over Gus Sonnenberg's world's heavyweight wrestling championship, demonstrated last night at the Coliseum to Dan Koloff and one thousand spectators why he is a champion. Koloff, despite his hairy chest, bulging muscles and the startling nomenclature, the Balkan Lion, was thrown twice in 24 minutes. And since the hardy one thousand had come to see George win, all, with the exception of Koloff, were satisfied.

The paid attendance was 926. The gross receipts were estimated at $1,560. The Coliseum rental was said to be $400. After the wrestlers have been paid the remainder will be donated to charity.

Throws Koloff in 15 Minutes.

George was much the quicker and since he also was the stronger it is not surprising that he threw Koloff the first time in 15 minutes 30 seconds. The experts—and all the spectators, judging from their shouted comments to Referee Ted Tonneman were experts—identified the winning hold as a Wolverine body slam.

After a ten minute intermission the men returned. George clamped on a series of head locks, and then won the deciding fall with a wrist lock and reverse body hold. The time was 9 minutes 13 seconds.

What the championship match lacked in length was supplied in the three preliminary bouts. Pietro Bacini waited until near the close of his 30 minute bout to toss George Mack. The time was 28:45.

Marshall Beats Peterson.

Charley Peterson, who ordinarily clowns with Mack for the fans at the Arcade gymnasium, was substituted last night for Frank Judson against Everett Marshall. Marshall won after 14 minutes 32 seconds. The hold was announced as an "airplane body slam," but it seemed as if any other hold would have accomplished the result.

The bare footed Pole, Joe Malcewicz, and Freddie Meyers, Hebrew champion, spent 30 minutes without result. At that, the draw match contained some of the best tumbling of the evening.

MOON MULLINS—MEET THE SECRETARY

Carnera Stops Reggie Meen, English Shoemaker, in 2d

LONDON, Dec. 17.—(AP)—Primo Carnera, Italian man mountain, brushed aside the puny efforts of Reggie Meen, English heavyweight, in less than two rounds at Albert hall tonight. The referee stopped the unequal struggle after Meen had been floored twice in the second round.

Meen, a curly haired, pink cheeked English youth of 203 pounds from some shoe factory in the north of England, was game and received a great ovation for his efforts in the first round, when he held the 268 pound Venetian on fairly even terms.

Carnera settled down to business in the second round and floored his man twice and the big crowd yelled for the referee to halt the carnage.

It was Carnera's first appearance in England since his American tour and he showed improvement in speed and footwork.

The Carnera-Meen bout topped a heavyweight boxing carnival in which 18 other fighters participated.

Among the crowd were a number of Indian potentates, including the Maharajahs Patiala and Alwar.

CHICAGO TO GET BOUT?

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—Persons close to the heavyweight championship boxing situation which is boiling with great fury here were more convinced than ever tonight that developments within the next few days will send the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling title engagement to Soldiers' field in Chicago.

Nate Lewis, the matchmaker for the Stadium corporation of Chicago, regarded it almost as a certainty that the battle of the big fellows will go to Chicago. It was Lewis' offer of $500,000 to Schmeling for a battle with Stribling that caused the recent stir here.

Why Lewis Is Optimistic.

Lewis tonight explained to THE TRIBUNE correspondent the developments which he expects will take place before Chicago is finally picked as the site for the fight.

"The New York commission has cabled Schmeling he must box Sharkey," Lewis said. "Schmeling's answer will be, 'Take it up with Joe Jacobs, my manager.' The commission did not notify Jacobs direct because he has no license as a manager in New York.

"The commission next will ask Jacobs to appear and direct him to accept Sharkey as the opponent of Schmeling. Jacobs told me today he will refuse and will explain to the commission that in his opinion Sharkey is not an attraction and is not the leading contender.

New York to Suspend Max?

"The New York commission will then suspend Schmeling. New York suspensions are not recognized in Illinois and Jacobs will be free to sign for Schmeling's fight in Chicago with Stribling. Jacobs is convinced a Schmeling-Stribling fight will far outdraw a Schmeling-Sharkey meeting.

"Madison Square Garden has a contract on Schmeling's services, but it contains a clause which states that the opponent selected must be satisfactory to Schmeling. If Schmeling is suspended for not accepting Sharkey as a foe and the Garden cannot name a satisfactory opponent, then the contract will be void.

"Jacobs is eager for the fight to be staged in Chicago. Stribling also wants it held in Chicago," Lewis concluded.

Confer with Carey.

There was a conference at the Garden today. Jacobs, Johnny Buckley and his boxer, Jack Sharkey, and Pa Stribling all met with William F. Carey, president of the Garden corporation. "There's no news of importance," they all said when the meeting ended. Another conference will be held this week, it was announced.

DEMPSEY, GETZ TO CONFER.

George Getz, who was the official promoter of the Dempsey-Tunney fight at Soldiers' field in 1927 for Tex Rickard and the Madison Square Garden corporation, and now a member of the Illinois athletic commission, said yesterday he had no first hand information relative to a proposed fight here in June between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling.

"I do not believe Madison Square Garden holds a charter in Illinois, and unless it does, or obtains one, it cannot promote a fight here. Jack Dempsey has an appointment with me in the morning, and while I don't know what Dempsey wants, I assume he may discuss a world's championship bout.

"It its my understanding from conversations with Damon Runyon after the world series, that he has a contract with Schmeling to defend his title. As far as I know, Runyon can bring Schmeling here as an individual or in conjunction with the Stadium. In that event, I am assuming, that Madison Square Garden will not make a better offer for the bout."

St. Viator College Beats Shurtleff Quintet, 28-24

Kankakee, Ill., Dec. 18.—[Special.]—St. Viator college opened its quest for a Little 19 championship here tonight with a 28 to 24 victory over Shurtleff. It was the second victory of the season for St. Viator. Furlong was high point man with five baskets. Shurtleff led at the half, 14 to 12.

Hunters May Have to Use Microscope to Find a Quail

BY BOB BECKER.

Sportsmen in all parts of the United States face the greatest shortage of quail this year that many conservation departments have known for some time. Brooke Anderson of Highland Park, Ill., a member of the advisory board on the migratory bird treaty, says that the quail experts in the biological survey in Washington, D. C., have been receiving reports all fall regarding the small quail crops in various states, and the situation is so serious that the survey has issued a special bulletin on the situation, with instructions to organizations and individuals on how to feed the Bob Whites this winter.

The survey also advises that the birds which have survived the recent drought be fed if we are to have any Bob Whites to produce a 1931 crop of young birds.

There are many theories advanced as to the cause of the small quail crop this year. Anderson, after talking with the quail experts in Washington and a number of game commissioners, says that the theory which seems most plausible is that during the hatching season there was the greatest shortage of insects and weeds seen in a great many years. There being no insects and very little green material for the quail chicks, the theory is that the young birds died, so that practically all the birds we have this fall are old stock.

According to Anderson, the shortage of water did not appear to be the main cause, because people from some of the driest land in the country reported that they had an abundance of quail in normal years in regions where there was no water except what the birds obtained from their food.

It is a well known fact that Illinois has a serious quail shortage this year. Another state that we know is pretty much in the same situation is Mississippi. Hunters down there report great difficulty in finding coveys.

The winter feeding bulletin issued by the biological survey is a compact, practical guide which every sportsman or every organization that is going to help feed the birds this winter should have. Write for bulletin No. Bi-1099, "Winter Feeding of Upland Game Birds," by Wallace Grange. Address your request to the Biological Survey, Washington, D. C. The bulletin is distributed free of charge.

Thornton Beats Morgan Park Preps, 17-12

Thornton High school of Harvey, Ill., yesterday defeated the Morgan Park light and heavy weight basketball teams on the former's court. The Thornton heavies won, 17 to 12, and the lights, 26 to 8. Sutton and Weides starred for the Thornton heavies, while Hodge and Mitchell shared scoring honors for the lights.

Bray and Buckner led the Wendell Phillips heavies to victory over Medill, 38 to 8, at Medill gym. In the lightweight game Barelas, Medill forward, sank a basket in the final minute to triumph over the Phillips ponies, 18 to 17.

Bill Haarlow again took the main rôle as the Bowen heavies continued their winning streak by defeating Hyde Park on the home floor, 33 to 19. Haarlow scored ten points. Led by Gordon, who collected nine points, the Bowen lights won from Hyde Park, 33 to 12.

Ferris' basket in the last quarter gave the alumni a 19 to 17 triumph over the Lane Tech heavies on the Lane court. The alumni lights also took a last minute decision, winning, 28 to 26, on Lang's toss from the center of the floor.

Purple Five to Rest After Carleton Game

Carleton college will oppose Northwestern's basketball team at Patten gymnasium tomorrow night in the last game for the Purple before the Christmas holidays.

The Wildcat cagers got off to an auspicious start by overcoming Bradley and Notre Dame by decisive margins and will endeavor to make it three in a row by troucing the strong Carleton team, which boasts a record of twenty consecutive victories in the Northwest conference in the last two years.

The Wildcats will present the same lineup which has started the first two games this year. This includes Riel and McCarnes, forwards; Reiff, center, and Lockhart and Marshall, guards.

Joe Reiff, the only sophomore on this team, had already clinched a regular job by his brilliant work against Bradley and Notre Dame. Against the former team he sank five baskets and two free throws and came back against Notre Dame, to drop in ten field goals and six free throws.

Following tomorrow's engagement the Wildcats will rest preparatory to going into action New Year's eve against Alabama, Southern conference champions. The other home game before the start of the Big Ten season will be with Notre Dame at Patten gym Jan. 3.

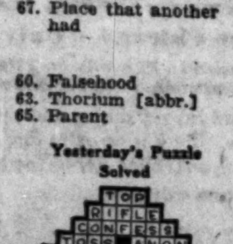
Yesterday's Puzzle Solved



W. A. GILCHRIST, RICH LUMBER MAN, IS DEAD

William A. Gilchrist, 54 years old, millionaire lumber man, died last night at his residence at 1430 Lake Shore drive after a long illness. He was well known in the lumber industry in the middle west and east.

His father, Frank W. Gilchrist, was a pioneer lumber man of the middle west and he followed in his footsteps, building up an organization under his own name. Mr. Gilchrist was born at Alpena, Mich., and was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1897. After graduation Mr. Gilchrist moved to New York, and in 1913 married Emily Flamm. They came to Chicago shortly afterward. Mr. Gilchrist was interested in yachting and was a member of the Larchmont and Chicago Yacht clubs. He also was a member of the Chicago, Exmoor Country and Engineers' clubs, the Country Club of Havana, Chicago Athletic association, and the Zeta Psi fraternity.

Surviving are his widow, a brother, Ralph E. Gilchrist of Detroit, and a sister, Mrs. Grace G. Fletcher of Alpena. Funeral services will be held at 3 o'clock tomorrow in Rosehill chapel, with interment private. The Rev. Duncan Browne of St. James' Episcopal church will officiate.

FORSCHNER WILL IS FILED; ESTATE IS TWO MILLION

The will of Thomas J. Forschner, contractor and prominent Catholic leader, who died on Dec. 12, was filed for probate yesterday with Mitchell C. Robin, clerk of the Probate court. Under the will the entire estate, valued at $2,000,000, is left to his widow, Mrs. Grace M. Forschner, of 4800 Ellis avenue. Mr. Forschner was also survived by an adopted son, Alfred, and four brothers and three sisters. He was identified with big construction projects throughout the east and middle west, including government works and a water supply system for New York City.

Thomas Nicholson, in Ad Trade Many Years, Dead

Thomas Laurence Nicholson of 5525 Blackstone avenue, for many years engaged in the advertising business, died Wednesday at St. Luke's hospital. He succumbed to pneumonia after an illness of three days. Mr. Nicholson had recently returned from a European tour in the interest of an American automobile merchandising program. Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at Crawfordsville, Ind., the home of his father, Thomas B. Nicholson. Mr. Nicholson leaves his widow, a daughter, Braxton, and a son, Thomas.

Three County Roads Open to Traffic After Repairs

The central traffic bureau yesterday reported the opening of three county highways to traffic, but in each case motorists were advised to drive with care, as all three roads are still under construction. The highways opened are route PO, 111th street between Harlem avenue and Keane avenue; route PQ, 95th street between Cottage Grove avenue and Yates avenue, and route BK, Dixie highway between Flossmoor road and Vollmer road.

CLOSED GOTHAM BANK'S BOOK ASSETS INTACT

New York, Dec. 18.—[Special.]—The book assets of the Bank of United States closed last week are all intact, Joseph A. Broderick, state superintendent of banks, announced today. Mr. Broderick declined to comment, however, on the actual present value of the book assets, some of which are reported to have shrunk materially during the recent depression.

Mr. Broderick's statement was made after Max D. Steuer, attorney for the Depositors and Stockholders Protective Association of the Bank of United States, had intimated that funds of the bank might be missing.

MEMBER BANKS OF RESERVE IN FIRM POSITION

Brokers' Loans Off 91 Millions.

BY O. A. MATHER.

If only money were needed, trade and industry might expand to almost boom proportions without driving interest rates abnormally high. Because of slack business during the autumn the member banks of the federal reserve system borrowed far less than usual from the reserve institutions. Therefore, the member banks now are borrowing the least since 1917 and the reserve banks are in exceptionally strong position to meet any demands for credit.

These and other sidelights on the present financial situation appear in the monthly review of the federal reserve board, made public last night. The slack demand for reserve credit during the autumn and early winter is attributed to the decrease in pay roll disbursements by factories and the continued decline in commodity prices. However, the Christmas season has brought a better demand for credit.

Expand Commercial Loans.

The banks of the country have offset the great decrease in loans on stock market collateral by putting their funds into bankers' acceptances and securities for their own account. In the two months ended Nov. 30 the member banks expanded commercial loans by $315,000,000, chiefly in the from of acceptances, and their purchases of securities brought such holdings up to a new high record. Investments expanded $84,000,000 in the two months and have increased $1,460,000,000 since the low point in October, 1929.

The slump in stock market prices last week brought another big decline in brokers' loans, according to the weekly report issued by the reserve board yesterday. The decrease for the week ended last Wednesday amounted to $91,000,000 and brought total loans down to $2,008,000,000, the lowest level since publication of the figures was begun in January, 1926. It marked the twelfth successive weekly recession and a total shrinkage of $1,214,000,000 for that period. The current total also is $1,378,000,000 below a year ago.

Reduce Market Loans.

The New York banks decreased their own stock market loans by $85,000,000, although they still are lending $352,000,000 more than a year ago. Interior banks withdrew $5,000,000 and were furnishing $355,000,000 less than a year ago. For the first time in many months, nonbanking lenders, including corporations, made no change in their lendings, but their total now is $1,374,000,000 lower than a year ago.

The need for spending money for the Christmas holidays again was reflected in the weekly statement of the reserve system. The largest change in the report was an increase of $120,000,000 in federal reserve note circulation. The government's year-end financial operations also were reflected. Borrowings of the member banks increased $74,224,000 to a total of $331,321,000, while the reserve banks purchased $7,894,000 of bankers' acceptances and $75,431,000 of government securities. Deposits receded $6,301,000. Gold and total reserves declined $46,170,000 and $50,387,000 respectively.

Week's Gold Imports.

During the week, imports of gold to the United States totaled $6,063,000 but there were no exports and no change in gold earmarked for foreign account. In addition, $3,000,000 was received from Canada but gold earmarked for foreign account increased $2,000,000.

The New York federal reserve bank made no change in its 2½ per cent rediscount rate. Its statement showed an increase of $16,965,000 in member bank borrowings, which now total $77,740,000. The reserve bank bought $1,030,000 of bankers' acceptances and $79,852,000 of government securities. Deposits receded $10,433,000. Reserves declined $44,971,000 and the reserve ratio fell to 76 per cent, compared with 82.7 per cent last week.

The Chicago reserve bank reported little change in member bank borrowings, government securities and reserves. Holdings of bankers' acceptances increased $3,315,000 and deposits expanded $4,892,000. Member bank borrowings now total $23,143,000. The reserve ratio now stands at 80.4 per cent, compared with 80.9 per cent a week ago.

DOWNS SEES 1931 AS AN IMPROVED BUSINESS YEAR

That the railroads are ready for a revival of business with the coming of 1931 was expressed yesterday by Lawrence A. Downs, president of the Illinois Central railroad, who said he regarded the experience of the last year's depression as a temporary period of readjustment.

"The railroads are so knitted into the business fabric that they register in their traffic and earnings the rise and fall of business activity. This year both freight and passenger revenues have been about 15 per cent less than in 1929 and the aggregate loss for the full year is in the neighborhood of $850,000,000," said Mr. Downs, who expects a definite improvement next year in business generally.

"The fortunes of the railroads depend upon their ability to give good service and upon their progress in meeting the business situation. Railroads are handicapped in meeting this kind of competition by the advantages which their competitors enjoy, especially in respect to taxation and regulation. However, the public is coming to realize that this inequality is unfair not only to the railroads but to business men, farmers, taxpayers and other groups," said Mr. Downs.

Uncertainty Prevails in Grain; Corn Prices Decline

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

An air of uncertainty was decidedly noticeable on the Chicago Board of Trade yesterday. Persistent reports from Washington regarding further government regulations which, the trade figures, will hamper business, combined with a lack of a broad speculative interest, was instrumental in bringing in sufficient selling pressure to more than offset the strength in the stock market. An early upturn was replaced with losses. Corn dropped to within ⅝@1c of the lowest figures on the crop, and final sales were at the lowest figures at which the market has closed so far.

There was nothing in the general news to account for the selling movement which submerged all grains, but the feeling that congress is largely to blame for a good part of the existing condition is being more freely expressed among the rank and file of traders. Many operators are inclined to go slow on the buying side.

Corn in Sharp Break.

There was a little buying of corn early by commission houses as the result of Wednesday's government report showing the smallest yield since 1901. The market, as soon as the buying ceased at the inside figures, showed 2⅛@2½c under the early high after fluctuating erratically. The finish was 1½@1¾c lower with old December at 67⅝c; March, 71¼@71⅝c; May, 73@73¼c, and July, 74⅝@74½c.

Available supply of corn for the 1930-'31 season are estimated at 2,158,000,000 bu, including crop, carryover and the visible supply. This compares with 2,694,000,000 bu last year, and is 833,000,000 bu less than the average of the preceding 10 years.

Corn Demand Decreases.

In an address before the Grain Market Analysts' club Wednesday night one of the largest cash corn handlers in the country stated that the trade had given too much attention to the shortage in supplies and too little to the size of the demand. While the supply is about 80 per cent of that of the previous season, the estimated industrial demand is less than 80 per cent of the amount consumed the previous year. American corporations were said to be building plants in Europe and other sections of the world to take care of the demand for corn products formerly filled by exports from the United States, with Argentine, Rumanian and South African grain used.

Part of the late weakness in corn features was attributed to selling by a local professional who is long on oats. There was also some selling of corn against purchases of rye. Reports were in evidence early of liberal shipping sales made to the east from interior points, but local handlers sold only 55,000 bu.

Wheat Market Easier.

July wheat showed fair strength early only to weaken later with corn. On selling by scattered commission houses and the pit element it closed at the bottom with a net loss of ⅞c at 68½@68⅝c. Strength in Liverpool had some effect at times, but that market reacted toward the last and finished ⅜@⅝d higher. Buenos Aires was unchanged. Winnipeg was strong a good part of the day, and there was an absence of the selling of May there against purchases at Chicago to close spreads, and also buying to remove hedges against export sales. The finish, however, was ⅛@½c lower.

Old crop deliveries of wheat held within a range of ⅛@¼c with the finish ¼c higher to ⅛c lower. December was 77c; March, 79⅛c, and May, 81c. Stabilization operations continue to furnish a good part of the business, but it was noticeable that while the open interest in the December and March is decreasing that in the May is increasing. Export sales of 600,000 to 700,000 bu Manitoba wheats were reported in all positions.

Oats Close at Bottom.

Weakness in corn had a depressing effect on oats. Commission houses bought early, but when other grain started downward scattered liquidation made its appearance. The close was ⅜@⅝c lower with December 31⅝c and May, 33½c.

Shorts and spreaders were on the buying side of rye and managed to hold prices within relatively narrow limits with the close ¼@⅞c lower. December and May closed at 45⅛c, the two deliveries coming together for the first time this season. There was 100,000 bu sold to go to store during the day and the trade anticipates more liberal deliveries on December contracts.

EXTRA DIVIDENDS ARE DECLARED BY HAMILTON WATCH

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 18.—The Hamilton Watch company today declared extra dividends of 15 cents on the no par common stock and 30 cents on the $25 par common issue.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey declared the usual extra dividend of $2. Six months ago and a year ago a similar extra was paid.

Union Mortgage company declared an extra dividend of $2 a share. A similar extra was paid a year ago. The St. Louis Union Trust company declared an extra dividend of $8 a share while a year ago the bank paid $10 extra.

The Gillette Safety Razor company declared the initial quarterly dividend of $1.25 on the $5 convertible preference stock created last month for the purchase of the Autostrop Safety Razor company.

New York Air Brake company declared a dividend of 60 cents a share, previously the company paid 90 cents a share quarterly.

Keystone Steel and Wire company directors have taken no action on the quarterly 25 cents due on the common at this time. The regular dividend of $1.75 a share was paid.

Surface Lines Carry Fewer Passengers in November

The Chicago surface lines during November carried 10,124,350 fewer revenue passengers than during the corresponding month of 1929. Total revenue passengers carried were 64,790,023. Total rides were 118,234,034, a decrease of 17,060,343. While riding in December has greatly increased over November, officials state that it is still running considerably below the totals for last year.

November divisible receipts of $66,173 after expenses, taxes and 5 per cent interest on the purchase price, against $214,220 in October and $491,467 in November, 1929, were reported. Gross earnings for the month, $4,537,647, show a decline of $708,477, as compared with November, 1929.

BELIEVE 4 PARTY PLAN OF RAIL GROUPING IN EAST IS PROGRESSING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 18.—Important progress was reported today to have been made in the discussion of a four party plan of consolidation of eastern railroads in a conference held on Tuesday by the committee of officials of the Pennsylvania, New York Central, Baltimore and Ohio, and Chesapeake and Ohio-Nickel Plate Lines.

This is understood to have been the first meeting since Nov. 26, when little progress was made towards reconciliation of opposing views.

W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, is chairman of the group, which includes P. E. Crowley, president of the New York Central; Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore and Ohio, and associated executives.

The most important points at issue are the disposition of the Lehigh Valley, and an arrangement for trackage rights for the Pennsylvania along the southern shore of Lake Erie to connect its present lake terminal lines. The Pennsylvania has been ordered by the interstate commerce commission to give up its ownership of Lehigh Valley and of Wabash, but says it will fight the order by appropriate court action.

Meanwhile efforts are being pressed toward allotting the Lehigh, under conditions, to the Chesapeake and Ohio system; arranging the trackage rights over the Nickel Plate, and providing for joint ownership and operation of various "bridge" lines.

Lester Armour May Quit as Packing Co. Official

Lester Armour, vice president of Armour & Co., is expected to resign shortly. He has had a successful career with the organization his grandfather founded. Beginning as a general office employé at $15 a week in 1919 he has advanced to vice president and director.

LOOKING AHEAD WITH BUSINESS

In summing up the present business depression, the Brookmire Economic service makes the following comment in the current issue of their Analyst: "As we interpret the recent trend, there is now little doubt but that the extreme bottom of the business depression is at hand. Cotton textiles and automobiles have already hit bottom. Steel mill operations, department store sales and railway transportation are reaching such low levels that a reversal of the down trend is near. Banking troubles and business failures contribute to the general feeling of climax and finality."

Although the Industrial Acceptance corporation to date this year has financed the sale of more than $50,000,000 worth of standard products sold on the deferred payment plan, consumer collections are reported excellent. It was also stated by Arthur J. Morris, president, that the repossession problem was less apparent at the present time than during the corresponding period last year.

Florida's citrus crop is moving to market and $250,000 a day is reported flowing back into the state. The entire 1930 crop will return between $45,000,000 and $60,000,000.

All classes of new life insurance purchased during November amounted to $861,092,000, as compared with $1,039,727,000 for November last year, or a decline of 17.2 per cent, according to the Association of Life Insurance Presidents. For the first eleven months of the present year purchases of all classes of life insurance totaled $11,348,872,000, as against $11,649,614,000 during the same period a year ago, or a decrease of 2.6 per cent.

Flour prices at Minneapolis have been reduced 20c a barrel to $5.25@5.35 a barrel.

Passenger business on the Santa Fe is showing a surprising increase, according to W. J. Black, passenger traffic manager of the system. "Winter travel has filled all our trains and has required the operation of extra sleeping cars for the overflow," he said.

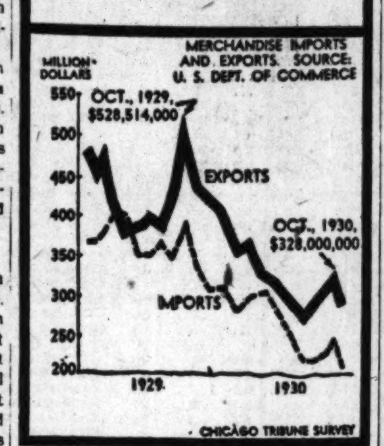
Retail food prices in the United States showed a decrease of about 2 per cent on Nov. 15, 1930, as compared with Oct. 15, and a decline of about 11½ per cent since Nov. 15 a year ago, according to a report of the bureau of labor statistics of the labor department.

Liquid Carbonic corporation reports 4,697 stockholders on its books as of Nov. 10 an increase of 1,018 stockholders or approximately 28 per cent.

Wabash railway has ordered 10,500 tons of rail. The major part of the contract has been placed with manufacturers in the Chicago district.

Physical volume of sales of Libby, McNeill & Libby, Inc., during the current year has remained at about the level of 1929. "Total sales on this basis for the eight months ended Oct. 31 last were only 5 per cent below the level of the same 1929 period," said Edward G. McDougall, president. "Our sales outlets are unusually free from surplus stocks."

THE FALL PICK-UP IN U. S. FOREIGN TRADE WAS SLIGHT



ROBUST RALLY IN N. Y. BOND MART REVERSES PROTRACTED DECLINE

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—A robust rally by a wide list of railroad and other corporate domestic bonds today reversed the most stubborn and protracted decline of the year.

Impressive gains of 1 to 3 points were registered as a broad buying movement was launched which definitely turned the tide after bond prices had ebbed almost steadily for two weeks, making a long string of successive new lows for recent years.

The broadest demand developed for railroad mortgages and advances of from 1 to 2 points were numerous. Bonds making a strong recovery included various issues of the Baltimore and Ohio, Canadian National, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio 4½s, Burlington, Chicago and North Western, Big Four, Missouri Pacific, Nickel Plate, Pennsylvania, and Southern Pacific.

Rap Speculative Marts for Extremes in Prices

BY SCRUTATOR.

The game of swatting the speculative markets has lost none of its popularity. It is slightly changed now from what it was two or three decades ago. Then it was the thing to take a swing at speculators in the commodity markets because they mad the price of foodstuffs high; now the basis for the attack is the assumption that they make the price to the producer low.

Chairman Legge of the farm board yesterday took occasion to say that operators who sell short on the grain market rely on an ability to go before a tribunal in the grain exchange and get an adjudication if it appears they have taken the wrong side. His recommendation was that one authority be appointed to have control of all rules and regulations passed by grain exchanges.

Rule Flexibility.

Similar charges have been made in the past. Speculators who were long have complained that their contracts called for the delivery of wheat in elevators and that by dispensation it was permitted that delivery be made in railroad cars. That favored the bear. On the other hand, if some flexibility were not allowed the rules structure, it would be possible for a bull manipulator with means large enough to operate a squeeze.

A futures market like the Chicago Board of Trade operates to a certain degree on principles that are followed by banks. The latter exist only if the great majority of depositors refrain from calling for their money at once. A futures market must operate on the theory that all its buyers won't demand actual delivery, some instead taking a money equivalent. As an instance, to purchase and demand elevator delivery in one month of more wheat than elevators will hold creates a situation that requires some sort of adjudication.

As a mater of fact, neither bulls nor bears have any great influence in the wheat market today. With prices of wheat here maintained above the other world markets, the speculative element has moved out. It is now in the corn pit.

Corn Sales Mount.

Last year average wheat sales here were near fifty-five million bushels a day and corn sales about one-fifth that amount. Some days this week corn sales have been more than 50 per cent above wheat sales, with the latter running only about one-third the average.

The government so far has refrained from attempts to stabilize the corn crop. It has not set any minimum price on that product and speculators deal in corn because it is not dominated by a single factor.

Abuses creep into every organization. But a too favored bull could be as bad as a too favored bear. For the government to take a larger share in the making of the rules for exchanges on which it is already the one big trader has elements requiring earnest thought.

Stockholders Approve Big African Copper Merger

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Formal approval in London by the stockholders of the Bwana M'Kubwa Mining company of the merger with the Rhodesian Border Concessions company and the N'Changa Copper Mines, Ltd., was viewed in trade circles as a big step in stabilizing the industry. Ownership of the huge copper reserves of the Rhodesian district of Africa will be concentrated.

BY FRED HARVEY.

New York, Dec. 18.—Visions of a happier Christmas dinner began to loom in the Wall street mind today as the market continued to do its stuff.

For a time during the forenoon the advance got to be quite a sensational affair with a number of specialties in which the supply is more or less limited like Auburn Auto, Worthington Pump, Case Threshing Machine, Air Reduction and Coca Cola sizzling up for gains of from 5 to 20 points or more and the list as a whole moving forward in rampant fashion.

After the turn of the day, however, some sober second thoughts began to make their appearance, a wave of profit taking set in and the atmosphere cooled off perceptibly. Many of the more active issues lost a good half or more of their early gains and some of the more conspicuous of them hauled up at the finish with minus signs on their backs.

U. S. Steel Closes Off.

United States Steel from a high of 141⅝ in the forenoon slid off to a final of 139⅜, leaving it with a fractional loss on the day. American Can barely escaped a similar deal, easing down to 111⅝ from its high of 114. General

CHICAGO STOCKS SLIP OFF FROM SESSION'S HIGHS

But Closing Prices Are Above Previous Day.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Stocks on the Chicago exchange receded from the session's peak prices before a wave of profit taking which swept over the market in the late trading yesterday. In general, however, the final sales were made at prices slightly above Wednesday's last quotations.

The force of the early advance centered in the motor and accessory shares, nearly all of which finished the day with creditable gains. The strength shown by this group was accountable in part to the sensational market performance of Auburn on the New York board. While the shorts in the issue were being put through the wringer in New York the stock was comparatively dormant here but the other motor shares commanded the attention of traders. Cord advanced briskly to 6⅝ but sacrificed part of its gain in the later realizing. Bendix, Borg Warner and Pines Winterfront garnered net gains of a point or so.

Talk of Wednesday Spurt.

Speculators spent a good part of the day talking about Wednesday's whirlwind upturn, the extent and vigor of which was beyond the expectations of the most ardent bulls. The explanation put forth in some quarters that the abrupt change in trend was the result of substantial banking support was scouted in well informed circles.

The fact that the market had been on the run for ten days or so was enough in itself to explain the reverse in trend. That the short covering was coupled with corporation and other large scale buying was considered more probable than the concerted support attributed to the bankers.

The market action of the motor shares was typical of the general market here. Minor losses were sustained by some issues that shared in the previous day's rally but the majority of the active stocks closed higher. Outstanding among the gainers were Bastian Blessing, Swift International, Jefferson Electric and Time-O-Stat A.

National Standard Report.

National Standard company yesterday issued its report for its fiscal year ended Sept. 30. Confirming previous estimates the statement showed that net profit for the year amounted to $587,460 after all charges, which was equivalent to $4.01 a share on the outstanding common stock. In the preceding year the company earned net profit of $776,023, or $5.17 a share on a slightly larger capitalization. The Sept. 30 balance sheet revealed a current position of almost 6 to 1. Current assets of $1,768,940 included cash of $382,367 and marketable securities of $663,337. Current liabilities amounted to $302,087.

In his remarks to stockholders President W. F. Harrah said that increased automobile output during 1931 will benefit the company through the greater consumption of tires stimulating demand for the company's products.

Lion Oil Omits Dividend.

The quarterly dividend of 50 cents on Lion Oil Refining company common shares was omitted by directors yesterday. The action was attributed to the conditions existing in the oil industry by Col. T. H. Barton, president.

W. C. Davis, president of Foote Brothers Gear and Machine company, in a letter to stockholders states that he recommended to directors at their last meeting that no action be taken on dividends at this time. The company has fared as well as could be expected in view of the current conditions, he said. Bank loans have been reduced by $50,000 in the last three months, he added.

CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE STOCKS

Stocks were again higher on the Board of Trade, Electric Bond and Share and Standard of Indiana showing the largest trade, two-thirds of the total, while Chicago Great Western preferred had a net gain of 2½@17, and Studebaker was up 1⅛ at the close.

RAW SILK.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—SILK—Raw futures closed barely steady; sales, 780 bales; December, $2.40; March, $2.42; May, $2.38. Open market quotations [sixty day basis]: Shanghai steam extra B, $2.55; Canton double extra A 14-16s, $1.80. Japanese crack double extra, $2.75.

DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—At easier prices some further sales of wide print cloths were made today for contract delivery into March. Other cotton goods ruled quiet save where goods were being sold at concessions to clean out stocks before inventorying. Men's wear and women's wear lines were quiet. Burlaps showed little change for the day. New spring silks were being bought moderately. Hosiery knitters were buying dull nitrocellulose yarns more freely.

GASOLINE AND LINSEED OILS.

Toledo Light & Power.

Will you please report on Toledo Light and Power company 5 per cent notes, which are due Dec. 1, 1932?—H. I.

Toledo Light and Power company is a holding company owning $13,629,900 par value, or more than 98 per cent, of the outstanding common stock of Toledo Edison company, all the capital stock of Citizens Light and Power company, $6,144,000 of Community Traction company's first 6s and certain other securities. Part of the proceeds from the sale of the $35,000,000 5 per cent secured notes, dated Dec. 1, 1930, and due Dec. 1, 1932, will be used to acquire $22,236,400 first mortgage bonds of Toledo Edison company.

Toledo Edison company furnishes all the electric light and power requirements of Toledo, Ohio, and certain suburbs, serving a population of more than 450,000. Citizens Light and Power company supplies Adrian, Mich., with electric light and power.

The Toledo Light and Power company notes are to be secured by pledge of the $22,236,400 Toledo Edison first mortgage bonds, and the common stock of the same company, the capital stock of Citizens Light and Power company and a note for $1,100,000 of the latter. It is provided that the company shall not pledge any of its other assets without equally and ratably securing these notes.

For the twelve months ended Sept. 30, 1930, Toledo Light and Power company reported consolidated net earnings of $6,815,666, before interest, replacement reserves, amortization and dividends. Annual interest and dividends on the funded debt and preferred stocks of subsidiaries outstanding amounted to $1,047,022. Annual interest charges on this issue will be $1,750,000.

The notes offer a high grade short term investment for a business man's funds.

Northwestern National Insurance.

Will you kindly give me information as to the soundness of Northwestern National Insurance company of Milwaukee, Wis., a fire insurance company?—S. F. A.

Northwestern National Insurance company began business in 1869 with a paid in capital of $150,000, which has since been increased to $2,000,000. In 1926 the par value of the stock was reduced from $100 to $25 per share.

Results last year were satisfactory, although the underwriting profit of 2.9 per cent was not quite up to that of the two preceding years. In 1929 surplus was increased $466,441 after dividend payments of $480,000. This was made possible as a result of investment gains of $534,884, an underwriting profit of $149,557 and the release of special reserves to the extent of $250,000.

The company's liability is distributed through operation of more than 5,000 agencies. A conservative volume of business is written in fire, windstorm, automobile and allied branches. Investments are of good quality.

Dividends have been paid without interruption since 1874. The rate in 1928 was 25 per cent and in 1929 24 per cent on the $25 par stock.

SHEEP — Fed western range lambs	$ 6.50@ 8.35
One month ago	6.75@ 8.00
One year ago	12.25@13.25

Top yesterday, $8.35; average, $7.60.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 2,000 cattle, 22,000 hogs, and 11,000 sheep.

Another sharp advance in cattle prices featured the live stock trade yesterday, most sales showing gains of 50c to $1.00 compared with earlier in the week. Lambs recovered some of Wednesday's losses on light supplies, while the hog market slid back fully 10@15c after a firm start.

The general market for hogs was only slightly above the low point of the year which was established on Thursday of last week. Prices are lowest for December since 1923 and more than $2.00 under a year ago. The average price yesterday at $7.70 compares with $7.65 at the low time a week ago and with $9.80 on the corresponding day last year.

The extreme top at $8.10 is only 10c above the year's low day and compares with $10.00 a year ago when there was an advance of $1.00 during December. Most of the 8,000 left at the close were being held off the market on the strength of the lighter local supply estimated for today. Some other points, however, show increases for today.

Hog Futures Dull.

Bids and offers were unevenly lower on the hog futures market, with trading extremely dull. January contracts were bid $7.65@7.75 and offered at $8.00. March light were highest on the list, carrying bids of $8.75 at the finish. February mediums were bid $8.65. Heavy grades for February were offered at $8.40.

Although cattle receipts are running comparatively large for this time of the year, they show substantial decreases compared with a week ago. Twenty leading markets handled 181,000 head during the first four days of the week, this total showing a decrease of more than 20 per cent compared with a week ago, but compares with a total of 165,000 a year ago and with 158,000 two years ago.

Chicago thus far this month has received 141,400 cattle, against 123,471 during the same period in 1929. Quality was lacking yesterday and the best steers available sold at $13.50. Choice 1,290 lb beeves reached $13.30. Butcher stock shared in the strength. Calves were weak. Stockers and feeders sold barely steady.

Best Lambs at $8.35.

Demand was brisk for $8.00@8.25 lambs yesterday and one load to a yard dealer reached $8.35, the day's top. Prices held firm, with better quality forcing the bulk of sales to slightly higher levels. Aged sheep and yearlings were firm. Feeding lambs held steady at the recent advance. Sheep receipts at Chicago for the first four days of the week at 69,300 compare with 80,700 a week ago, but are 15,000 larger than a year ago.

Receipts at Chicago for today are estimated at 2,000 cattle, 22,000 hogs and 11,000 sheep, against 2,011 cattle, 22,806 hogs and 8,479 sheep on the previous Friday and 3,821 cattle, 25,219 hogs and 8,919 sheep a year ago.

Reveals $9,000,000 Loss of Saskatchewan Wheat Pool

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

REGINA, Sask., Dec. 18.—The first declaration of any kind on the deficit faced by the Saskatchewan wheat pool to be made by a member of the pool reveals the loss to be $9,000,000. M. E. Little, delegate of one district, in stating what the loss was, promised that in future an effort would be made to keep members posted on all matters pertaining to the marketing of crops.

Guarantees Banks.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WINNIPEG, Man., Dec. 18.—Premier Anderson of Saskatchewan has stated that the federal government of Canada has guaranteed Canadian banks against losses in advances made by them to pools on this year's crop of grain in the west. Three western province governments have guaranteed banks against loss on the 1929 crop and have $20,000,000 to raise in consequence, but have as security all reserve moneys and the elevator systems, valued at $32,000,000.

RECESSION IN COTTON

Profit taking, combined with a little hedging pressure and lessened buying support, carried prices down irregularly yesterday and they finished with losses of 10 to 18 points in Chicago, and 11 to 18 points in other markets. Spots were off 15 points, losing most of the previous day's advance. New York being 9.80c; New Orleans, 9.45c; Galveston, 9.55c, and Houston, 9.50c. Liverpool was strong and closed 16 to 17 points net higher, with a fair business in spots. Prices follow:

LARD PRICES HIGHER

December lard continues to act tight and although there were liberal offerings at times yesterday they were well absorbed and the close was 15c net higher at $9.97½, or 90c over January, an abnormal premium. Distant futures were up 7½@10c, with scattered buying and no particular pressure. Liverpool lard was 3@6d higher and export clearances 728,000 lbs and of bacon 75,500 lbs. Hogs were steady early, but closed 10@20c lower. Receipts were lighter than a week ago, but larger than last year. Cash trade was slow with pork loins in carlots ½c lower. Prices follow:

CASH GRAIN NEWS

Some improvement was reported in the foreign demand for Canadian wheat with sales of 600,000 to 700,000 bu estimated in all positions. No mention has been made for some time of demand for hard winter at the Gulf. It was said there were inquiries in the market for rye at the seaboard, but no business was claimed.

Local handlers sold 69,000 bu wheat, 55,000 bu corn, and 82,000 bu oats to the domestic trade with 50,000 bu corn and 100,000 bu rye sold to go to store. Deliveries on December contracts aggregated 19,000 bu wheat, 442,000 bu corn, and 5,000 bu oats.

While Chicago has been receiving a fair amount of cash wheat the arrivals have gone either to millers or elevators, and offerings in the sample market are light. The spot basis was firm with No. 1 red 6@6½c over; No. 2 red, 5½@6c over; No. 1 hard, 1½@2c over; No. 2 hard and No. 2 northern, ½@1c over and No. 1 northern, 1½@1¾c over the December.

There was no change in the basis in the local cash corn market. Reports were heard of a liberal business put through to the east from interior points, but quantities were not given. No. 3 white sold at 1¾@2c over and No. 4 white at December price to ½c under. Discounts on other grades as compared with December follow: No. 3 mixed, ½@2c; yellow, ½@1c; No. 4 mixed, 2¼@3½c; yellow, 1¾@3c; No. 5 mixed and yellow, 4@5c; white, 2½@4¾c; No. 6 yellow 6¾c.

Offerings of cash oats remain small and the basis in the sample market was steady with No. 2 white ¾c over and No. 3 white ¼c over the December.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

Pessimism has been so pronounced and general in the trade that leading operators say that it is about time to look for a change for the better. All markets regarded as having been sold to a standstill with prices the lowest in recent years, and it is believed that depressed conditions have been fairly discounted by the present low levels. It is said that should the stock market continue to brace up for a week or more grain would readily follow. One of the large operators said it was time to quit talking about dullness and government regulations and get out and hustle for some business, and added that there would be no change in the situation until the gloomy talk ceased.

An Illinois corn feeder wired one of the largest shipping houses in Omaha yesterday for a car of corn. The reply came, "We are getting no corn in Iowa and cannot fill the order, although we have numerous stations there, but farmers are not selling corn." "Were corn traders to make a stand on the bull side of the market," said the Illinois feeder, "they might get somewhere, but so long as they continue to sell out on every indication of weakness an improved market situation is not to be expected."

Argentine government will issue its official wheat crop report on Saturday. It is expected to be bullish.

Ashley O. Jones who was expelled from the Board of Trade on Tuesday sold his membership for $7,500. Bids of $8,000 were made yesterday.

CORN IN 11 STATES REDUCED 348,000,000 BU.

Corn production in the eleven large states this year is 1,523,000,000 bu, a reduction of 6,000,000 bu from the November returns, and 348,000,000 bu from the crop of 1929 as given by the final government report. Compared with the five year average there was a loss of 408,000,000 bu. Texas is the only state that raised more corn than last year, having 5,000,000 bu above that period.

Nebraska has the second largest crop on record, practically 236,000,000 bu, or only 2,000,000 bu short of a year ago. Heaviest losses were made in the middle west, with production 22,000,000 to 74,000,000 bu short of 1929, Illinois raising 74,000,000 bu less than last year, while Iowa, the largest corn producing state, is short 70,000,000 bu from 1929 and 57,000,000 bu under the five year average. Detailed comparisons, with the last three ciphers omitted, follow:

FEEDSTUFF TRADE SLOW

A weakening in the feedstuffs situation, due to slack demand from consumers and a continued downward trend in the price levels of most other commodities is reported by the United States department of agriculture. The live stock prices are now about 18 per cent lower than at this time last year and the present return from feeding live stock has been correspondingly reduced.

SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—(AP)—SUGAR—Raw was unchanged today with refiners inclined to hold off owing to the irregularity in the futures market. Raw futures were comparatively quiet and price changes irregular. Uncertainty over the German position probably restricted operations, and had a depressing effect on sentiment generally. Sales were only 22,900 tons. Closing prices follow:

STOCKS BUBBLE UP EARLY, BUT LATER COOL OFF

General List Closes Day Higher, However.

Electric, Radio, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Westinghouse and others of pivotal classification emerged with gains of only a fraction each to show for their earlier display of strengthening.

Probably some of the enthusiasm was taken out of the bull crowd by the unanimous and unqualified denials by virtually all those concerned of the industriously circulated reports that the big bankers of the street had gotten together and decided to bolster the market in its hour of need. This rumor was afloat yesterday and was revived again today. According to its sponsors the bankers' conference was held in the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. Tuesday afternoon and lasted, some insisted, for twenty-one hours.

Didn't Agree at First.

The financiers could not agree at first on the advisability of buying stocks for support purposes, it was averred, but sometime Wednesday morning did come to a decision to lend some big scale aid. It was word of this plan, reaching the floor of the exchange, that started the big rush to cover and turned the market so buoyantly upward.

A canvass of the bankers affected on the report brought only smiles. One and all they denied all knowledge of any such conference or agreement, and most of them had no hesitancy in accounting for their movements during the time they were supposed to be in conference.

In spite of its denials, however, the report continued to find credence among the trading fraternity during the earlier hours of today and no doubt was responsible for much of the vigorous buying of the forenoon. It was a great story while it lasted and served at any rate to break the monotony of steady decline which has been under way so long.

List Closes Up, However.

In spite of the heavy profit taking in the late dealings the general list was up 1 to 4 points at the close with extreme gains ranging as high as 11 points. With the exception of the coppers, which were under penalty of a further cut in the price of the red metal, the gains extended to every department.

The outstanding performer of the day was Auburn Auto, which continued to display indications of a technical corner. Advancing moderately at the start, it rose by leaps and bounds in the early forenoon to reach 119¾, where it was up 20¾ points on the day. The skyrocket advance, however, invited a flood of realizing and it fell back finally to 112. Auburn, which bear traders were reported to have sold short in large amounts, ran up more than 10 points in Wednesday's trading.

COPPER INQUIRY BROADENS WITH PRICE NOW AT 10C

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Dec. 18.—With the price of copper metal back to 10 cents a pound, domestic, after the recent recovery to 12 cents had failed to hold, inquiry for the metal broadened today, especially by foreign buyers.

Foreign buying took a spurt and about 2,000,000 pounds were sold for export in the forenoon. Export buying was stimulated by reduction of the foreign price to 10.30 cents a pound, equivalent to 10 cents for domestic shipment. All custom smelters were offering the metal to domestic buyers at 10 cents.

Meanwhile the first effects of the decision of world producers in conference here early in November to cut down their output was reflected in November production figures of the American Bureau of Metal Statistics. World output during the month totaled 139,914 tons, compared with 152,544 tons in October, with 170,585 tons in November, 1929, and 183,813 tons in November, 1928.

For eleven months ended with November world production totaled 1,621,758 tons, a decrease of 346,919 tons from that of the comparable period last year.

SILVER SINKS STILL FURTHER; QUOTED AT 31¼C

New York, Dec. 18.—(AP)—Bar silver established a new historical low today for the second time this week, declining ⅝ of a cent to 31¼c an ounce. The previous low, established Tuesday, was 31⅝c an ounce.

Today's drop to a new low was the fourth in a little more than a week. On Tuesday of last week bar silver declined to 33c and on Friday there was a further break to 32⅛c an ounce.

Board of Trade Posts 2 Proposed Amendments

Two proposed amendments to Board of Trade rules have been posted for ballot. One provides for delivery of No. 3 corn on future contracts any month throughout the year, No. 3 yellow and white to be deliverable at 2c under the contract price. The carlot rule permitting delivery of grain on track the last three days of a maturing delivery was the other amendment posted. Recently the carlot rule was passed prohibiting grain from terminal warehouses being delivered on track.

MALCOLM D. VAIL PLANS $60,000 SUBURBAN HOME

Other North Shore Houses Contemplated.

BY AL CHASE.

Plans have been completed and work is under way on a $60,000 residence for Malcolm D. Vail on Lakewood drive, Highland Park. Lincoln Norcott is architect. The house will have fourteen rooms and five baths and a three car garage.

Several other large residences are contemplated for the north shore. Among them is a house to be erected by Leonard S. Florsheim, of 33 North La Salle street, in Highland Park, on the west side of Green Bay road, from plans by David Adler. Work may start early in the spring.

To Build in Winnetka.

Frederick Hodgdon is completing plans for a two story, twelve room residence for Charles S. McCoy, of Marshall Field & Co. This may be erected next spring on Chestnut avenue, at the intersection of Hill road, Winnetka.

The Golden Pheasant company, has leased from D. A. Schulte, Inc., the entire second floor of the building at the northeast corner of Clark and Madison, to be occupied in connection with its restaurant in the adjoining building, at 72 West Madison. The lease is for thirteen and a half years. The rental was not disclosed.

Buys 25 Flat Building.

Raymond T. Moore has purchased the twenty-five flat building at the southeast corner of 71st place and Kimbark avenue, lot 99x125, from the Chicago Title and Trust company, trustee. The price was not disclosed but the purchase was made subject to an incumbrance of $90,000.

Maurice Greiman has purchased the southeast corner of Exchange avenue and East 84th street, lot 134x93, from the Independence State bank, trustee, for an undisclosed consideration. The property is under lease and used for a gas station.
